Schools react to province with caution

Greg Hewitt

BROCKVILLE – School board officials and local school councils will wait for more detailed information from the province before they decide whether to breathe a sigh of relief over possible school closures.

The provincial government announced Friday it was backing down from a funding formula that would force school boards to decide by December 31 which schools would close, in order to get rid of surplus capacity and qualify for future maintenance and new-pupil funding. In this area, a consultant had suggested the Upper Canada District School Board consider closing Elma Public, Newington Public and Roxmore Public in Avonmore, as well as the secondary section of Rothwell-Osnabruck School in Ingleside.

The recommendations sent parent-based school councils in those four communities into battle mode, as they held emergency meetings and planned strategies to fight for their schools. And while Friday's announcement by the province is being met with some hope, all agree more details are needed before its true impact is known.

June Timmons, chair of the Upper Canada District School Board, said Monday her initial reaction to the news was that it was "wonderful," but said several conversations Monday have her holding her breath, and waiting for specific information from the province, which could take a week or two. "For that reason we are being somewhat cautious because we are not really clear on what is being amended here," Timmons said, adding there is "some reason to believe we will still have to make some difficult decisions" in the future.

Consultative meetings between school board officials and school councils, such as one planned at Tagwi Secondary Tuesday night, were canceled because of a lack of information on the latest twist. But the Upper Canada District School Board was still scheduled to meet Tuesday (Nov. 10) with the five MPPs whose ridings include the expansive Upper Canada board.

Timmons said the board will hopefully get some clarification on what Friday's announcement will mean locally, and will also indicate its concerns about the impact of school closings in rural areas.

The Upper Canada District School Board had voiced strong concerns about the short timeline given by the province, as well as the lack of

Mayors meet to talk about taxes

Greg Hewitt

METCALFE – A group of eastern Ontario mayors is banding together to form a task force aimed at getting the province to correct a "grievous error" in the new tax system that stuck many businesses with whopping increases.

Mayors whose municipalities surround the Township of Osgoode, including North Dundas, North Stormont and South Dundas, met in Metcalfe Thursday at the invitation of Osgoode Mayor Doug Thompson to exchange views about the taxation mess, and form a "task force" to explore options. The group discussed launching an appeal to the Management Board of the Provincial Cabinet, but will first find out how the recently-introduced legislation to cap

Fire chief warns public to beware of CO dangers

Greg Hewitt

CHESTERVILLE – Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odourless gas that can be produced when the fire or flame from a heating appliance is not working properly.

It quietly replaces oxygen in a room, its toxic effects beginning with fatigue, headache, nausea and dizziness. High levels of CO can result in permanent injury and death.

But there are two ways to ensure your home is safe from the dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning, says Chesterville Fire Chief Ross Casselman, and fall is the best time to take action.

Casselman is urging homeowners to have their furnaces and other fuel-burning heating appliances inspected by a certified technician or home heating expert, and to strongly consider purchasing a carbon monoxide detector for their home.

The Ontario Association of Fire Chiefs is addressing an increase in CO poisonings with a new public awareness campaign. It has assembled a committee of experts to advise people of the dangers of CO, with

Veterans emphasize the importance of remembering Canada's war legacy

Sandy Bierworth

CHESTERVILLE - "People today don't know what war was. They don't know what the cost of freedom was," says Chesterville resident John Macaulay. "The cost of freedom was one hell of a lot. It was 36,000 (Canadian) lives. You have to appreciate what those lives gave you."

It's that appreciation of those thousands of fallen soldiers that prompts Macaulay to reflect on his years of service during the Second World War.

Macaulay served in a Battalion in Montreal and joined the Black Watch Regiment, in the second division of the Calgary Highlanders. He also joined the Maisoneuves, another Montreal Regiment.

He had three brothers who also served in the war, two in the Air Force and one in the Navy aboard the HMCS Huron, a destroyer. All four returned home when the war was over.

On the day Macaulay's regiment was wiped out, he was captured and spent 10 months as a prisoner of war before being sent home.

And now, he reflects on those long, hard years in battle and hopes the memory of those who gave their lives for their country will never fade. Because some of those soldiers, he says, had been good friends of his.

"You're talking about a good 60 years ago. The memory fades," he says.

a unique formula for rural areas, whose schools serve as much more than just educational facilities, Timmons said.

And while the board will likely continue to study the facilities issue, "hopefully if the announcement meant anything, it meant we will have more time to do that effectively."

In its announcement Friday, the province said it will infuse an extra $200 million into Ontario's education system, and change the funding formula for the coming year to consider a school at 80 per cent capacity or higher to be operating at full capacity. But specific details of the plan have yet to be disclosed. The Upper Canada board, with an identified 5,206 surplus pupil places and about 500,000 square feet of surplus space, stood to lose $2.5 million in grants under the original funding formula.

Mark Prendergast, chair of the Newington Public School Council, said he too will wait for more information before any celebration takes place. The fight to save the school is still officially in motion for the time being. "We're not changing our approach, we're not doing anything different," Prendergast said, "just in case. We're going still with the thinking this is not over yet."

If indeed the province's announcement sets the issue aside for a year, that gives the school council the upper hand, Prendergast added — or "more time to rip apart the consultant's report."

Prendergast thanked Newington School Council members and other volunteers who have come aboard for the "outstanding job" they've done to date, and noted the Newington group is working alongside those in Avonmore, Berwick, Ingleside and Tagwi "because none of us wants to see any schools closed. We're working together and we're going to fight it tooth and nail, and fight it together. That's how we do it out in the country — we did it through the ice storm."

Victoria Allison, chair of the Elma Public School Council, said Monday the community's excitement over the news is tempered with caution, and said the issue won't be put on the back burner, as some questions have yet to be answered. "It will probably be on the agenda for every School Council meeting, at least an update."

Allison, who called the last two weeks "a roller coaster ride," says the school community is cautious because it has been reported some boards may be closing schools despite the province's change of heart, and the Elma School Council hadn't yet spoken with the board. She added the issue will likely be a "battleground" in the next provincial election.

Michael Mulitze, chairman of the Rothwell-Osnabruck School Council, said while the announcement sounded good, "we're going at this cautiously. We can't really make any more statements until we know all the facts and figures." The school council's anti-closure team is still in place, and "on stand-by" pending further information.

"We're just hoping things will work out in the end and schools will not have to close."

Beware CO gas, fire chief warns

the idea that increased awareness combined with the encouragement of safety measures homeowners can take is the best way to reduce the number of poisonings.

In fact, there are about 200 deaths a year in Canada caused by CO poisoning. As of November 1, it is law for all dwellings in the city of Toronto to have a carbon monoxide detector, but there is no legislation in other areas of the province including eastern Ontario.

CO detectors are more expensive than smoke detectors, with prices between $30 and $100. But Casselman says he recommends them as a means of ensuring safety against a dangerous situation.

The detectors are available at hardware and department stores. But even a CO detector is no substitute for a poorly-maintained or improperly-vented fuel-burning appliance, including furnaces, stoves and space heaters, it is noted.

Anyone with questions about the dangers of carbon monoxide should contact their local fire department or a heating technician.

Mayors join to explore taxes business tax increases at 10 per cent will affect them.

While the province's move to cap business tax hikes is welcomed by business owners, it's municipalities — who are being forced to implement the caps — who could come out on the short end of the deal, facing the real possibility of substantial borrowing to cover serious revenue shortfalls that will likely result from the tax cap scheme.

North Dundas Mayor Claude Cousineau, who attended the mayors' meeting, said he doesn't know how far the initiative will get, but said the concept was "well worth exploring." The idea, he said, is for municipalities who are in the same boat to explore the problems, and make an appeal to the province — but not to point fingers — instead, to point out the "grievous error" that came with the new tax system and work together to find ways to solve it.

Businesses were so hard-hit, Cousineau said, because while 54 per cent of local education costs were taken out of tax bills for residential classes in the services realignment exercise, they were not taken out of commercial classes. Provincial downloading, on top of that, added up to the exorbitant tax hikes businesses in eastern Ontario, and across the province, faced.

Under the proposed Fairness for Property Owners Act introduced by Ontario Finance Minister Ernie Eves Thursday, municipalities would be required to limit property tax increases to businesses to 10 per cent in 1998, and to five per cent in each of the two following years.

If the legislation passes, municipalities will have until the end of this year to choose from a number of "tools" made available by the province, including graduated tax rates, optional property classes, rebates and phase-ins. Whatever the choice, the so-called 10-5-5 limit must be respected.

Once the legislation is passed, decisions on how to accommodate the business tax cap will be made at the county level, and shifts of assessment inside the commercial and industrial classes can be done on a counties-wide level, and not just within a municipality.

North Stormont Reeve Archie Byers, who also attended the meeting, said Monday the municipalities involved will examine their own situations once the impact of the 10-5-5 legislation is known, and will then work together to find common ground. Byers noted North Stormont was particularly hard-hit by the new tax system because it has a comparatively low commercial base but a high agricultural sector.

Veterans reflect on Remembrance Day

"There were thousands upon thousands upon thousands of men that never came home. I lost a lot of friends during the war. And those friendships can never be replaced. I've never forgotten about them. You don't leave them behind just because they're dead."

Now, with education of war coming mostly from school textbooks and films, Macaulay says education is the key to keeping Remembrance Day alive.

"I think when children know more about war they appreciate their freedom a lot more," he says. "This country has made a history that is unequal. The Canadian soldiers went through a lot of rough ground and bloody water, and a lot of them never came back. Those who did come back were never the same. We were young when we went away. We left as kids and came back as men."

For Macaulay, Remembrance Day is not so much honouring the living veterans, but remembering those who never again saw the country they were trying to protect.

"I would really like to place an emphasis on peace. The purpose of the Legion is not to glorify war but to promote peace," he says. "We haven't got many veterans left to tell you the truth. There are still a lot of people in Europe and I'm afraid that within 10 years, they'll be forgotten."

In a prepared note, Macaulay addresses the importance of taking the time each year to honour those who made the ultimate sacrifice.

"As the years go by, people are apt to forget the sacrifice of so many of our youths as most of us were about 18 or 19 years old in 1939 when we joined up. Many of them are still in Europe where their graves are tended to with loving care by those we rescued as we travelled across Europe. They have more first-hand knowledge of the devastation and loss of family than we in Canada do.

That's why they show such gratitude towards veterans and the graves of veterans.

So, on this November 11th, we will remember those who have paid the supreme sacrifice but at a new Cenotaph. One that has more names on it than the previous one and one that is a tribute to those engraved upon it. It is also in the park which has been dedicated by the Royal Canadian Legion as Veterans Memorial Park.

So, as we enter a new era, we are hoping for a brighter future, a world of peace and the confidence of our fellow man to see us through the years ahead."

Remembrance Day also holds special meaning for Chesterville war veteran Jack Cross, 87. Memories, he says, he'd rather just forget.

"To go back to those years is quite a long time for me," he says. "I was in radar during the Second World War. Of course, after the war radar was pretty unpopular because it was used by police to catch speeding traffic, but during the war it was used to track enemy planes. Radar was kept secret at that time."

The reason for keeping radar such a secret during the war was because in could pick up aircraft as far as 150 miles away. Radar, which is code for radio detection and ranging, is being credited for the British victory against the Germans.

Cross was shipped to Scorton in Yorkshire, England.

"It sure does bring back memories," Cross says of Remembrance Day. "We, as a part of the ground crew of the airforce, sacrificed little. But Remembrance Day brings to us the memories of the many friends who gave their all. That was something we had to witness. I can remember one day when one of our own planes was landing.

There was a hill at one end of the runway and the plane crashed into that and broke in half. The three people at the front got out all right but the tail gunner lost his life. That's what we had to witness. That's why it's so hard to talk about it. But we must always remember those who gave the supreme sacrifice. We are proud to call ourselves veterans because we volunteered to serve our country."

Fr. Claude Thibault, Reeve Archie Byers and trustee Sebastien Goyer helped Ecole Notre Dame du Rosaire principal Paul Hurtubise celebrate the launch of the school's new Internet project Wednesday.

CAP wires Crysler to the world wide web

CRYSLER - This community officially became wired to the world last Wednesday night as its Community Access Program (CAP) was unveiled at Notre Dame de la Rosaire elementary school.

The federally-funded program provides internet access for the school and community through a $23,000 Industry Canada grant, matched by contributions from the community and the eastern Ontario separate school board, according to principal Paul Hurtubise.

Using the grant and matching funds - which included $6,500 raised through a community chocolate bar blitz - the group has purchased four IBM Pentium II computers reserved exclusively for community use and 18 new IBM computers for the school's computer lab. It is also upgrading several slower computers in the school lab and has purchased copies of word processing and graphics software.

The grant also allowed the school to purchase a satellite dish so that it could connect to the internet at a speed considerably faster than through telephone lines and funded the re-wiring of the school so that it could handle the extra demand placed on it by the upgraded computer equipment.

The school uses Bell Canada;'s Sympatico internet service, which is provided free to schools during the day.

A 10-week French-language course to train Crysler and area residents on the use of the internet and world wide web has already begun and English classes will start after Christmas, Hurtubise said. English-language instruction will be given on two computers purchased through the program and set up in the Crysler's SD&G Library branch. These courses will be offered during library hours and times will be finalized once the uncertainty surrounding the United Counties' smaller libraries has been settled.

French-language courses are offered each Monday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Cost of the 10-week program is $10 and instructors are donating at least part of their fees back to the program, which has to be self-financing by next June.

Instructors are working on setting up a web page for Notre Dame de la Rosaire and right now the school can be reached via e-mail at paulhurtubise@hotmail.com

North Dundas council notes

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor

Quarry concerns

Boundary Road resident Tony Van Gurp led a delegation before council Nov. 2 to dispute an earlier report presented by Cornwall Gravel which stated a saddle or dip in the road did not need to be fixed. The move is the latest in a 10-year controversy over a proposed quarry near the Dundas-Stormont Boundary, which was the subject of an Ontario Municipal Board hearing last summer. Van Gurp was concerned the OMB decision left room for interpretation with regard to the saddle, as well as the use of the road leading into the quarry site as a haul route. Council, which is still working on its agreement with Cornwall Gravel with regard to the road, decided to discuss Van Gurp's concerns with the township solicitor.

Schoones deputized

Councillor Martin Schoones has been selected to serve as North Dundas's deputy mayor. Schoones will represent the mayor's office when Mayor Claude Cousineau is unavailable. The township is using a revolving system of deputy mayors. Councillor Roger Cole, though, remains council's second delegate to United Counties council.

No tax extensions

North Dundas council has decided it will not enter into tax extension agreements during the year 1999. The township currently has a number of such agreements on its books, agreements which spell out a schedule of pay for property owners who are in arrears.

OPP report

Ontario Provincial Police investigated 62 occurrences in the Township of North Dundas during the month of October, Const. Gary Woodroffe told council earlier this month. Const. Woodroffe noted a few incidents of theft and assault at local public and high schools, as well as thefts from vehicles parked at social events were areas of concern. But on the positive side, Halloween was "extremely quiet" throughout the county, with just five mischief-related calls. Council commended volunteer firefighters and community watch programs for their part in making the event uneventful.

Ezard hired

Larry Ezard, a former roads superintendent with the Township of Osnabruck, has been selected as North Dundas's new working patrol foreman. Filling the position was a matter of debate at council last month, when councillor Bob Riddell suggested the township do away with the position in the spirit of amalgamation and as a cost-saving measure. After a council discussion, Riddell was satisfied the position was necessary, but he noted such discussions should take place.

Inventory time

All North Dundas departments are performing an inventory of surplus space and storage. Departments will also study their current requirements, as a means of gauging the use of township resources.

Money, not meat

Full-time employees of the Township of North Dundas will receive a $25 cash Christmas bonus, and not a voucher for a turkey. In discussing the bonus, councillor Roger Cole sparked discussion by noting Chesterville gave its employees a $25 voucher for a turkey, and suggested North Dundas consider the same. But the debate ended when Mayor Claude Cousineau asked, "what if they want a ham?"

Bridge meeting

North Dundas officials are scheduled to meet this week with Ontario Minister of Transportation Tony Clement to lobby for funds to reopen the Baldwin Bridge in the former Mountain Township. The bridge has been closed since it was deemed unsafe, and residents of the area have asked council to explore plans for refurbishing or rebuilding. But the financial scope of the project is beyond the township's means, and cannot be done without provincial help.

Road support

North Dundas council has supported a resolution from the Town of Walkerton calling on the provincial government to share gasoline taxes with municipalities. The Walkerton resolution notes gasoline taxes are designated for the maintenance of roads, and municipalities this year assumed responsibility for some roads that were previously provincial highways.

Low funds threaten Community Centre

Sandy Bierworth
Record Staff

AVONMORE - The plumbing is in need of repair, the building is in rough shape and funds are low, but the Avonmore Community Athletic Association will do what it can to ensure the Community Centre stays open.

Bonnie Surprenant, treasurer of the ACAA, said these issues were discussed at an October 22 meeting.

"Winter's coming and there isn't much in the bank," she said. "We used to get $13,000 from the township, but that was decreased two years ago. Now, we only get a $5,500 grant, which we used this year for lifeguard salaries at the pool."

To date, maintaining the community centre building has cost the committee $15,000.

"The building is in pretty rough shape," said Surprenant. "The plumbing needs to be fixed. That's the main thing. But we don't have the funds to do it. We don't want to lose what we have, so we're lobbying the township to at least repair the plumbing. Avonmore may lose its library and its school. It's not going to lose its community centre too."

Meanwhile, the association is seeking help from local youths to repair plumbing and tiles in the building.

Youths are encouraged to come out November 28 at 9 a.m. to help with repairs.

One of the suggestions discussed at the meeting involved expanding their Tuesday night bingo game at the centre into a Super Bingo, which is a 20-minute televised bingo game across eastern Ontario.

"Right now, it's just a possibility," said Surprenant. "Of course, money is an issue. It would cost a lot more to run a super bingo but it would also bring in more money too. It would increase our game because if people come for the Super Bingo, they have to stay for our own bingo after that. They can't just come for the 20 minutes and leave. It would also increase profits at the canteen because there would be more people buying food and drinks there."

Hosting a Super Bingo, Surprenant said, would probably double the crowd of about 100 the regular bingo nights are drawing.

But in order to set up a Super Bingo sight, the committee would have to apply to the Gaming Commission.

With an acceptance comes plenty of rules, including how many monitors are needed for every so many people.

"I think it's something like one monitor for every 70 people or so," she said. "We'd have to get about two or three and have them installed."

While the Super Bingo idea is still in the works, the committee is reflecting on a great year for the community pool.

"We raised a lot of money to keep things open this year, like the pool, said Surprenant. "We bought a heater for the pool this year hoping to entice more people to swim there instead of going to different towns. It also cost relatively less this year to maintain the pool than it has in other years. Because of this, the pool did keep afloat."

Also discussed at the meeting was the annual Christmas and New Year's celebrations for the town.

The village's Christmas pageant will be held at the community centre Dec. 12.

The event will feature and light lunch and local talent. Admission is $5 per person and the doors open at 6:30 p.m.

The children's Christmas party will be held Dec. 13 at 1 p.m. and will feature a visit by Santa Claus.

Planning is also under way for the village's New Year's Eve party, which this year will be open to all of North Stormont.

New elected members of the ACAA are: president, Marcelle Chenier; vice-president, Donnie McDonald; secretary and caterer, Scott McIntyre; pool coordinator, Debbie Boyle; treasurer, Bonnie Surprenant; hall manager, Mike St. Denis; sports coordinator, Blaire Henderson, bar coordinator, Rhonda Looyen and bingo coordinators Sharon and John Cole.

Anyone wishing to book the hall can contact Anne Pecore at (613) 346-5514.

We will remember them

Communities across eastern Ontario this week are pausing to recognize Remembrance Day, a solemn but important observance. Led by local branches of the Royal Canadian Legion, veterans and their families stand alongside schoolchildren and other members of the public in paying tribute to those who laid down their lives for their fellow man.

It is a sacred trust of the Royal Canadian Legion to ensure Remembrance Day is forever observed in Canada, "that those who died in service of the nation will always be remembered together with their widows and widowers." It is remembered so that "the sacrifice made by so many shall not be in vain and we shall strive to maintain unity in our nation, together with our constant endeavour to promote and maintain peace and goodwill, and friendship within our country and throughout the world, so that all citizens may be worthy of the sacrifice they made."

It is also in a remarkable scrapbook belonging to the Chesterville & District Historical Society that we find reasons to make sure Remembrance Day is never forgotten: Sgt. Harold Adam Merkley, 54th Battalion, CEF. Killed at Vimy July 19, 1918. Age 22 years. Cpl. W.B.C. Moodie, 49th Battalion, CEF. Killed at Vimy April 9th, 1917. Age 33 years. Pte. Ransom Howard Hess. Princess Patricia Light Infantry, CEF. Killed at battle of Parvillers August 13, 1918. Age 17 years. Pte. Henry Coughler 28 Battalion, CEF, Died of wounds in hospital, France, November 1, 1918. Age 33 years.

These are just a few of the names of men from eastern Ontario who made the ultimate sacrifice; who answered the call to take up arms in defence of the freedoms we as Canadians take for granted. We owe it to them, to their families and to ourselves as a nation to never forget the terrible cost of war, but also to never forget the valour with which Canadians fought in the first and second World Wars, in the Korean War, and to this day, in peacekeeping missions around the world.

We will remember them.

Off The Record

80 years of freedom and nationhood

By Robin Morris
Remembrance Editor

It was 80 years ago today that the guns fell silent in that charnel house of western Europe. The killing stopped at 11 that morning although the dying would go on for some time yet as those with the horrible wounds inflicted by their fellow man in the name of whatever God that drove them through the special hell that was World War One continued to succumb. In all, the names of over 60,000 Canadian men and women were added to the list of Allied dead in what was being called the War to End All Wars but which ended up as little more than a rehearsal for an even bloodier conflict just a generation into the future.

Sixty thousand in four years. Almost 10 per cent of the total 650,000 Canadians in the young country's armed forces. More than a third again the population of Cornwall today. A number equal to the population of Kingston. Choking away their lives in the gas in the Second Battle of Ypres, machine gunned at Vimy, blown to bloody bits at Cambrai, Passchendaele, Beaumont Hamel, Courcelette, Festubert and Givenchy.

There was no town in Canada that didn't raise a monument to its sons who either buried lay in the mud of France and Belgium or who were "known but to God", their remains never having been recovered. Canada, like all WWI combatants, had paid a terrible price for the 20 years of peace before Europe would descend into an even bloodier inferno, but the men and women of the Canadian Expeditionary Force changed this country irrevocably. Canada had gone into WWI as an adjunct of the British Empire, its troops under the British high command, officered by British tofs and dispersed throughout the Imperial army.

By 1918 it was fighting as the Canadian Corps, its four divisions the cream of the Imperial army, its battle honours as glorious as anything the exhausted British could manage. One in six men of military age had volunteered to fight in the Canadian infantry. Out of a total of 650,000 in the Canadian forces (many of whom served to the end of 1918 in British units), 239,000 had enlisted in the Canadian infantry. In 1914 Canada's professional army comprised 3,000 men. It grew 200-fold by 1918, from a country whose total population was only eight million, less than a sixth that of Great Britain.

The country's new war industries needed manpower and about 150,000, including 40,000 women, were employed. And the troops needed to be fed. The labour-intensive agricultural industry of the day needed yet more men. Canada's pool of workers was stretched to the limit not only to fight but to support the war to the point that laws were passed making unemployment a crime. "Slackers" could be rounded up and either put to work in the factories or sent to the grain fields of the west as the country mobilized itself for the first time into a single-mindedness of purpose.

Canada's amateur soldiers were apt pupils, learning quickly from the mistakes of the British, who had been weaned on Rudyard Kipling and who had failed to learn the lessons of mechanized warfare. It was one thing to send scarlet-clad regiments half way around the world to subdue the "fuzzy-wuzzies". It was quite another to face an entrenched, modern and highly mechanized army in the maelstrom of Flanders.

Canada's officers promptly became adept at planning their attacks so that casualties would be minimized - if that term could be used in WWI. Vimy was the country's first great victory, resulting from months of planning and rehearsals, and the Canadian record of victories soon began piling up. When the British failed to take Passchendaele, they called Sam Currie to send in the Canucks. Currie predicted that it would cost the CEF 16,000 casualties and when the town was taken the Canadian casualty roll contained 15,564 names. But it was a victory.

The Canadian reputation for bravery, thoroughness and efficiency soon led the British to put the CEF in a leading role and in 1918 it was the Canadians who for 47 days were the spearpoint of the Allied advance through northeastern France and into Belgium when the final breakthrough of the German lines was achieved.

In August 1918 Canadian and Australians took the city of Amiens in what German chief of staff Eric von Ludendorff called "the black day of the German army in this war". Later that month the Canadians, who by now had faced 18 German divisions, attacked the Hindenburg Line which the Germans had spent two years building. In four days they pierced it then after a week's rest they took the Drocourt-Quéant Line. On September 26 they took the Canal du Nord and on October 11 after a week's fighting they took Cambrai. Then it was Valenciennes and on into Belgium where on November 11, just hours before the guns fell silent, they retook the city of Mons, where the war had started for the British four years earlier.

In that span Canada had become an industrial nation; it accounted for 40 per cent of the pilots in the RAF, and a Canadian, William Avery Bishop, was the Allies' greatest fighter pilot. Women had earned the vote, income tax had been instituted, and Canada had moved from junior Imperial partner to a seat at the table when the Treaty of Versailles was formulated.

And it was 80 years ago today that those who remained in Flanders fields purchased not only peace, but nationhood for Canada.

A new road reality

To the editor:

The United Counties Road Department is preparing for the upcoming winter season. We face a whole new reality on who is doing what on our roads. The financing of all activities on all municipal roads within SD&G is now the sole responsibility of the property taxpayer. With the exception of 401, 417 and Hwy. 138, roads and bridges within our county are totally paid for from your property taxes. There is no provincial grant nor transfer of gasoline tax or licencing fees..

The SD&G Roads Department will put 20 plows on the road for the 1998-1999 winter. Each plow will have a 50 km route (up to 125 km round trip when turns, ramps, backtracking, etc. are factored in). It will take approximately four hours to complete one pass in good going. Those who used the pre-download County Road System will not notice any change in service; those who use the former highway will see a reduction.

SD&G operates with one crew only. There is no night shift; no weekend crew. Regular patrol hours are 7a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday to Friday. During storms, however, crews are on the road by 4 a.m. but will be pulled off by midnight. We do not attempt to start any plowing operations between 11 p.m. and 4 a.m. Weekend storms are accommodated by special call out. Is this a high enough effort? We think so. Last winter the former Hwy. 2 received this level of effort and it appeared to be accepted. If you would like a copy of the SD&G Service Standards covering the winter season and our Operating Policy, please write "Winter Policy" SD&G County Roads Department, 20 Pitts St., Cornwall, ON. K6J 3P2.

We are very good at what we do. Remember the "ice storm"? SD&G Roads were not part of the disaster; we were a key component of the solution.

For the 1998-1999 winter we have initiated a night patrol. This measure will increase our ability to respond to the unexpected storm. The truck will be on the road from 9 p.m. to-5:30 a.m.

Cross Roads

By Clarence Cross

Since this is Remembrance Day, I will draw on the wartime memories of my brother Albert. After a couple of years as a gun armourer with Lancasters in 405 Squadron in England, Albert was posted to the Second Tactical Air Force.

"We arrived in France in late August of 1944. We were not billeted in any town but were sleeping in tents. There were six guys in a tent, and you'd have your own tick and whatever you could get for straw in the grin fields to fill it with.

We had taken the train down the channel, gone across by ship and joined an existing unit that had already been there a short time. They were called the "39 RECCE Wing". Once the army unit really got moving, we couldn't have been more than 50 miles behind the front lines and we had to move up. We were on the move quite often until we got well up past Brussels, out towards Deist before we settled down for a while there. We were there for about a month, and then we went to Eindhoven.

The living was pretty rough compared to the quarters we had back in England. Everything, such as the water, had to be brought up in jerry cans from a distance. Most of the water, which wasn't really fit to drink, had to be boiled. We'd use it in tea and coffee, but the water held in the cans for a day or two before we got it wasn't very fresh. The rations we had, such as powdered eggs and porridge were absolutely horrible.

"Our unit, the RECCE 39, was basically a reconnaissance unit for the army and air force, that is taking pictures. Our aircraft went up over the front lines and photographs all the enemy emplacements such as there their guns, machine-gun nests were, where the rail supplies were coming in and anything else of interest. These pictures would be sent back afterwards to both the army and the airforce. Our particular squadron was using "Spitfires" and they were called "Bluebirds" because the had been painted blue in colour. There were two more squadrons to our wing. Another one with Spitfires and the other had Mustangs. They were armed for self protection with their orders being not to engage the enemy unless they were forced into it. Their orders were strictly to get up there as fast as you can and get back again. But the armament on them was the same as if they were fighters. They had the 50mm cannons, one on each wing and a couple of the .303s in each wing. My work was basically the same as when I was in England only on a lesser scale because we didn't have the gun turrets.

We had to move when we got to the front lines. Once they broke out around Caen, the army was going up across the balance of France and Belgium very, very fast and if we were 50 miles behind the front lines, we had to move up to at least as close as 10 miles or closer to the front lines. We were moving sometimes every other day. We moved during the daytime. We were capable of moving themselves because the units had all their own trucks and transport units. Everything we owned was moved. We had to load all our own personal equipment, all the tents and the ammunition. For anyone who needed help, we pitched in and helped them. We were all one big family so to speak. On the ground, in the armament section, we'd have about three aircraft apiece. There were about 25 aircraft in each wing, so that would be eight armourers, then there would be the corporal, the sergeant, then a flight sergeant. The other ones like the airengines and airframes, there might be two to an aircraft, that would be about 12 of them with their corporals. I would imagine that each squadron would have about 80 men or so and then there was the aircrew, which consisted only of a pilot and then a few of the executives above that. We'd have quite a little tent city consisting of probably about 50 tens. Our tents were set directly on the ground. You'd try to get a spot that was high enough that the water wasn't running into it if you could help. At that time of the year, the weather was really good and we hardly saw any rain at all. We were very fortunate at that time, which was in about late July or early August before we really got going. They were in the beach head and Falaise Gap for a couple of months.

Moving as much as we did, we didn't have very much contact with the French people in the beginning. Once we got moving through France we fond that any town we went through, the streets would be lined with people, kids and older people basically, waving flags and cheering. We wouldn't stop and kept on going through. Maybe when we got our tents pitched, we might see some of the French people, but not many to speak to. We didn't get a chance to get into the villages or anything like that. There was always a few guys who were able to scrape up something different to eat when they go out into the countryside. They might find the odd chicken, eggs or something but not very much. Our lads would trade cigarettes or chocolate bars which were a real treat to the French and the fresh food was worth a lot to us.

In the countryside, once we got away from the beach head the Falaise Gap, there wasn't very much damage visible unless you came to a fair sized town where there were railways going through. If there wasn't, you could be sure that any place that the railways went, such as railroad bridges across the rivers, would have been bombed. Now when we got up to one of the fairly good sized cities, Lille, there didn't seem to be any damage at all. I thought that this city had not been touched at all. Then suddenly we came to a band a couple of miles or so wide where the marshalling yards for the trains were. Everything has been flattened and there wasn't anything left all. Lille is a good sized city and it's not very far from the Belgian border.

As far as problem along the way, we didn't have any contact with the Germans at all. Maybe you'd hear gunfire in the dances but I don't remember ever getting a real scare from any of their aircraft when we were moving. I think our air force kept them on their own side of the fence, so to speak. As we were moving through the countryside in Belgium, there were a lot of fields of grain that had been cut. In fact, there was where everybody was getting a fresh supply of straw to put in their "ticks", which were large bags that you fill and place a ground sheet underneath to keep the moisture away. That's fine in good weather.

We pretty well bypassed the better part of Brussels, although we did go through the suburbs. There were wild celebrations throughout Belgium, more so than in France. I don't know if it was because there were more people in Belgium at that time. It was really something to see the people almost going crazy because they were so happy. We never really to a chance to stop for the celebrations, and kept on the move steadily until we got to Deist. On one weekend when we did get to Deist, three or four of us went into Brussels together. Everybody had turns at this. We were in there overnight. Even though there were not hostels for us, we had no trouble finding a place to stay. The people were so glad to see you, you'd get an offer almost anywhere. "Come and stay at our place tonight." It was amazing how many people could speak English. If they couldn't, they'd find someone who could translate for them.

On the continent there were very, very few French speaking people, in our particular wing anyway. We didn't have anyone who could translate for us and although there were a few who were slightly bilingual, there certainly wasn't anyone who was French.

Deist is in Belgium a few miles from the Dutch border. I was in Deist for about a month because at that time, the Canadian army's job was to clean up all along the coast, the coastal ports, cities and towns and they were running into quite a bit of opposition. They weren't making very good time. Anything over the Rhine River, of course, was all German. We were more or less waiting for that. When they did drop the paratroopers up at Arnhem, that was the time when we went up into Eindhoven. This was just over the border into Holland. The army had a lot of difficulty at Arnhem and was thrown back. This didn't affect us although we kept hearing about it. Actually, Arnhem wasn't quite as bad a Neimegen, which is where they got kicked up badly and they lost a lot of men. They had dropped paratroopers in there and they got stranded. Our army couldn't get to them. We weren't getting very much in the line of news of what was going on at the front. All the way along and we were trusting that everything would be okay as we moved up. All we would get came from the NCSs or officers and that they knew. We only had a general idea of what was going on.

Ontario Hydro representative Ken Summers watched a Grade 7 class at Maple Ridge Senior Public School plant the 50 trees given by the power company as part of its Project ReGeneration. Teacher Corinne Cote supervised the planting project while students Scott Smail, Travis Leach and Tommy Wheeler plant a seedling on the schoolground.

Hydro gives school 50 trees through Project ReGeneration

MAPLE RIDGE - About 25 Grade 7 students at Maple Ridge Senior Public School put down their bookbags in favour of shovels and buckets Monday morning to plant the 50 young trees courtesy of Ontario Hydro.

The seedlings are among the 3,000 trees Hydro is giving to selected sites in eastern Ontario as part of its Project ReGeneration. Each tree represents one of the Hydro workers who devoted so much time and energy during January's ice storm to restore power to the area.

Project ReGeneration is organized in conjunction with the Evergreen Foundation and is aimed at replacing some of the thousands of trees that were destroyed in the historic storm. According to Ontario Hydro, forest researchers estimate that forest mortality rates will reach between 10 and 35 per cent in some areas and that approximately 70 per cent of all trees in the Ottawa-Kingston corridor were damaged.

Hydro invited schools, community groups and the public to submit applications for the trees. More than 60 groups were selected by Hydro and the Evergreen Foundation. Sites for the project included school grounds, parks, roadsides and river banks.

Ken Summers, Distribution Superintendent for Ontario Hydro in Winchester, said the project is Hydro's way of giving back to the community after January's ice storm ravaged many of the area's trees.

"It's nice to contribute something back," he said. "We're trying to restore some of the trees that were damaged during the ice storm. A lot of trees have to be planted to replace the ones that were lost. It takes a lot of cooperation."

Among the trees now planted on the school's ground are 23 cedar, seven spruce, 10 ash and 10 soft maples.

Teacher Corinne Cote headed the troop of tree planters, breaking up the class into groups of three or four and giving each student a specific duty, such as scraper, waterer or digger.

"This is part of our Schoolyard Naturalization Program," said Cote, who applied for the trees five weeks ago after learning of the project.

"We had to send a letter to Hydro saying why we need 50 trees. Actually, I originally applied for 300 trees, but now I'm kind of glad we only got 50. I don't know what I'd do with 300," she jokes. "We picked up the trees last Wednesday and dug the holes in the schoolyard on Saturday. That was done by volunteer work thanks to Mark Wheeler and Mike Morrin. The schoolyard was built on an old rock quarry so it's hard to plant. They brought the Hydro truck down and dug holes three feet deep."

The planting project was part of the class's science lesson, Cote said. And while the students will have to dodge the seedlings for the first few years, children attending the school 20 or 30 years down the road will appreciate their contribution.

"Up to now, there were no trees on the schooolyard, so we didn't lose any during the ice storm," Cote said. "But that also means there's no windbreak, no shade for the students and no wildlife close by. I think this naturalization project is really important for the school. When the trees get bigger, they're going to have a lot of benefits for the schoolyard."

Legion News Branch 434

This is the busiest time of the year for the Legion and its members because of all the activities which occur during the first-half of the month.

First, on behalf of the Chesterville Legion, I want to thank Reg Murphy for the wonderful job he did on the plaques for the Cenotaph in Morewood. With the plaques cleaned and polished it is amazing how well you can read what is on them.

Second, I want to thank Shirley Coons and Bernie Curran for the outstanding display for the "Veterans' Dinner and Dance". A lot of work went into this and everyone who took time and read the names on the two plaques and the newspaper clippers were overwhelmed. They also made the crosses that were placed on each table. Again I want to thank the two for a job well done. Everyone was impressed.

The Veterans' Dinner and Dance which was held on Sat., Nov. 7 was a total success, which was due to the hard work of some members of the Legion and the Ladies Auxillary. The short time they had to do the hall after bingo, the hall looked wonderful and everyone who attended the occasion commented on how well the hall was decorated. The meal was also great and everyone enjoyed it. Our thanks go out to the caterers Terry and Colleen Read who did a marvelous job, and the Ladies Auxillary who assisted them. All I can say is that everything went well.

On Sun., Nov. 8, the Remembrance Day Ceremony was held in Chesterville and was very well attended by Legion members, Girl Guides, Brownies, Sparks, Scouts, Cubs and Beavers. I want to thank Donna Whitehead and her volunteers who assisted with the wreaths. With this help it made the ceremony a success.

Monday night several members were invited to attended the Rotary Remembrance Day Ceremony and as usual were treated to a very good evening.

On Wed., the Legion again was involved with the Remembrance Day ceremony in Morewood. Everything started at the Morewood Public School with their ceremony for the school children, then the children from Grades 2 to 6, along with the Legion members and military personal marched to the cenotaph where the wreath laying ceremony was held at 11am. After the ceremony was completed, everyone was invited to the Morewood Recreation Centre where a light lunch was served.

The people who put the Remembrance Day display in the window at the Chesterville Record should be congratulated for a job well done.

On Fri., Nov. 13, the bar will be open from 12noon-12pm with live entertainment provided by "Michelle". She was well received the last time, so let's come out and show her that the people in Chesterville enjoy her music. This Friday will be the last Friday that the barbecue chicken will be available, as the weather isn't getting any warmer, so for an entertaining evening of music and a barbecue chicken supper, you can come to the Legion and relax.

The next general meeting will be held on Mon., Nov. 16 at 8pm. There will be some interesting topics discussed and to express your opinion on these topics you should attend and not rely on someone else for the information. After all, this is your Legion and you do have a say in the direction which we go.

With only a few tickets left on the handmade quilt, the quilt will be on display at the Morewood Craft Sale on Fri., Nov. 20 from 6:30-9pm and Sat., Nov. 21 from 10am-4pm. The only way to win the quilt is by having a ticket. They are only $1 each or three for $2.

The 1999 Membership Cards are available from Gord Machardie 448,1050, Randy Leclair 448-2970, or at the Legion. Due to the increase in per capita taxes over the next two years it was necessary to raise the dues as have all other Legions across Canada. This year all members pay their dues.

Over the past year there has been lots of talk going on about the Legion and the people in it. The big problem is the ones doing the talking are members and they are not only hurting the ones trying to run the Legion but themselves as members and the Branch also. If these people want to come to the hall and air their problems, I will sit down anytime and listen, and maybe we can work out a solution. But until this is done, the rumbling will continue and everyone suffers.

- Vern Williamson, President, Branch 434

School council grateful for help in recent rally

To the editor:

Somebody, somewhere owes a lot of people an apology, or at the very least a good explanation. Parents and students of the public school system went on a roller coaster ride.

Our excitement at Elma Public School is tempered by caution of the news there will be no school closures.

We are not putting this issue on the "back burner," there are a lot of unanswered questions. Our school council and the parents, friends and community members have worked tremendously hard in saving our school.

We will continue to fight to keep our school open.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone for all their support and input given toward saving our school.

Together we stand, divided we fall. On behalf of the Elma Public School Council, I extend my sincere thanks.

Marilyn Johnson, of Ye Olde Bargain Shoppe in Chesterville, gave a cheque for $500 to Happy Face Nursery School president Leslie Johnson to help with school supplies and expenses. Nursery school students Kathryn Johnson, 3, Natalie Williams, 5, and Amanda Prusila, 3 were on hand to watch the donation while Ashley Johnson, 15 months, in Leslie's arms, looks on. Ashley will be a student at the school next year.

Young Travis needs your help

OTTAWA- If you've missed your chance to donate in Travis' name, than this is the opportunity to help one of Winchester's own. Normally, Canadian Blood Services counts on the strong community support to collect one of the region's largest amount of units during a single clinic. A significant increase in platelet use, of which Travis counts on, makes the Winchester clinic extra important.

At present time, Travis, a Winchester native, continues to need your support as he proceeds through his battle with leukemia. The program is really counting on Winchester to provide a full booked clinic so that they might replenish the platelet supply. This will ensure that Travis will not have to wait for the platelets that are so vital to his treatment.

"Essentially, we deplete the platelet stock every single day, at times to the point where we have zero units as we begin the day", said Phil Taylor, communications officer. "This is a situation that is not conducive to the well being of patients across the region, and specifically to Travis' needs. While we have been able to provide them with the units requested, we were not able to deliver them as quickly as the product was needed. So, at this point, we're trying to catch up to the demand." Mr. Taylor continued, stating that "it's also important to realize that there are many unpublicized cases that also require blood and blood products, and the need is ongoing."

Nancy Lusk, clinic coordinator for Winchester, said that "we're really happy that Winchester is in our schedule during this difficult time, because support from Winchester is usually excellent. However, Mrs. Lusk also added that "with the platelet situation, we must have a 100 per cent full booked clinic if we are to replenish the platelet supply, So, in a sense, it's Travis and other patients just like him that really need Winchester's help."

Generally, the Winchester clinic collects approximately 200 units per clinic, which the Blood Services Program defines as a large, full-size clinic. In order for the program to collect 100 per cent of target, they will require 235 donors to walk through the door. Currently, there are 40 appointments remaining. Donors can call 1-800-264-0680 to make their appointment.

Mrs. Luck also offered that "we, and Travis, need all the Winchester blood donors to show their well-documented civic pride."

More information about the ride will be published closer to the date.

Man pinned by truck not seriously injured

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor

CHESTERVILLE – A Chesterville man was taken to hospital in Winchester with minor injuries late Monday morning after he was pinned to the ground by a pickup truck on which he was working. The accident happened after the truck apparently rolled forward off a set of ramps.

The Chesterville Volunteer Fire Department was called to the Riverside Drive residence around 11:45 a.m. Monday. Firefighters hoisted the vehicle to allow ambulance crews to remove the man and transport him to hospital.

Chesterville Fire Chief Ross Casselman said the man, identified as William Rae, 58, was conscious and talking to emergency crews while he was pinned by what appeared to be the truck's front axle.

Upper Canada OPP said Rae did not sustain serious injuries in the incident.

Coincidentally, the Chesterville Fire Department was on its way to another call shortly after the Riverside Drive incident. Firefighters responded to a call at the LCBO outlet on Queen Street, where the motor of a bathroom fan had apparently overheated, resulting in smoke and a burnt smell, but nothing more.

The department unhooked and removed the unit.

Taxpayers behave at information session

Greg Hewitt
Record Editor

WINCHESTER – North Dundas's taxpayers had their chance Thursday night to hear it straight from the horse's mouth. About 150 people listened to Regional Assessor Mike Tremblay a explain the nuts and bolts of Ontario's new tax system, and answer general questions about the current value assessment system.

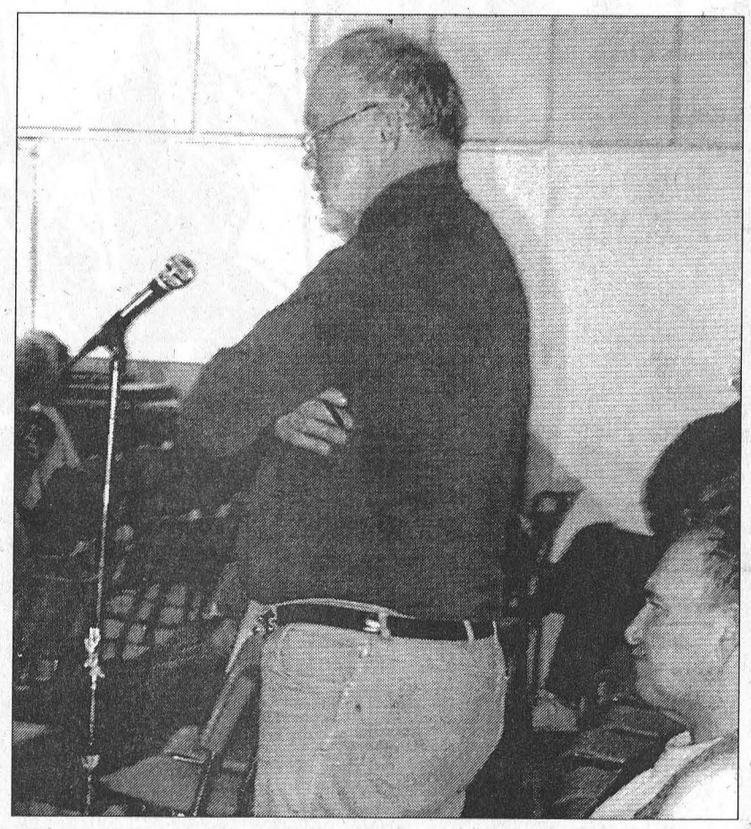
The meeting was called in response to an outcry from taxpayers after the final 1998 tax bill contained nasty increases, especially for business owners, some of whom had hikes up to 400 per cent. It followed similar meetings in North Stormont and other eastern Ontario municipalities.

While there were a few pointed questions, the meeting was a rather tame affair, likely because of the province's proposal to cap business tax increases at 10 per cent this year and five per cent in the next two years. In fact, North Dundas Mayor Claude Cousineau congratulated the crowd for its orderly manner.

"The ten-five-and-five saved our bacon tonight, maybe," he said, adding though the township will have to pick up those costs somewhere along the line. Cousineau also joined at least one taxpayer in congratulating the township's administrative staff for the way they've handled the confusion of the tax issue.

Tremblay explained that since 1967, a number of reports have indicated a current market value system of assessment should be introduced in Ontario, so there would be equity in taxation across the province. He noted even properties in the four municipalities that became North Dundas were being assessed based on a variety of years. With the new system, all properties in North Dundas — and across Ontario — are now assessed based on their value as of June 30, 1996.

As far as launching an appeal, Tremblay explained the process but issued a number of warnings — most importantly that an appeal must be in writing and must contain facts about the assessment. "Don't just tell me your taxes are too high." As long as there is equity and accuracy in assessment, it stands. Tremblay noted it's not the tax bill that's appealed, just the assessment.



North Dundas taxpayer Dwaine Holmes waits for answers at a taxation information session Thursday in Winchester. About 150 people attended.

While the August 31 deadline for an assessment reconsideration or appeal has passed, a proposal to extend that deadline to December 31 is in the works at the provincial level. Forms are available at municipal offices. Tremblay did note that assessment notices were mailed to North Dundas residents Feb. 4 this year, and one-on-one sessions with an assessor were available March 19 and 20 in Winchester. The sessions attracted only 156 people, representing only about three per cent of the township's property owners.

Tremblay also explained the Business Occupancy Tax, drafted in 1904, was scrapped because businesses are more transient than in the past. The United Counties of SD&G, in picking a number of "tools" made available by the province, chose a scenario in which a landlord pays the tax increase but can levy part of the increase back to tenant businesses. The counties also chose a scenario under which assessment shifted toward the large industry class in this year, because other scenarios available — such as shopping malls — didn't suit the property demographics. Assessment will shift back toward residential classes in coming years until assessments are almost equal among all classes.

Tremblay described the method used by the assessment office to determine values, and North Dundas treasurer Bonnie Dingwall explained the municipality's 1998 budget, and how it fits in with the overall property tax bill. She noted North Dundas collected $2,368,053 for its own purposes this year, only 24 per cent of the total levy. School boards took 40 per cent and the United Counties 35 per cent of the overall tax bill.

Taxpayer Dwaine Holmes, a former Winchester Township councillor, asked why council hadn't done more to fight the provincial downloading that is so prominent in this tax issue. Mayor Cousineau replied that North Dundas joined other SD&G municipalities and in fact municipalities across Ontario in lobbying for fairness in the services realignment exercise. But the province's Who Does What panel, which studied the realignment, "led us down the garden path," Cousineau said. "Everyone promised it would be revenue-neutral."

Holmes, noting provincial ad campaigns blaming hospital workers for health care costs and teachers and school boards for education costs, asked the ministry representatives "when can we expect ads on TV blaming municipalities for the increase in taxes." He received a modest round of applause for the comment.

Chesterville businessman Wayne LaPrade said while he had found assessment office staff generally helpful, he was never informed he could bill part of his increase to business tenants. "It's up to me to do everything," he complained, adding it was only his persistence that got him an answer. "I don't feel that's fair. Somebody somewhere should have been able to help me a lot faster."

Tremblay agreed changes to the tax system were made quickly, but said his office doesn't have the "financial means" to send letters to all business owners. That's why, he said, such forums are being held. He also said in the future he will try to make businesses aware of changes through chambers of commerce.

Township taxpayer Martin Derks asked if business owners who receive rebates if the province's tax cap is introduced will be "getting that back with 15-per-cent interest as you charge me."

Cousineau agreed paying some amount of interest would be fair, but said the matter hadn't yet been addressed by the township.

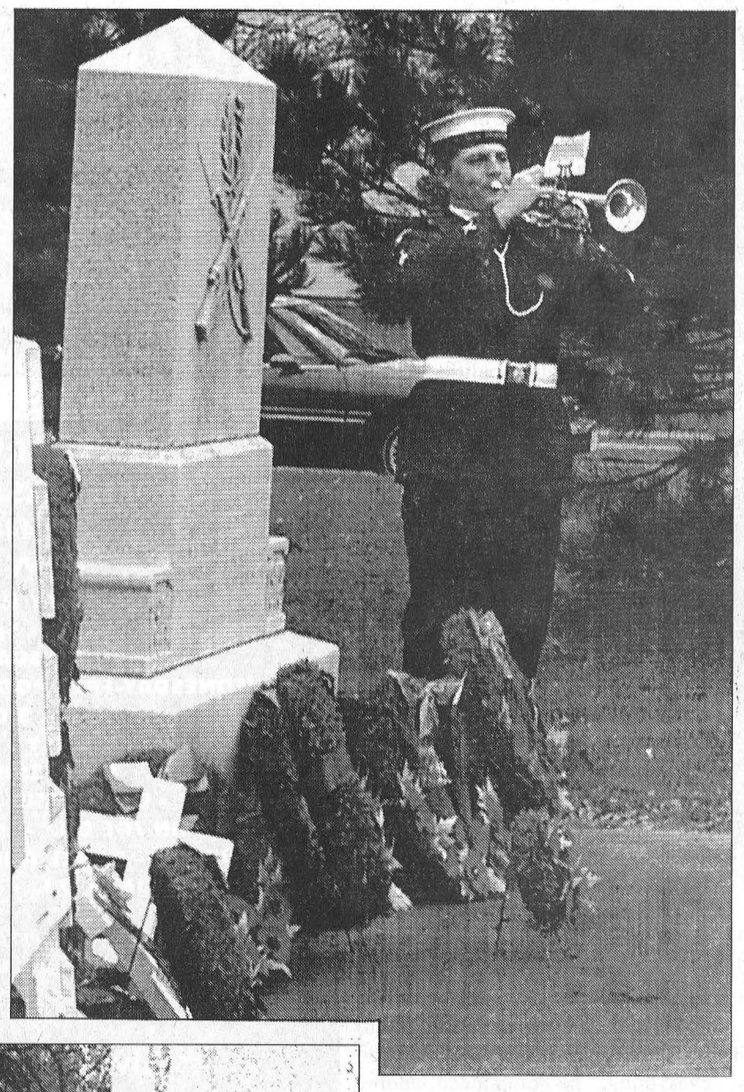
A tribute to those who laid down their lives



Left, the Last Post is played at Ingleside's Remembrance Day wreath-laying ceremony at the cenotaph. Above, a war veteran marches through the colour party to lay a wreath. The service was held at the Trinity United Church Sunday. Another service was held shortly afterward at Long Sault, followed by a luncheon at the Long Sault Legion.

There are not to many left who can truly remember the horrors of war. But local veterans who had seen their comrades fall gathered at the Chesterville cenotaph Sunday to honour those who made the ultimate sacrifice. Several residents and representatives of local schools and businesses paid tribute to the fallen as well. At left, a veteran lays down a wreath as a symbol of his appreciation for the freedom the soldiers fought for. Below, veterans studied the names on the cenotaph as a moment of silence was recognized.

Seniors' group takes helping hands event to heart

At the Nov. 4 monthly meeting in Matilda Hall of the "Helping Hands" seniors group, president Joan Zandbergen introduced guest speaker Barbara Sheridan, from the Dundas County Chapter of the Heart and Stroke Foundation. November being CPR awareness month, Barbara, the representative for Dundas County, spoke and showed short films on how to revive a victim using CPR, and the symptoms and causes of heart attacks and strokes.

A spirited question and answer session followed the presentation to the 60 seniors present. Joan's group has met monthly for 26 years, even those who have moved returning from as far away as Montreal. Socializing, craft sales, games, guest speakers, and a pot-luck meal keep the members coming back.

Barbara indicated that with increased awareness of the causes and symptoms of heart attacks and strokes, the survival rate from the attacks in the last 20 years improved by 50 per cent. With the increasing numbers in the senior population, a knowledge of CPR and of what to do in the event of a crisis become even more important in our society. The guest speaker, a senior herself, drew laughter and applause form her audience with the comment that "they aren't making women like they used to". Mrs. Sheridan was referring to the increasing problem of strokes and heart attacks among women. She reminded listeners that two-thirds of the funding for research comes from fundraisers, and invited members to be generous with donations when the canvasser calls.

In thanking the speaker, Joan Zandbergen noted that the question had demonstrated the listeners' interest in this vital topic, and hoped that the information could be useful in maintaining seniors' health.

IN MEMORIAM

LAJOIE - In loving memory of our dear Mom and Gramma, Tena, who passed away Nov. 15, 1997.
They say that time heals,
But I don't think that's so,
It hurt as much today,
As it did a year ago.
I know there's no pain, Mom,
I am so happy for that.
I know you're still with us
I thank heaven for that.
You're loved and missed daily
I am proud to say,
Until we meet again, Mom
It will always be that way.
Love always
—Bob, Barry, Megan, Donna, Eric, Ryan and Mark
14

DUCOLON, THOMAS - In loving memory of husband and father who passed away Nov. 15, 1995.
We who loved you, sadly miss you
As it dawns another year.
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of you are ever near.
—Wife Audrey and family
14

MCMILLAN - In memory of Duncan G. McMillan, who passed away Nov. 12, 1988.
Till memory fades and life departs,
You live forever in our hearts.
—Love, the family

Hawks win at home to get interlocking split

BROCKVILLE - The Winchester Hawks went one for two against Rideau Division opponents last week, giving up two third-period goals, including one into an empty net, in Brockville last Wednesday night as they dropped a 6-4 decision to the Tikis. They bounced back on their own ice Friday night to edge the Westport Rideaus 4-3 to maintain their one-point lead over the Kemptville 73s in the St. Lawrence Division standings.

Tikis 6 - Hawks 4

Winchester's Brad McKibbon and Brockville's Avery Flanagan traded first-period goals last Wednesday night and each team scored three in the second to go into the final 20 minutes tied at four.

The Hawks, who had two goals called back, scored two of their three in the second on the power play. Serge Bellevance got the first extra-man goal from Sylvain Favreau and Ryan Nichol got the first of his pair on the night on the power play from Shane Stroughair and Jeff Leonard, who combined to set up Nichol's even-strength goal with 2:25 left in the period.

Adam Andreccyk, James Thomas and Flanagan countered for the Tikis.

Jason Kelley put Brockville ahead 1:25 into the third and Flanagan got his third of the night into the empty net with 41 seconds to go.

Hawks 4 - Rideaus 3

The line of Favreau, Bellevance and Oliver DeMeester combined for three goals and six assists and Nichol got the winner unassisted Friday night.

The teams played to a 2-2 draw through the first 20 minutes, Favreau and DeMeester scoring for the Hawks, and Winchester took a 3-2 lead into the third on Bellevance's goal at 15:22 of the second.

Derek Merkley tied it for Westport at 17:00 of the final period only to have Nichol get the winner 1:39 later.

This Week

This Friday night the Hawks host the Athens Aeros in an 8:15 start and on Sunday they are in Cardinal to take on the South Grenville Rangers at 7:30.

Long Sault goaltender Julian Oetelaar gets a leg out to block this close-in shot from the Rockland Nationals' Nicolas Ranger during first period action in their Saturday night EOJCHL game. Ranger later found the range as the Nats built a 4-1 lead in the first period on their way to a 7-4 win. The loss dropped the Vipers out of a tie for fifth and into lone possession of sixth and last place. This Saturday night they host the Embrun/Russell River Rats in an 8:15 p.m. game.

Bantam Demons rally

CHESTERVILLE – The North Dundas Bantam C Demons scored three goals in the second period to overcome a 3-0 deficit and then pumped in a pair to edge visiting Brockville 5-4 here Nov. 8.

Sunday's win helped take the sting out of a 4-1 loss in Morrisburg Nov. 5.

Demons 5 - Brockville 4

Brockville grabbed a 1-0 lead with 2:48 left in the first period scored a pair in a two-minute span in the second to go ahead 3-0 before Justin Morozuk broke the ice for the Demons at 6:58. Spencer Dawson brought them to within one at 4:01, scoring from Fady Mahfouz, and Rory Clements knotted the score with 1:12 left in the period. Spratt and captain Aaron Kelly had the assists.

Ryan Irwin put the Demons ahead for the first time in the game at 12:48 of the third while Brockville's David McGill was serving a minor.

Brockville came back to tie it at 8:46 but Brett Bird got the winner just over two minutes later on a set-up from Clements and Morozuk.

Morrisburg 4 - ND 1

Kelly was the only Demon to get one past Morrisburg netminder Dustin Fernell last Thursday night, his goal coming at 5:20 of the second after Morrisburg had gone out front 3-0.

No late game heroics in Vipers' loss to Nats

LONG SAULT - There was no late-game rally here Saturday night as the Vipers trailed 5-1 after one and ended up on the short end of a 7-4 score against the Rockland Nationals in Eastern Ontario Junior C Hockey League action.

The loss was the Vipers' seventh in nine games and came a week after they had posted their first two victories of the season, including a dramatic come-from-behind win over the St. Isidore Eagles when they rallied from a five-goal deficit in the third to win in a shootout.

But it wasn't to be Saturday night as the dropped back into sixth place following the Russell-Embrun River Rats' win over the Casselman Stars Friday night in Embrun.

The Vipers dug themselves a hole in the first that they couldn't get out of, playing some of the sloppiest hockey the team has exhibited so far in the young EOJCHL season.

And the fast-skating Nats are the wrong team to get sloppy against as they pounced on Long Sault errors to build a 4-0 lead on a pair of goals by Dominic Brazeau, Frank Cyr and Nicolas Ranger before Trevor Wotherspoon scored from Greg Rombough and captain Jason Prieur with under four minutes to go in the first.

Captain Chrstian Groleau got that one back on a Rockland power play with 57 seconds left in the period as the Nats built an insurmountable lead.

The Vipers outplayed them the rest of the way but couldn't overcome the obstacle they had placed in their path through the first 20 minutes.

Prieur got Long Sault's second of the game at 9:51 of the second, unassisted, and Lee Charlebois brought the Vipers to within two when he scored on the power play less than a minute later, from Wotherspoon and Pascal Decoeur, but affiliated player Luc Lalonde put the Nats back up by three when he scored at 12:11.

The teams traded goals in the third, Jason Leduc getting Long Sault's fourth, from Wotherspoon and Decoeur, and Rockland getting its seventh off the stick of J.F. Thibault.

The Vipers took 17 of the game's 32 penalties

This Week

This Saturday night the Vipers host the River Rats in an 8:15 p.m. game and on Sunday they're in Rockland. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Aces back in first place, Sault pulls into 2nd-place tie

FINCH - The Avonmore Aces are back in first place in the North Stormont Intermediate Hockey League after they hammered the Cornwall Gators 14-3 here Friday night.

Berwick, which had taken a one-point lead over the Aces in the league standings the week before, dropped into a tie for second with Long Sault after absorbing a 5-4 loss to Grumpy's Sports Bar Friday night. They're a point back of the Aces.

Long Sault picked up its second of the weekend Sunday night when the Gators forfeited their game.

Aces 14 - Gators 3

Avonmore took an 8-2 lead out of the first period on three goals by Kevin Poapst, a pair each by Kent Young and Steve Carter and a single by Steve Stewart.

Cornwall, with only seven skaters in front of Andy Berton, got goals from Denis St. Jean and Randy Jodoin.

The Aces kept up the onslaught in the second, this time led by Yvon Besner, who scored three goals to go along with a pair by Carter and Young's third of the game.

Besner had three assists to go along with his hat trick as did Poapst.

Dan Laplante got Cornwall's third goal to go along with his two assists.

Grumpy's 6 - Bull Dogs 4

Long Sault got three in each period to record the win Friday night.

Kevin Lalonde scored a pair in the first and Esdale got scored with 7:21 left in the period to erase a short-lived 2-1 Berwick lead on goals by Dale Murray and Kevin Villeneuve.

In the second, it was Dave Duprau, Jeff Gowsell and Andrew Barrie scoring for Long Sault and Mike Stewart and Brad Quaile replying for the Bull dogs.

Long Sault lost the services of Mike Donnelly at 16:34 of the first when he was given an unsportsmanlike minor, misconduct and game misconduct in the wake of Murray's goal.

Long Sault 1 - Cornwall 0

Chris Villeneuve was given credit for the goal in Long Sault's forfeit win Sunday.

This Week

This Friday night it's Berwick versus Cornwall in the early game and Avonmore against Long Sault in the nightcap. On Sunday night it's Cornwall versus Avonmore.

Rec Rambles

North Dundas getting greener

By Matt Krisjanis
ND Recreation Director

Hi sports fans! Well, Halloween is no more over than Christmas promotions start. We do push the festive season on us, don't we? Now I have this stressed time in my life, again, when I have to start thinking about what kind of presents I have to buy. Oh well, MAC's milk is now open 24 hours so that takes away some strain.

The Mountain Park Recreation Association is once again on the move. After the meeting on Mon., Nov. 9, a new executive was elected, ideas for generating activities were discussed, and community spirit was high. Way to go Mountain, I know you'll make it work.

The Village of Chesterville has a new committee in town. It's the Greening Committee and they would like to improve their town by providing more trees and leisure areas for their residents. Don't be shy, get involved, you might have some ideas they could use.

Speaking of greening, the green group in Winchester has added another 18 trees to the village, thus bringing Phase I closer to completion. Excellent job sports fans, keep up the good work.

On Tues., Nov. 17 the North Dundas Recreation Association will be holding their monthly meeting at the Winchester Arena. Start time is 7pm and all recreation association representatives are asked to attend.

If you are thinking of putting in a float for the Parade of Lights, call John at 774-2515. It's loads of fun.

The Winchester Jr. "B" Hawks will be hosting Athens this Fri., Nov. 13 at the Winchester Arena. Game time is 8:15pm. Go, Hawks, Go.

Well, that's all for this week, so here's my thought for the week: "Never grow a wishbone where your backbone ought to be."

Bantam B Demons continue to flex muscles

CHESTERVILLE - The North Dundas Bantam B Demons scored another pair of lopsided victories in Upper Canada Minor Hockey League east division play last week, hammering Akwesasne 15-2 here Nov. 3, blanking the South Stormont Selects 11-0 in Long Sault Thurs., Nov. 5 before being held to a tie in Char-Lan Monday night..

Bill McRoberts led the assault in Chesterville last Tuesday, scoring four goals as the Demons built period leads of 6-0 and 12-1 and two nights later McRoberts was the team's play maker with five assists and a goal as ND led 3-0 after one and 8-0 after two. In all, McRoberts picked up 13 points in the two games.

Stefan Gravelle had four goals and two assists against Akwesasne; Dave Gallant had a pair of goals to go with five assists; captain Danny Wilson has a hat trick and a pair of helpers; Kelly Beckstead had two goals and three assists, and Nik Paas had three assists, as did Josh McLean.

The Demons jumped on the visitors early, building a 3-0 lead before the game was four minutes old and scoring a pair of power play goals, by Gallant and Gravelle, in the final 1:05 of the first.

North Dundas had five extra-man goals in the game.

Demons 11 - Selects 0

The Demons struck quickly again two nights later, building a 2-0 lead in the first three minutes of the game with Wilson getting the first of his pair only 21 seconds into the match and Gallant getting the first of his three less than two minutes later.

Beckstead made it 3-0 with 6:10 to go in the period.

The Demons were relentless in the second, getting three goals in a 28-second span after Kris Blais had made it 4-0 at 8:05.

Paas scored unassisted at 6:52, Gallant got his second of the game at 6:31 and McLean made it 7-0 at 6:23. Baldwin got the first of his pair to up it to 8-0 before the period ended.

In the third it was McRoberts, Baldwin and Gallant.

ND 3 - Char-Lan 3

Paas got his second goal of the game with 2:05 remaining to pull the Demons into the tie Monday night in Williamstown.

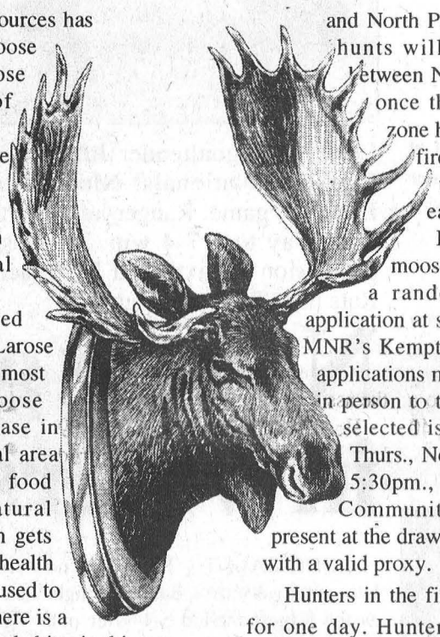
His goal came 1:40 after captain Nicholas Buckle had given Char-Lan the lead with an unassisted goal.

Power plays loomed large in the game, each team scoring a pair.

Paas got his first goal with the man advantage 2:44 into the game, from Wilson and Beckstead but Char-Lan came up with a power play goal of their own just under five minutes later as the teams changed ends tied at one.

Char-Lan went ahead 1:16 into the second but Gravelle came back for the Demons on the power play with 3:03 left in the frame. Paas and Beckstead had the assists.

MNR announces three moose hunts for Larose



The Ministry of Natural Resources has announced three controlled moose hunts for this fall in the Larose Forest, 40 kilometres east of Ottawa.

"These hunts will help ensure the long-term health of the moose population in this area," said Daryl Seip, a biologist with the Ministry of Natural Resources in Kemptville.

This is the seventh controlled moose hunt to be held in the Larose Forest in the last 20 years. The most recent was in 1997. The moose population continues to increase in this predominantly agricultural area due to mild winters, abundant food and the absence of any natural predators. When the population gets too large, mange sets in and the health of the herd declines. Hunting is used to manage the size of the herd as there is a limited amount of suitable moose habitat in this area.

There will be three separate hunts: a firearms hunt in the main block of the Larose Forest, and two archery-only hunts in each of the South Plantagenet and North Plantagenet Township blocks. All hunts will occur over a 12-day period between Nov. 23 and Dec. 4, and will end once the moose harvest limit in each zone has been reached. The limit in the firearms area is 45 moose, and, in the archery-only area, 10 for each zone.

Hunters holding a valid 1998 moose hunting licence may apply for a random draw by picking up an application at selected locations in the area and MNR's Kemptville District Office. Completed applications must be mailed, faxed, or brought in person to the Kemptville District Office or selected issuers by 4:30pm local time on Thurs., Nov. 12. The draw will be held at 5:30pm., Mon., Nov. 16, at the Bourget Community Centre. Applicants must be present at the draw or have a representative on hand with a valid proxy.

Hunters in the firearms area will be able to hunt for one day. Hunters in the archery areas will be issued a three-day licence. Once issued, a licence will allow a hunter to harvest one moose of any sex or age on the designated day in the designated location.
