Successful Men Always Saved

They were thrifty. They were shrewd enough to see that the habit of saving meant the strengthening of character. With the money saved they were able to take advantage of opportunities as they arose.

Lawn Social at Dunbar

A Lawn Social under the auspices of Dunbar Presbyterian Church will be held on the church lawn on Tuesday evening Aug. 12th. Ice cream, cake and sandwiches will be served. Chesterville band will provide music. Tickets 25c.

Lad and his Bicycle Injured

Jimmie Cramer had a somewhat narrow escape from injury on Friday evening when his bicycle and Vene Robinson's car came into collision at the corner of Queen and Main streets. The front wheel of the bike was badly damaged and the forks bent, while the boy received a sprained arm and an injury to his head.

Pic-nic at South Mountain

Under the auspices of St. Daniel's Church, South Mountain, a grand pic-nic and auction sale of choice cattle will be held on the Fair Grounds at South Mountain on Wednesday Aug. 13th. Horse races, baseball and speeches will make up a full day's programme. Dinner served at 12 o'clock for 35c. Admission to grounds 25c. Dancing in the evening.

Corn Ten Feet, Six Inches High

In the matter of the corn crop Chesterville district in comparsion with many other sections seems to be particularly fortunate. Many fine fields of corn are to be seen around here. Mr. G. H. Baker has one field of eight acres which is particularly good and from which he brought a couple of stalks to The Record Office on Tuesday, measuring well over ten feet in length with well developed ears on each, and which Mr. Baker says is fairly representative of the whole field.

Nation Valley Social

Perhaps the largest attendance, most successful lawn social of the season was held on the school lawn Wednesday evening July 30, in Nation Valley S. S. No. 5. Plenty of everything good to eat was on hand. Mr. John Carruthers of Cannamore furnished the musical part of the programme with his bagpipes. Revs. Mullin and Hicks of Chesterville gave short talks and also Mr. O. D. Casselman, M. P. of Chesterville. The young ladies deserve special mention for the part they took and aid rendered in making the social a grand success, financially and otherwise.

Birthday Surprise

A big surprise was much appreciated by Miss Katie Moran when about 25 of her friends gathered at her home to celebrate the anniversary of her birthday. A very enjoyable evening was spent in dancing and music until midnight when Katie thought her time had come as one very thoughtful young lady carried a shingle from town, and with some assistance undertook the task of reminding her of her birthday or perhaps her childhood.

After lunch the happy crowd regretted this new time and felt it well deserved the name of quick time. Just before leaving her many friends gathered around her and much to her surprise presented her with a very pretty brooch, maple leaf set with pearls. A few words of appreciation were spoken and the gathering was soon brought to an end by singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

One hundred thousand black bass fry were turned into the St. Lawrence from the N. Y. State Hatchery in the vicinity of Alexandria Bay. That should improve the angling and might well be extended further.

How many parents know or care where their children spend their evenings? Many who used to burn the midnight oil are now burning the midnight gasoline. A child in bed at nine o'clock is worth a dozen youngsters running loose on the streets. This very wise and timely advice is offered by the Owen Sound Sun-Times.

The Young Man's Best Recommendation

A Savings Account is more than a start towards financial independence—it is a mark of character.

One of the strongest recommendations in the world of business that a young man can present, is a Merchants Bank Pass-Book, showing a record of consistent savings.

A Savings Account may be opened with $1.00, which shows how highly we regard the accounts of those who desire to save.

BETTER COOLING

(FARMERS CUT THIS OUT.)

At this time of the year when the sun is hot, and the flow of the milk is high, remember that more water is required to cool milk to the desired temperature. The more milk you have the more water is required. Don't try to cool eight cans in water that will only cool four cans. Change the water often. Milk cooled and not kept cool will sour.

Morrow-Babcock

Mountain Herald—St. Charles R. C. Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Monday morning, July 14th, when Margaret Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melbourne Babcock, Maplewood, Malden, Mass., was united in marriage to Mr. Justin Morrow, of South Mountain, Ont. The bride who was unattended, was given away by Mrs. James A. Copp, and was dressed in a most becoming gown of field mouse taffeta trimmed with flowered georgette, with shoes and hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of pink and white roses.

After the ceremony, which was preformed by Rev. Father Brown, Miss Madeline Nicol sang most acceptably Luzzi's Ave Maria, with organ accompaniment by Mrs. W. L. Ormond and violin, obligato played by Miss Helen Gorman.

The church was tastefully decorated by the Children of Mary of which society the bride is a member. Mrs. W. L. Ormond presided at the organ and rendered the bridal marches.

Following the ceremony a weeding breakfast was served at the home of Mrs. James A. Copp, Victoria Street, at which only the immediate members of the family were present.

The Prince's Favorite Picture

When it became dennitely known that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales would open the Canadian National Exhibition this year the management at once got into touch with the official photographers in London and requested a profile photograph of him for reproduction on the Victory Year Medal to be awarded to the winners in the Agricultural and other sections of the Big Fair. The photo shown above was received after considerable delay, and immediately a cable was rushed back to this effect:

"A mistake has been made. An official picture is desired. One you sent shows the Prince without hat or coat and with khaki shirt collar turned in. Charming deshabille, but hardly dignified enough."

Then came the answer:

"Sorry you dislike it. It's the Prince's favorite picture, taken with the Canadians in France and in every sense official."

And that is the reason why the People's Prince will appear on the Canadian National Exhibition 1919 medals, hatless, coatless and in the careless attire of the Fighting Man in France. He will open the Big Fair on Monday, August 25th.

Home Grown Skeeters

Householders should remember that in all probability the mosquito that bites them was born and reared within a few hundred feet of where he or, rather, she does her work. That is not always true, for by strong winds mosquitos can be and sometimes are, carried considerable distances—perhaps for miles. These journeys, however, are always involuntary and reluctant, for the mosquito hates travel as much as a cat does, and avoids it if shelter from the wind is available. Such shelter usually is available, and it is therefore true that, as a rule, mosquitos are of what may be called home production. They are therefore a disgrace to any neighborhood where they exist, for their presence convicts the people living there of either ignorance or negligence, aud both are not far from criminal in these days when sanitary knowledge, ought to be a common possession.

Marjorie: "I thought you loved a fair-haired girl last year?" Bob: "I did but she dyed."

Lynton, N. Devon, is claimed to be one of the healthiest places in England. Recently a visitor began to talk to an old man there, and asked him his age. "I am just over seventy," replied the rustic. "Well," said the visitor, "you look as if you had got a good many years to live yet. And at what age did your father die?" "Father dead?" said the man looking surprised. "Father isn't dead; he's upstairs putting grandfather to bed!"

Seven Stages of Marriage.

"There are seven stages of married life, just as there are seven ages of man," is the united verdict of an octogenarian couple who have just celebrated their diamond wedding.

First, there is the period of sentimentalism, which comes to all healthy-minded boys and girls; it is the first stirring of new desires for a new and splendid life.

"Second, there comes the romantic period, which is a more advanced stage than the purely sentimental.

"With the third comes disillusion. It is not necessarily tragic. The man realizes that his wife is just a woman, and this 'disillusion' often brings more solid happiness to the husband than he could ever have hoped for from the ethereal vision he once had.

"The fourth is the period of patience. Each has got to adapt himself and herself to the new view of each other.

"Fifthly, there is the period of reformation. The callow ideas of youth fade away and the real man and the real woman emerge.

"The sixth period is a period of contentment; each has become vital to the other.

"Lastly, there is the period of romance. We have been married 60 years, and we can often see more romance in looking back than in looking forward. The best rises to the mind, and we can dwell on many happy recollections."

Radek.

From the first day that the name Radek appeared in the news coming out of Bolshevist Russia, its owner has been something of a mystery. The progress of Lenine and Trotzky was, comparatively at any rate, gradual, but the ultra Bolshevik, Karl Radek, the little man with the huge head and the drab-colored Norfolk suit with knickers and leggings, the cross between a bandit and a professor, came with a bound. Out of the everywhere of international socialism into the here of Petrograd bolshevism came this Austrian subject with his imperfect knowledge of Russian, surrounded with strange rumors of expulsion from the ranks of revolutionary socialism in Germany and Poland because of the terrible extremity of his views. He plunged into the thick of the fight, and before the outside world was sure of his name, he was flaying all and sundry with a strange impish brilliance in the columns of the notorious Izvestia. As a propaganda agent he is probably unrivaled. For utter unscrupulousness he is quite remarkable even in the ranks of bolshevism; whilst, as an advocate and deviser of a reign of terror, the author of the phrase "in the winter, no bourgeois shall have an overcoat until every member of the proletariat has been provided for," stands quite in a class by himself.

Japanese Far From Democracy.

To achieve democratic control of the state is a goal out of the reach of the Japanese until new lines of endeavor are adopted. Constitutional reform must be accomplished. So long as all the parties put maintenance of the constitution at the head of their statements of principles, projects for the amendment of the fundamental law are out of the question as practical political measures. Without new constitutional provisions the Diet cannot obtain substantive powers in legislation, and it cannot enforce responsibility upon the Cabinet. The rules of the Privy Council must likewise be amended so that the Ministerial posts of the army and navy may be on the same footing as the others. To support such a series of changes the franchise must be greatly extended so as to include all adult males. The old lines of progress toward democracy have been followed as far as they lead. New lines must now be constructed.—Walter Wallace McLaren in "Asia."

Curiosities of the Calendar.

The month of January always begins on the same day of the week as October, and the same is true of April and July, September and December. February, March, and November also begin on the same day of the week. This, however, is only true in normal years of three hundred and sixty-five days. A century can never begin on Wednesday, Friday or Saturday. Furthermore, the ordinary year ends on the same day of the week as that on which it begins.—Family Herald.

Women Voters.

The would-be woman voter in England must sign a form stating: "I hereby declare that I have attained the age of 30." She does not have to give her exact age. To settle any age dispute, however, the authorities may demand a birth certificate.

The Long-winded Scot.

Two Rhinelanders — not from choice but from necessity—were having an argument about the music—and musicians — of their native lands.

"Talk about your long playing," said Pat. "Why, your countrymen wouldn't get a look in with us! I know a fellow who played 'Kathleen Mavourneen' on the piano for several hours."

Said Sandy:

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself to be talking about nothing. Sure, I know a laddie that played 'Scotland For Ever' on the pipes."

Coal Shortage and Reason for it.

One of the first serious effects derived from the exodus of foreign labor from this continent will be felt this winter in the shortage of anthracite coal. For many months past Italians, Hungarians, Russians, Austrians and other continentals have been turning their faces Eastward, bent on again seeing the home lands. Among industries hard hit for labor, the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania are suffering perhaps more than any other, by reason of the fact that the toilers in these mines were almost exclusively of foreign birth. Upward of a quarter century ago the mines of the anthracite region of Pennsylvania were manned almost exclusively by Welsh, English and Irish miners, but in time these men were displaced by continental labor, the theory being that with the continental there would be less trouble than with those from the British Isles. For a time this proved to be the case, though later on the Italian, Hungarian, and the rest took kindly to miners' unions and eventually, under able leadership, became a power which the mine owner had to consider upon all occasions.

A very large number of those who came over years ago have now made their "pile," and are speeding eastward with the idea of enjoying the proceeds of their toil in the lands of their birth. Another incentive which takes them from our shores is the hostility displayed toward a great many of these continentals during the war. They hope for more peace abroad, whether their wishes are to be gratified or not remains to be seen. But in the interval the entire continent is short of what is commonly termed rough labor and before the winter is over many of us, when we view our deplected coal bins, will have cause to regret the circumstances.

That the situation is serious no one aware of the facts will deny. The production of anthracite coal for the year up to end of June was only 38,800,000 tons, as compared with 49,100,000 for the first six months of 1918, a shortage to date of upward of ten million tons. In order to keep comfortable during the winter months, Canada is obliged to have upward of five million tons, and this amount Canada will not in all human probability obtain. The best that Canadians who are dependent upon anthracite can do is to obtain their supplies at the earliest possible moment, and pray in the interval that we have another mild winter.

West of the Great Lakes, and, of course, in the Maritime Provinces, citizens will unquestionably be dependent to a lage extent upon their local supplies, and it is fortunate indeed that they possess such, and are not in the position of Quebec and Ontario.

Let us hope that the tide of immigration again turns our way, and that without delay. We need this alien labor in nearly all, if not all, of our industries, and it seems impossible to fully supplant it with the home grown article.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Where Horses are a Pest

While Europe is short of horses, Queensland, in Australia is plagued with them. The "brumbles" of Queensland are horses that have run wild on the large stations, finding their own food, and breeding in herds without the help of man During the years of the war, when the men on the stations went to fight and few hands were left to do the work, the brumbles increased to such an extent that they are now not worth catching, breaking and selling. At a recent sale the highest price obtained for a brumble was eight shillings. In order to clear the land for cattle-breeding, the station owners are engaging men to hunt down the herds of wild horses and destroy them.

Study of Building Costs

The Building Age of New York in its July issue prints contributions from a number of representative points in the northern and eastern United States on the subject of building activity and cost, at present and before the war. There is a wide variety in the estimates, local conditions as well as the character of the works causing variations in cost. The heaviest increase appears to be in connection with the heaviest classes of work. A Philadelphia firm engaged in dock building, pile and concrete foundation work and harbor improvements puts at from 80 to 100 per cent. the increased cost in 1919 compared with 1914. This class of work is always costly and it is possible that it is still affected by the great demand for such construction in connection with fortification, naval and military construction for the government, arising out of the war. From this notable high mark there is a gradual decline outside of Pennsylvania at least. At Boston the estimate given puts the increase in the case of steel frame buildings at 70 per cent. and of dwellings at 40 per cent. At Ithica in central New York an advance of 50 to 60 per cent. is noted, the estimate being based on a considerable number and variety of structures, none of a great size. A Chicago, report, covering a territory much larger than the city, from a firm specializing in residence and flat construction notes that the cost now as compared with the pre-war period runs from 30 to 40 per cent. and sets a fair average at 35 per cent. This estimate agrees with one in a New York firm operating over a wide region, which puts reinforced construction at 40 per cent. higher than in pre-war days. In Minneapolis a correspondent gives details which cover the case of a concrete and steel frame building, estimated to cost $136,000 in 1915 and puts at $251,000 in 1918. The items cover everything from excauation to the roof and the increases vary from 175 per cent. for the steel to 15 per cent for sand. Labor's direct share of the increase was put at 60 per cent. It is a general remark that labor figures considerably in the increases in cost, in part from inefficiency, the latter possibly because so many of the fit and active men called to Europe for war service have not yet been all returned to civil life. Not many of the commentators expect a notable decrease while some think the tendency may be to an increase in cost. It is stated that, in spite of the higher cost, building activity is reported in most of the cities, east, west, north and south. The confidence in the future of business has not been shaken either by the political or industrial disturbances—Montreal Gazette.

Plant Walnut Trees

The depletion of our Canadian lumber resources is becoming a serious consideration in southern Ontario, as well as the disappearance of the rougher timber for fuel.

Certain fancy woods used for the manufacture of fine furniture, piano and organ cases, and the interior finishing of high-class dwellings and public buildings are becoming very scarce.

There is much rough or waste land in the older parts of Ontario which could be utilized to advantage for the purpose of reforestration, and there is no more beautiful native tree than the black walnut (Juglans nigra) for that purpose. It is a very strong growing tree, attains an immense size, and the wood, which is of superior quality, is very valuable, being now worth about $300 per 1,000. The extending branches of a tree grown in the open often measures 60 to 80 feet across, and it bears large quantities of nuts which are edible.

These trees are quite common in the Grimsby district, some specimens measuring as much as three or three and a half feet in diameter. Some of the fine houses built years ago are finished inside with walnut grown on the premises, and until recently the stumps of these trees were to be seen along the foot of the escarpment.

For purposes of reforestration trees could be grown ten feet apart each way, that would require 435 to the acre. These can be grown from nuts, which may be easily obtained in the autumn, and when planted in the fall make quite a growth the first year, and may then be transplanted.

The Michigan Legislature recently passed a law to encourge the planting of nut-bearing and food-producing shade trees along the state highways und other roads built in that state. Would it not be well for Ontario to do likewise? An acre or two of waste land planted now to black walnut trees would be a vaiuable legacy for a man to leave to his heirs, besides doing an acceptable service to the country

What Did he Want?

A young Scotsman had married an English lady, and some time afterwards he paid a visit to a bachelor uncle.

"Weel, Sandy, I hear ye hae gotten a wife," said the old man.

"Yes, uncle."

"What can she dae?"

"Do. What do you mean?"

"Weel," the uncle went on "can she sew an' knit? Does she mend your claes?"

Don't Buy History Now

Histories about the war are being placed on the market at the rate of about two a minute and it is timely to warn readers as to the advisability of waiting a while before placing their orders. It is a certainty that no history written at the early stage of the war can do credit to the Canadians to-gether with a comprehensive review of the whole war, which is what we should strive to get for our children. Canadians in purchasing a work of war should be careful to know that it is written from a British or Canadian standpoint. Histories published by other countries, which possibly true as to the main facts, are inclined to be colored by national pride, which is revealed by laying stress on certain situations and minimizing the importance of others. A history compiled by their own countrymen, giving them the proper perspective and interest, would seem to be the logical record for Canadians to purchase.

Airplane and Two Autos in Weird Mishap

London, August 3.—The weirdest crash in the brief history of aviation in Western Ontario occurred this afternoon a short distance east of the city limits, when a Curtiss biplane being driven from Toronto to Elkhart, Ind., struck a treetop in taking off and fell upon a touring car owned by George Campbell, of Scotland, a village near Brantford. Mr. Campbell's party of seven, had left the machine scarcely fifteen seconds before to watch the flight of the aviators, Donald Whistler, owner of the airplane, and E. T. Webster, his pilot. Both birdmen live in Elkhart. They bought the Curtiss recently from Ericson, of Toronto, and some days ago crashed at Woodstock. Since that time they had been held up for repairs. This morning they undertook to resume their homeward journey, but decided to alight in London for dinner. They selected a somewhat cramped field near the C. P. R. railway and adjoining the Dominion Abattoir plant.

It was thought by local men who have a knowledge of aviation that the Elkhart men were in a tight corner for a take-off but the aviators expressed confidence that they were in a satisfactory location. As they started their motor to continue on the next leg to Detroit. Mr. Campbell, who has been visiting here since Firday, drove past. His attention was attracted and, pulling to the roadside; he halted and his six passengers alighted. They ran around a tree to an unobstructed vantage point just as the plane tipped a tree top, turned on its wings and fell like a plummet into their automobile.

In leap-frog fashion, the airplane mounted the automobile, and releasing the brakes, drove it a hundred feet along the road, where with its queer burden, the automobile collided with another machine occupied by the wife and infant daughter of Thomas Bell of London Junction, smashing the windshield and throwing the child to the floor. Mr. Bell, who had just left his own car, dragged at a wing of the airplane in a struggle to prevent the collision, but he was unable to do so.

The smashing of the ribs of the top and the resilience of the pneumatic tires on Mr. Campbell's car furnished somewhat of a "soft spot," for the airplane to fall upon. The aviators escaped uninjured, and, climbing down from their machine, were shocked to find that they had fallen into an automobile.

The escape of the seven occupants of the Campbell machine from instant death was gauged by spectators at about fifteen seconds. The wreck of their machine was so complete that no one could have lived through it.

Flag of Mons to be feature of Peace Fair.

The flag worked in secret by the citizens of Mons while under German bondage against their delivery from the enemy and which was brought from its hiding place and presented to the Canadian forces when they drove out the Germans and relieved the city on Armistice Day, has been received in Ottawa by Dr. A. G. Doughty, Dominion Archvist. It is now in the Archives, on Sussex street, and is among the most treasured of Canada's trophies of the war.

Since the execution of the armistice there have been coming to Canada in large quantities additional trophies of the war captured by the Canadian forces or awarded to this country by Britain France, and Belgium. These, with what were brought here during the war, form a tremendous volume. It is planned to to erect in Ottawa a large national home for the housing of these trophies—the proposed national war memorial hall may be devoted to that purpose.

Meantime, however, it is desired that the public should have opportunity to view these trophies and accordingly a very large assortment of the most interesting are being loaned by the Dominion Government to the Central Canada Exhibition and will form a special feature of the Peace Year Fair. The association has provided accommodation for them in large quarters in the grand stand building and on the grounds, the exhibt to be directly under the management of the exhibition.

Dr. Doughty, Dominion Archivist, is custodian for the Government of all the war trophies, and the Archives, on Sussex Street, is constantly receiving new shipments. It has been said that Canada has one of the finest collections of war trophies of all the Allied countries.

Already there are in the exhibition grounds forty or fifty guns and a large number of machine guns and other trophies in preparatien for the setting up of exhibit. Besides the flag worked by the citizens of Mons and presented to the Canadian forces when they drove the Germans of the historic city, Dr. Doughty has also a large number of battle flags captured by the Canadians.

Overseas Soldiers Unaccounted For

London, Aug. 3.—(Reuter).—Records offices in London of the various overseas forces are making their last grand tally and trying to trace every man who has appeared on their books. Up to the present time some 7,000 or about one per cent. of the total cannot be accounted for. Not all these men are considered to be definitely lost. Some have gone on furlough and accepted work without the formality of communicating with the authorities; others have married and settled down in preference to returning to camp and telling the colonel; others are restless men, many of whom will trickle back.

The South Africans have but 25 absentees, every other man of the 26,000 who came overseas, being accounted for. The New Zealanders are 300 short.

Most of the missing are Austrailians and Canadians and it will take a long time for the military police to round them up and shepherd them into concentration camps. Some of the Dominion governments are publishing advertisements warning these men to return by a certain time unless the wish to forego their gratuity and free passage home.

Child's Miraculous Escape

Little short of the miraculous was the escape from death of a four-year-old Gravenhurst child last week. The little tot wandered on the G. T. R. Crossing, just before a fast passenger train was due south. Engineer Arch. Wilkinson saw the child but when a few car lengths away and immediately put on the emergency brakes. The train stopped in a remarkably short space, after skidding on the rails for some feet, but not in time to avoid striking the child. Ths train crew felt certain that the child had been killed, but were greatly relieved when they found that the tot still breathed. A long gash on the forehead where the engine struck it, and a long splinter of wood where its chin stuck the ties, and severe shock were the injuries received. The child had been struck down between the rails, and the engine, tender and one car passed over it. Later reports indicate that the chiid is recovering from its injuries received.—Barrie Examiner.

Nothing to Worry About

A farmer was anxious that his son should become a minister, and for this laudable end he sent him to college for four years, but to his great disappointment the youth balked at the ministry and set himself up as a horse dealer. The old farmer told his grief to a neighbor, who, however, took a more optimistic view of the matter. "Oh, I wouldn't feel so badly about that," he said. "As a horse dealer Bill will probably lead more men to repentance than he ever would have done as a preacher."

An exchange sums up what a woman can do thusly: A woman can do first-class job of carpenter work with a pair of shears. She can fix up almost anything with a hair pin and a bottle of glue. She can make a $27 hat out of a bird cage and some trimmings off an old parasol. She can put things away where nobody including herself can ever find them. She can suffer the privations and hardships of a martyr to preserve her figure, and she can make a full meal out of a pickle and a dish of ice cream.
