Eighth World Cup opens under sunny skies

After a particularly rainy Thursday, all those involved with the South Dundas Soccer Association World Cup were pleased to see Friday dawn bright and sunny — perfect weather for the launch of the 8th Annual World Cup of Soccer.

At 6 p.m. Friday, the ceremonies began as representatives from the soccer association carried the World Cup Banner around the track at Seaway District High School, accompanied by members of the Iroquois Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion and the music of the bagpipes played by Lawrence Merkley.

With Team Canada in the lead, the 630 young people who play soccer with the SDSA marched around the track and seated themselves by country teams on the hill beside the high school.

Candace Menges, President of the SDSA, welcomed all parents, volunteers and players to the 8th World Cup event to be held in South Dundas and introduced the runners for the torch run.

"This run represents each team passing on peace," said Menges, before announcing this year's runners: Art Visser, Eric Saddlemire, Erin Gilmer, Cody Kennedy, Amber Bailey and Jake Cutler.

The unlit torch was presented to MP Guy Lauzon by Team Canada player, Jake Cutler. The crowd then stood to sing O Canada with special guest Carol Chesbro.

Lauzon thanked the association for inviting him to help open the World Cup, marking his fourth year attending the event.

"Its hard to believe that 13 years ago this program started with 33 players and now there are 630," he said. "Congratulations to everyone!"

The MP went on to say that attending the opening ceremonies of the World Cup was an honour and one of the highlights of his summer. He told the audience they should be proud of their soccer program

Mayor Charles Barkley offered congratulations to Candace Menges on behalf of the South Dundas council for all the hard work that made the new canteen a reality and ended his speech by wishing all contestants the best of luck.

The Iroquois/Matilda Lions and Ross Video were honoured for their very generous donations, which made the canteen a reality.

The Lions donated $10,000 toward the canteen and Ross Video donated $7,500. Other big donors included the Morrisburg Lions ($1,000) and Iroquois Enterprises ($500). Dr. Thomas and family donated $1,000.

Matt Hartle was the recipient of the SDSA Character Award for his kind personality and willingness to serve.

Before the games began, Menges told the crowd that the revenue from this year's 50/50 draw would be donated to the Lapier family of Stampville who recently lost their home to fire.

She also thanked the Masons for helping out with the BBQ and breakfast.

Swank Construction celebrates 50 years in business

BY JOSEPH MORIN
THE CHIEFTAIN

The Swank family has been involved for a half-century in building Iroquois and Dundas County.

Last Saturday, the family celebrated 50 years of doing great business in the area. Their Northside headquarters, in Iroquois, was the place for the birthday party.

Peter, Ron and Henry Swank greeted old friends, business associates and former customers as they arrived at a large tent, complete with a barbecue and tables.

The founder of Swank Construction, Peter Swank, is retired these days. He turned his business over to his two sons, Henry and Ron, in 1978.

Sitting at a picnic table watching his sons greet people at the birthday party, Peter remembers how in 1958 he partnered with Arie Geurkink to form the G & S Construction Company.

"We started off with a half-ton truck, a shovel and a wheelbarrow," he said.

Back in the 1950s and early 1960s, the two young men built commercial buildings, barns and apartments.

"Twelve years later," said Peter, "my son asked me if I could go and work with him."

Henry was first, then, after college, Ron joined the family business, in 1978. The company name was changed to Swank and Sons.

Working together as a family, the Swanks, father and sons, grew their business.

Peter, now 74, feels that his sons have carried on the business he started very successfully.

"I have a wonderful family," he said, "They are doing very well."

Looking back over the 50 years, Peter is proud of what his sons have accomplished, joking: "They had a good teacher."

The company is really two divisions under one roof. Henry looks after all of the residential projects and Ron is responsible for all of the rural farm construction. These days they share the foundation building part of the construction business regardless of whether the job is a subdivision or a dairy barn.

In the Village of Iroquois, they have designed and built several major projects such as Bridlewood, Carmon Court and, most recently, Meadowbrook.

In 2003, the Swank brothers were awarded the Builder of the Year Award. The walls inside of their Northside office display all of their awards and certification certificates that tell a prospective homebuyer that they are dealing with the very best kind of professionals.

In 2002, Swank Construction, built the addition to the Iroquois Fire hall.

This past year, they have worked with the South Dundas Soccer Association to build a canteen for the organization. On that particular, project they volunteered to organize and monitor the project for the SASA, as their way of helping out the organization.

The 50th birthday celebration included a glimpse of the future as Devin, the son of Ron and Donna Swank, takes part in the festivities. The young man has already spent several summer working alongside his father and some day he will be joining him. Devin will be the first of the family's third generation to partner with father and uncle.

Hysterical comedy Out Of Order next Playhouse hit

This is the time of summer when things come a bit unhinged at Upper Canada Playhouse—almost like the circus coming to town. The time when audiences laugh their heads off at hilarious actors playing frazzled characters at the brink of disaster. It's time for a little farce!

"Audiences like farces because they portray everyday ordinary people getting themselves in trouble. Getting involved in things they shouldn't,'" says Artistic Director Donnie Bowes. "And when the law closes in on them, everyone starts scrambling to create the big cover up. That's when the real fun begins. Watching people under pressure doing things they never thought they'd do."

The next comedy, Out of Order, is set in a London hotel room during the Margaret Thatcher era and is a shining example of this hilarity.

The Playhouse has turned to some of the accomplished comic actors who have delivered the goods in hysterical fashion for their many past hit farces.

Richard Bauer plays Member of Parliament Richard Willey, whose plans to skip a sitting of the House of Commons to have a secret romantic encounter with the Leader of the Opposition's secretary turn into a nightmare with the discovery of a dead body in their London hotel room.

Willey browbeats his Private Secretary, George Pigden, played by Jamie Williams, into helping him get rid of the body and avert the attention of the police, his wife and the prime minister.

The pressure gets turned up as they attempt to execute this massive cover-up by stick handling around a conniving waiter and a suspicious hotel manager.

The cover-up soon escalates into a frenzy of hilarious activity with the arrival of an overzealous detective, the MP's angry wife, the secretary's furious husband, a headstrong nurse and an Italian maid!

All in one evening!

Bauer joins forces once again with Williams creating a comedy team that has entertained Playhouse audiences in past hits such as Run For Your Wife, Caught in the Net and last season's It Runs in the Family.

Bauer was last seen in Gift To Last and Williams recently starred in The Playhouse hit, The Affections of May.

Joining this pair of funny men is John Weir, familiar to Playhouse audiences in a variety of past roles from Scrooge in Christmas Carol to an Italian designer in Who's Under Where.

Weir not only plays the hotel manager, he also directs the show.

Also featured as the waiter is Walter Learning who has appeared in Playhouse farces for the past five seasons.

Other Playhouse favourites are Victor Cornfoot, last seen as a gangster in Too Many Cooks, who plays the jealous husband; AnnaMarie Lea, last seen as the star-struck waitress in the season opener, Wally's Café and Debra Hale from last season's It Runs in the Family.

John Weir

The Playhouse looks forward to introducing new-comers to their stage-Toronto actors Katie Lawson and Parris Greaves, as well as local actress Brenda Quesnel.

'It's always a pleasure to put together a company comprised of actors who have built up a reputation with our audience combined with new faces. And it's fun for everyone to feature a great big cast of 10 actors!' remarks Bowes.

The Playhouse reports robust crowds again this season starting off with the opener, Wally's Café, and following up with their current hit, Norm Foster's The Affections of May.

There are still some seats available for The Affections of May, which runs til Aug, 3, but Box Office staff stress that they are going quickly.

Some audience members are even catching the show twice, so booking as early as possible for any of the summer shows is highly recommended.

Out of Order runs Aug. 7-31, with evening shows Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m., and matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, at 2 p.m.

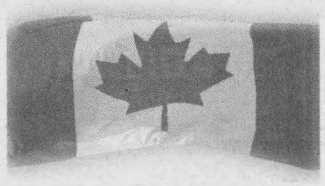
As the summer rolls on by, flowers have a chance to show off their natural beauty.



South Dundas Soccer

When the 700 or so SDSA soccer players marched around the track behind the Seaway District High School on Sunday night, it was as if the entire World Soccer phenomena had arrived in Iroquois.

The soccer association in South Dundas has succeeded in providing great summer fun for hundreds of children for the past eight years.

It was an idea that came to Iroquois at the right time and was led by the right people.

These days, volunteers do all of the work associated with the soccer association. They look after the new canteen and they are the ones out there in the spring manning the registration tables.

It all works because South Dundas has a wonderful, energized volunteer base.

They are everywhere, from the Legion halls to the Lions clubs in Morrisburg and in Iroquois to the strong volunteer fire department in all three villages.

The special day of soccer in Iroquois highlights every special day when a volunteer gives to someone.

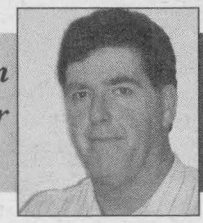
A thought... by Joseph Morin Editor



From me to you

Just when you thought that you understood modern finance and business practices, a few oil companies announced that they have made record profits.

I have a problem with the word "profit".

I always thought that when you declare a certain amount of money as a profit, it is after all of your expenses have been subtracted from an original sum of money.

The other day, a news broadcaster was defending the oil profits by saying they, after all, need to make a lot of money to keep up with exploration and production costs. Having explained that to a bewildered viewer, me, he went on to say that there was no relationship between rising oil process and rising profits for those same companies.

Now wait a minute.

Something does not sound right here. If the price of exploration goes up and the price of oil goes up, then I can understand why the oil companies would have to raise their price to the consumer. However if they are proudly declaring that they made a fantastic profit, I guess their costs did not rise accordingly along with their prices.

If anything, with motorists buying less gas and with all supplies of oil evaporating off the planet, just over the past few months, those rich oil companies should about now be declaring bankruptcy.

But apparently not.

I would feel much better if the oil executives were honest and said since we are all conserving gas there is more to go around and, therefore, more to sell. Of course, let us convince the consumer that there is really less oil, at least cheap oil, and raise the price.

The other statement could be that the oil companies realize that they may have to get in another alternative-energy resource business by the end of the decade and they are collecting their grubstake now.

I am not a financial expert. I know next to nothing about how the oil industry works. I am, when it comes to oil, simply a consumer.

My heating-oil company tells me that prices have almost doubled. That is another issue that I do not understand, but you can apply the same logic to it. People are conserving and less oil is being used. So profits go down so prices have to go up.

If you sense some cynicism here today it is because I have the impression that the oil marketing people are a little behind the times when it comes to dealing with the public. We do not believe the "facts" that they are telling us these days. They should stick to the truth.

Not being an oil-market expert I could be insulting the oil industry when they do not deserve it. I beg their collective forgiveness for that. Perhaps they could try to start explaining why, as I use less oil, they make more profit. Its seems that it has never been about conservation and saving the planet. It sounds more like preserving a bottom line somewhere. Just tell it like it is please and admit that oil prices are not reacting to a natural market phenomena.

If I am right about this, then what we are all seeing is greed dressed up as something else. Either the media has it all wrong or the oil companies have been giving out faulty facts. If both situations are true at the same time, the result is bewilderment for consumers.

The situation does little to inspire confidence in our marketplace.

Please excuse the excuses

As I See It

BY MARY COOK

Many of us live our lives with excuses. It's sort of like being in denial. Mind you, having a good excuse when you want to avoid an unpleasant situation (or person) can come in mighty handy.

But this year, for some reason, I am very aware of excuses.

In defence of myself, I want to say I am not the author of all of them. But certainly, this year, and this summer, in particular, seems to be the time for excuses, and I've heard most of them. And I have used a few of them myself. And most of them begin with the little word "too."

It's too wet to garden.

Look at all the rain we have had. Who could even think of planting a garden when the plot is nothing more than a bog?

Now it's too late to plant a garden.

For heaven's sake, the season is just about over. By the time the carrots start to sprout, we'd likely be getting our first frost. And then all that planting would be for nought.

It's too hot to exercise.

Who in their right mind would run in this heat? Just thinking of getting into my running shoes has caused me to break out in a sweat. I'd probably collapse after running 18 metres (20 yards).

It's too cold to exercise.

The weather has changed and now instead of being nice and warm, the summer is suddenly too cool for comfort. And besides, I never dreamed it would be too cold to exercise in the summer, and I've packed away all my sweat suits.

It's too hot to bake.

Sorry about the fifth meal this week from takeout. But I simply can't bear the thought of turning on the oven on a day like this.

It's too humid to make lemon pie; the meringue would not set.

I know a bought lemon pie doesn't taste the same, but for the reasons above, it'll have to do.

It's too early in the season to have the community barbecue. It's better to wait until later when everyone is getting bored.

It's too late to have the community barbecue.

Everyone is either on vacation, or about to leave on vacation. And besides, I 'm too tired to organize it and get it all together. Let someone else do it this year.

It's too costly to go away for a trip this year.

The cost of filling the gas tank has become obscene. It's too depressing to think of even a short trip this year for the above reason. We'll just spend the time in the back yard. In the heat. With the mosquitoes.

It's too late to start a diet this summer.

I know, I know, I said as soon as summer comes, and all those fresh vegetables can be pulled from the garden, I would eat more sensibly and take a diet seriously. But you may remember, I was too late to plant the garden. The rain saw to that.

It's too late, it's too hot, I'm too tired and it's too much money to start painting the house.

I know its peeling, has turned a different colour and people are stopping to ask if we had a fire, but I've stated my case!

My big dictionary says an excuse is something we use to lessen the blame. That's good enough for me.

Iroquois Plaza revitalization - update

ANNE MARIE YOUNG
TOWNSHIP OF SOUTH DUNDAS

At the end of June proposed concept plans were presented to the merchants of the plaza for their consideration and comments. A month has past and we are getting closer to having the plans fine tuned with the very important budget figure to go with it. The surveying has been completed and registered. Soon the merchants can look for the legal documentation for the conveyance of property to the Township. Everyone is looking forward to the day when we can actually see a shovel in the ground and believe me so I am, along with anyone involved at the Township level. This is a project that will change the face of our community and we have expectations for its completion before the snow flies. But, at the same time, we want to make sure we have all our t's crossed and our i's dotted. We appreciate everyone's patience as we do this. There has been some concern as to the parking and to the placement of trees. Firstly, and I can't emphasis this enough, the primary focus of the project is the canopy and the sidewalk, after that, everything else is window dressing and will be addressed as funds will allow.

At the same time other projects are continuing or being pursued to make sure we fulfill the recommendations from studies such as the business retention & expansion reports, the economic development strategic plans and the waterfront development study, which will be conduct thoroughly this fall. Further partnerships with South Stormont are bring shaped to ensure the branding concept "Upper Canada Region" will continue to be marketed; telling it well and telling it often.

Change can be difficult to adapt to; the construction of the Seaway is an example of this. Let's use the 50th anniversary of the flooding of the Seaway as an appropriate time in which to review the effects of these changes and to look ahead. Too often, the emphasis here has been on the bad things that resulted from these changes. While this is a natural reaction to the upheaval that resulted, it is time to move on and begin to realize some of the opportunities presented by the continuing presence of the river and the Township's proximity to the major highways.

Now is the time to renew our relationship with the river and with the roads (#2 and 401) that will generate economic and cultural benefits. The plaza revitalization project is just the start of the many things to do and it is the right way to start. I leave you with a fact presented at a seminar I attended recently. "Downtowns reflect the image of your community. Often this is used an indicator on how your community ticks. Does it look prosperous? Does it look safe? This is true for tourist, business investors, and those looking to live here."

Marvin Redler

Antiquefest brings treasure hunters to South Dundas

"It's one of the best shows I go to, and I go to at least ten a year," explained Montreal antique vendor Marvin Redler.

"The people are really great and the Lions do a lot of promotion. It is well organized, and just one of the best."

Marvin Redler was one of 41 different antique dealers who set up shop last weekend as the Morrisburg Lions ran another successful Antiquefest.

Anticipating close to 2000 visitors, the Lions work very hard to set up a tent city along the banks of the St. Lawrence where vendors from all across Ontario and Quebec display their wares.

This was the fifth year the Lions have organized and hosted the Antiquefest, and the tenth year it has been held in South Dundas.

"We took over the event from the township 5 years ago," explained Lion Mike Domanko who coordinates the festival. "It's a lot of work. We start in January printing brochures and booking tents. This year we have added 2 additional tents which increases the indoor space by 800 square feet."

All the planning and hard work, however, pays off as vendors are always happy to come back to the festival and many echoed Redler's sentiments claiming it is one of the best organized antique shows around.

This year a special display was set up to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Seaway. Lion Judy organized the display which included pictures and David Jones' DVD 'A River Lost'.

The show also offered attendees the opportunity of having their own treasures appraised by experts in various fields.

For example, specialists were on hand to appraise carnival glass, movies, coins, stamps, sports memorabilia, Christmas decorations, porcelain, silver, glassware, and artwork.

The money raised by the Antiquefest is used by the Lions club to help out the community in a number of ways.

Scott Van't Foort Memorial Golf Tournament Aug. 23

The third annual golf tournament to raise funds in the memory of high school student Scott Van't Foort will be held at the Iroquois Golf Course, on Aug. 23.

When the Seaway District student was killed in 2003 in an automobile accident, friends and family were determined to create a lasting memorial to Scott.

Because of his love for reading, education, and children, it was decided that a unique way to remember Scott would be to contribute to education in the third world.

To this end, a group of Scott's friends and family decided to funnel the money raised in his name to a group entitled "Free the Children School Building Campaign," which focuses on school building projects that provide schools, teachers, and resources to disadvantaged children.

The goal of the Scott Van't Foort Memorial School Project was to raise enough funds to build a school somewhere in the third world which will be named after Scott.

The fundraising efforts have been so successful that enough money has now been raised to build the school.

The popular annual event will continue, however, as future proceeds will be used for upgrades to the school, as well as teacher salaries and school supplies in addition to donations being made to Seaway.

No proceeds from the event will be used for those wishing to travel to the school building site.

That will be a personal financial commitment from those participating.

Organizers Samantha Boone and Karla Nugent have also attempted each year to involve the community as much as possible, through local sponsorships and participation.

Event organizers also pride themselves on providing this event with a personal touch, such as hand written thank you cards to sponsors.

Boone says, "Without the enthusiasm of this community for the project and the generosity of the various sponsors over the years, the goal of this event would never be met.

"I have always said that it is not just the Van't Foorts, Karla and I behind this cause, it is the whole community, and we have always really appreciated that."

In order to register for the golf tournament and chicken dinner, interested parties should meet a registration deadline of Aug. 13.

The tournament will have a shotgun start with teams of four players and will be run in the 'scramble' format.

The tournament will be 18 holes with many prizes and fun contests.

Dinner can be reserved separately for those that wish to support the cause.

In addition, this year, co-organizers Samantha Boone and Karla Nugent have tried to make the event even more family friendly.

They are offering the dinner option to those between the ages of 5 and 13 at half price (10$) and free for children under 5.

The organizers are still looking for hole sponsors.

Anyone who is interested is encouraged to contact Karla Nugent at 613-543-3874.

Those golfers who wish to make use of a cart for the tournament should arrange that by contacting the Iroquois Golf Club, at 613-652-4367.

For more information about the tournament please call Samantha Boone at 613-806-6520

Scotiabank Donation

Over $58,000 was raised for the Winchester District Memorial Hospital through their Spring Gala event. A partner with hospital fundraising volunteers was Scotiabank who helped with the auction, receiving and recording payments of over $21,000. On Thursday, July 24, Scotiabank presented Dawn Cooper, the fundraising chair for the hospital with a cheque for $10,000. The presentation was made at the Morrisburg Branch of Scotiabank. Building our community's future with the Building Canada Fund

SD&G MP Guy Lauzon was in Cornwall last week to take part in the funding announcement.

On July 24, I had the opportunity to announce at the United Counties council chambers, a major investment for not only our community, but for eastern Ontario and the province as a whole.

Along with my provincial colleague, MPP Jim Brownell, we informed our local municipal leaders that our respective governments have come together and agreed to a large, historic framework agreement about the future of our area's infrastructure.

The Building Canada Fund — a joint federal, provincial, and municipal funding program- has allocated $6.2 billion to improving the quality of infrastructure in our province.

This program will provide a long-term, stable source of funding for our community's infrastructure needs.

As our local government's move forward with large infrastructure items, they will now have a comprehensive, steady source of funding to assist them with these large capital items.

As part of our announcement, MPP Brownell and I also informed our local councils that a large emphasis will be placed on bringing broadband services to our rural communities.

For years, constituents and local community leaders have been telling our governments that this is a priority- providing high-speed access to the Internet and using this as an incentive tool for attracting new businesses and families to rural Ontario.

This funding will further move along our municipal government's plan to bring these services to their community.

I was pleased to be joined by Cornwall Mayor Bob Kilger, SD&G Warden Estella Rose, and many councillors who spoke positively about this announcement.

This funding will assist them greatly with planning and prioritizing which roads, arenas, and major projects to work on.

These important projects- which can be supported by the Building Canada Fund, are all apart of our government's commitment to a stronger, safer, and better Canada.

As the proud member of Parliament for this community, I look forward to working with Jim Brownell and all of our municipal partners as we began to move projects like rural broadband services ahead. It is programs and partnerships like these that illustrate how all three levels of government can work together to provide long-term, successful options for our constituents.

Green News:

Environmentally-friendly newspaper printing

BY STEVE NEWMAN
CHIEFTAIN STAFF

The Iroquois Chieftain is one of the 19 community newspapers in Metroland's Ottawa Region Media Group that are taking a greener approach to newspaper production.

The more environmentally-friendly approach means using 100 per cent recycled newspaper for all of ORMG's community newspapers since February 2008 and the continued recycling of used newspaper inks to a Brampton-based company.

The recycled ink then becomes about two to five per cent of the primarily canola-based inks used in the printing.

"The ORMG is extremely proud to be the only media group in the Ottawa region using 100 per cent recycled newsprint for all of our community newspapers," says Chris McWebb, vice-president and regional publisher for Ottawa Region Media Group.

"This initiative was led by Metroland corporately and we were very eager, and one of the first regions, to jump aboard."

Dennis Girard, who heads the Renfrew-based printing press, elaborates.

"The biggest thing I like is the products are recyclable," he says.

"The fact that the paper actually runs well and is 100 per cent recycled leaves you with a good feeling."

The environmental benefits are many, but there was also a huge learning curve, acknowledges Girard.

"It's a totally different paper, with a different density, more see-through, less ink, less water, and we had to change the tensions on all the units on the printing press."

But a learning curve serves to create a big environmental saving, as well as production savings.

A roll of newsprint typically was good for printing about 17,000 copies of a newspaper but, with the thinner recyclable newsprint, now closer to 22,000 can be printed from the same roll, says Girard.

"The positive impact this change of newsprint has on the environment is staggering," says regional publisher McWebb.

"For instance, among the many benefits to the environment when comparing regular virgin newsprint – producing one single ton of 100 per cent recycled newsprint saves enough energy to power an average home for six months.

"We encourage all homes to practice recycling all of your newsprint materials from home as it is of course the raw material used for the 100 per cent recycled newsprint we are now printing on."

What to do if you find a sick, injured or orphaned wild animal

If you find juvenile wildlife that appears to be orphaned, sick or injured, avoid contact to prevent bites and scratches. Some species can carry diseases and parasites that are harmful to humans. Injured wildlife also requires specialized and immediate care to recover and return to the wild. Signs of orphaning, injury or illness may include:

- Blood, wounds or swelling on the body
- Lethargy
- Body covered in fleas
- Unusual or uneven loss of fur or feathers
- Vocalizing and/or following humans around
- A fawn that is wandering around
- Contact with a domestic cat
- Difficult or raspy breathing or sneezing
- A dangling leg or wing
- Closed eyes
- Head tucked under wing

Orphaned Wildlife

It is normal for some species to leave their offspring temporarily alone, especially during the day. For example, deer and cottontail rabbits spend much of the day away from their well-camouflaged offspring to minimize the chance of predators finding them. To determine if young wildlife is truly orphaned:

Check the animal periodically for 24 to 48 hours to see if it is still around, but keep your distance.

Keep cats and dogs away from the area where the young animal is; the adult will not return if it is noisy or if predators or people are close by.

Necessary Care

If you find an injured, sick or orphaned wild animal, contact a wildlife custodian who can provide the specialized and immediate care necessary to help the animal.

If you must handle it, seek the advice of a wildlife custodian to minimize risk of injury to yourself and to the animal.

Wear protective clothing and equipment, such as leather gloves, to avoid bites or scratches, and wash hands well after handling the animal.

Under the Fish and Wildlife Conservation Act, a person may only keep wildlife for 24 hours to transport it to a veterinarian for treatment or to a wildlife custodian for rehabilitation or care or to relocate it following capture as a problem animal.

Diseased/Dead Wildlife

If you suspect there is a public health risk from a sick wild animal, such as rabies, or you or your pet had contact with a suspected rabid animal, contact your local Public Health Unit immediately. Rabies is fatal for humans and animals if not treated.

Symptoms of rabies and several other diseases in animals can include tremors, aggressive behaviour, partial paralysis, convulsions, and loss of fear of humans.

To report a dead crow, raven or blue jay, contact your local Public Health Unit.

To report other dead animals or birds contact the Canadian Cooperative Wildlife Health Centre www.inspection.gc.ca.

IN MEMORIAM

SCOTT:

In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister, Linda Christie Scott, who passed away accidentally July 31, 1977

This date in July comes with deepest regret
As it brings back a day I will never forget,
Thirty-one years ago we had to part,
With a daughter I loved with all of my heart.
Her memory is as dear today as in the hour she passed away.
And I am reminded of a day my heart was crushed,
All earthly cares were cast aside.
When my daughter was taken without any warning.
What sorrow, shock & pain.
God in heaven please let her know that here on earth I miss her so.
If I had all the world to give, I'll give it,
Yes and more.
To hear her voice and see her smile and greet her at the door.
But all I can do dear Linda is go and tend your grave, and leave
Behind token of love to one no longer with me
And o'er thy grave in loving grief shall fall a silent tear.
God bless you Linda in God's garden now at rest.
Please God take a message to Linda in heaven above,
Tell her how much I miss her and give her all of my love.
Father in heaven don't leave her alone, love her in heaven
As I did at home.

Sadly missed and lovingly remembered
From Mom and Brother Robert
