NORTHERN ONTARIO FIRE SWEPT THIRTY LIVES REPOTRED LOST

Toronto Oct. 5.—Bush fires which have been raging for the last week at various parts in Northern Ontario over a radius of 2,500 square miles, have developed into a unit of blazing forest and a holocaust of towns and villages and mining properties, according to the latest information arriving today from points adjoining the fire zone. Within the radius of devastation are the towns of North Cobalt, Halleybury, New Liskeard, Charlton, Elk Lake, Heaslip, Earlton Junction, Dane, Uno Park and Engelhart with a total population estimated at 25,000.

Halleybury, Engelhart, Charlton, Heaslip and Dane are believed to be almost if not completely wiped out.

Communications with points north of Cobalt had not been established last night.

A special dispatch filed at 11.30 p. m to the Mail and Empire from Cobalt, says;

"All Halleybury gone except a handful of houses from Dave Angus' residence to Ferland Place. The hospital, cathedral, schools, hotels, and entire business section is nothing but bare ground.

"Terrible anxiety is felt for the fate of the sisters in the Roman Catholic Hospital of Providence. who staved nobly by their task of removing patients though the building was in flames, and the whole section roundabout a seething inferno. The last seen were taking refuge by the side of the road and it is feared that heroic band has been burned to death.

"The number of fatalities in the destruction of Haileybury can only be guessed, but your correspondent saw half a dozen people fall in the flames or dead by the roadside and so much presume that the total list will reach a score, as he was unable to reach the centre of the town. In fifteen minutes after the fire jumped the railway track a thousand buildings were ablaze.

A carload of condensed milk will go out from the Maple Leaf Condensery here to-morrow for relief of the fire sufferers.

Has Chesterville Fire Protection

The village Council at a recent meeting authorized the purchase of sufficient six inch pipe to lay a water main from the corner of Queen and Main streets along King to Queen and south on the latter street toward the bridge for the purpose of extending better fire protection to that portion of the village.

Increasing the protection against fire by providing more efficient means of combatting it is good business, but when a source of water supply is provided only the first step in fire protection has been taken care of. It is true the village has a fire hall and stored therein a sufficient supply of hose to reach almost any point in town It is locked up and the water is locked up as the new supply will be locked up in the new hydrants, until some steps are taken to organize some semblance of a fire brigade.

How many men in Chesterville know how to make a quick coupling of two lengths of hose?

How many men know how to couple the hose to a hydrant and turn on the water?

Who has authority to order the turning on or shutting off of the water at a fire?

Whose business is it to get the hose reel to the nearest hydrant when an alarm of fire is given?

Whose business is it in case of alarm to be at the hydrant with proper tools to turn on the water?

St Mary's church would without a doubt, have been burned to the ground this summer had not the fire fortunately started and was confined under the metal clad tower. Everything was done to fight that fire except lay a line of hose at the beginning, because there is no organization to have that first essential thing done.

Water mains may be laid and hydrants placed at every door: fire halls built and equipment purchased, but fire protection is not half provided unless some kind of organization is provided with a rudimentary knowledge of handling it.

This is a man's size job for the Village Council to take up without delay.

If any ratepayer wishes to express his views on this matter the columns of The Record are open for that very purpose.

Kinsman—Merkley

A very quiet but pretty marriage took place on Friday Sept. 29th, at the Methodist Parsonage, when Mary Pearle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Merkley, was united in marriage to Donald A. Kinsman, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Kinsman of Toronto, Rev. W. T. Brown officiating. The bride looked charming in a suit of navy blue tricotine with hat to match and sable fur chocker and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses and carnations. The bride was attended by her sister Mrs. Eva Errett and Mr. H. J. Jones of Montreal, acted as best man. After the marriage ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to the immediate friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinsman left on the morning train for Toronto and Niagara and on their return will reside in Chesterville.

Had No Contract in Writing So Teacher Cannot Recover

At the last session of the division court at Tamworth on Sept 22nd Miss Alma Sexsmith, Newburgh, brought action against the school trustees of School Section 14, Shetfield township, for the unpaid balance of her salary of $800 a year Miss Sexsmith claimed that she had been engaged for the year.

In rendering judgment, Judge Lavell found that although the dismissal was made on insufficient grounds and the trustees had disregarded the provisions of the Public School Act, plaintiff could not recover as the contract was not made in writing. The conduct of the trustees was in disregard of their duties but as there was no written agreement the action was dismissed without costs.

Fire Hazards of Fuel Shortage

Many new fire hazards are being introduced by the present fuel shortage. Quantities of soft coal are being stored in the basements of dwellings, apartment houses and merchantile buildings and on the premises of factories. Spontaneous combustion is likely to start fires and great care should be shown in the selection of coal and in its storage and use.

When soft coal is used in stoves and furnaces constructed for other fuel, the large amount of soot deposited is apt to clog the smoke pipes and chimneys and cause forcing of the furnaces, while the fumes and gases have a deteriorating effect upon the mortar in chimneys and thus lead to defective flue fires.

Many people are investigating the possibility of using fuel oil burners in their furnaces, because of the difficulty in securing hard coal and their unwillingness to use soft coal because of the dirt and soot. This also will introduce serious fire hazards, because of the storage of oil on the premises, and the danger of feed pipes bursting and starting fires. No such appliance should be considered without ascertaining whether it complies with standard requirements.

Fire hazards which endanger homes should be watched with special care, as women and children run the greatest risk. All heating appliances should be installed and operated with constant attention to the unusual danger due to changes in fuel. Careful inspection should be made of all stoves, furnaces and flues before using them in the fall.

Calgary Holdup Man Routed By Tinned Tomatoes

A volley of tinned tomatoes and soup cubes fired by Fred Langston, a grocer routed two masked and armed holdup men who attempted to rob him in his store Saturday evening. As Langston heaved the tins, one of the robbers opened fire with a revolver. The bullets whistled dangerously near Langston's head, but he gamely reached for another tin, and as it struck the wall it burst, the ripe fruit descending in a shower over the robbers. A bottle of soup cubes almost knocked one of the gunmen off his feet and then the grocer reached for a cheese. This was too much for the gunmen, who lowered their guns and fled. Their flight was hastened by the screams of Mrs. Ollie Lennox, a customer, who dropped to the floor screaming that she had been shot—when a soup cube struck her in the leg.

Killed Wrong Pig

Strange things have occurred in Fitzroy but none more unusual than the following incident which happened at the slaughter of a pig one day last week. A well-known farmer of the Galetta section went down to the 8th, line where the pig was to meet his death. The instrument of execution an axe, was swung mightily up by the owner of the pig and it descended on the tender spot of the porker's skull. However, the force of the blow upset the executioner's equilibrium and he fell from his place of vantage. When he regained his poise again, to the consternation of his assistant and himself the pig was up and looking for more which he got immediately. Unfortunately it wasn't the same pig, so when the bloodthirsty pigkiller had finished, two animals had bit the dust when he would have been satisfied with one.—Arnprior Chronicle.

Boys Now Trying To Mulct Motorists

The Ontario Motor League is in receipt of the following interesting and self-explanatory letter:

Dear Sirs: I should like to explain what seems to be the latest form of extortion from motorists, and feel that the information should be published widely.

A few weeks ago a young lad, about eighteen years of age, came to my office, stating that I had run into him and injured his bicycle, and that if I would pay him $18.00 immediately he would let the matter drop.

After considerable discussion he explained that I had been going west on St. Clair Avenue, and turned south on St. Clarens without putting my hand out or giving any kind of warning, that the rear of my car had caught his wheel and up-set it, so that a motorist following behind had run over him and caused the damage.

I explained to the lad that I had been driving for ten years and absolutely never turned a corner without tooting the horn and signalling with my hand, also that I had a mirror in my car which gave me a clear vision, and that positively I was not connected in any way with any mishap that he might have had. The fellow got very indignant and wanted immediate settlement, or he would have me to court with his witnesses who had seen the accident and recorded the fact that although he had yelled to me I had failed to stop and speeded away.

I obtained his name and address and told him that I would ask the insurance adjuster to call on him, and that the matter would be handled entirely through my insurance company, and that he would hear from them the next day.

I immediately reported the matter to the insurance company.

Next morning as my secretary stepped into the office, the telephone rang, and the young lad was on the phone, and asked that I not bother about the matter, that perhaps he was to some extent to blame and that I was not to do anything further.

At the time I did not think much about it, as I was busy, but last night I happened to tell a friend about it, and he stated that a friend of his had had a similar experience on the Highway just outside of Toronto, and that although he was absolutely positive in his own mind that he had not run into anyone he paid $25.00 to get a receipt in full for all damages. It then occured to me how nervous the young chap was and how anxious he appeared to have an immediate settlement with me and I thought it best to notify the League as a person taking five to ten numbers haphazard in a day could make a pretty fair living through this form of graft.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Difference

A clergyman once told a story concerning a man he had approached for a contri ution towards the church funds. No amount of persuasion would make the man give anything, and at last he said to him, "Why not? Isn't the cause a good one?" "Yes" answered the man, "but the fact of the matter is I owe too much money. I must be just before I'm generous you know." "But surely," said the clergyman, "you owe your Maker a larger debt than you do anybody else?" "That's true," was the reply, "but then He isn't pushing me like the rest of my creditors."

Mistress; "You have seven blouses in the wash this week. My daughter has only two." Gladys; "Your daughter's young man's a bank clerk, mine's a sweep."

"I am miserable," declare l Phyllis. "Why?" asked her friend. "I am beginning to realize that Reginald married me for my money." "Well, at least you have the consolation of knowing that he is not as stupid as he looks."

COMPLETELY FREE OF CONSTIPATION

Tried for Years to Find Relief

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" GAVE IT

Chronic Constipation or insufficient action of the bowels, is one of the great causes of disease. Some authorities even claim that Constipation cannot be permanently corrected. This is a great mistake, because here is the proof that constipation can be cured and the bowels made to act regularly and naturally.

YARMOUTH, N.S.

"For years, I was troubled with Constipation, and had to take laxatives and purgatives all the time. If I neglected to take these, the bowels would refuse to do their work.

About two years ago, a friend advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives", which I did. The first box helped me so much that I obtained further supplies of the remedy and continued the treatment. After using about eight boxes, my bowels were able to perform their particular function without aid.

The relief in my case has been lasting, as up to date, I have never had any further trouble. I can recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to all suffering as I did and I am sure they will derive equal benefit".

A. W. FRANKLIN.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c., or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

Want Gasoline Tins Painted Red

Arising out of a recent tragedy at Sturgeon Falls, in which two young boys were burned to death in their father's home and other members of the family barely escaped with their lives as a result of an error in using gasoline instead of coal oil in the kitchen stove, a resolution was introduced at a meeting of the North Bay Board of Trade, recommending legislation requiring that all cans containing gasoline be painted red with white or black markings and that anyone purchasing gasoline must contain it in a can of this description.

Tommy's Secret

When Thomas placed a rosy apple by the garden gate and then secreted himself behind a hedge, he thought he had done so unobserved. But he was mistaken. An old gentleman approached him and began to lecture: "My boy," he said, "do you not know that you are very wrong in placing that apple by that gate. Some poor boy might be tempted to take it." "Well," said Thomas, "that's just what I want him to do." "Why?" inquired the old gentleman. "Why?" repeated Thomas. 'Because I've hollowed out the inside and filled it with mustard."

Sidestepping Mrs. Grundy

"Why do you go on the balcony when I sing? Don't you like to hear me?"

"It isn't that. I want the neighbors to see that I'm not beating my wife!"

90 Years of Canadian Development

Into the history of The Bank of Nova Scotia has been written ninety years of the life of Canada.

In all that time, The Bank of Nova Scotia has been closely identified with the business and agricultural welfare of the country.

From a few straggling settlements scattered from the Atlantic to the Great Lakes, Canada has grown into a nation spanning the continent.

In that development The Bank of Nova Scotia has had its full share, and the few branches in the Maritime Provinces of 90 years ago have grown into a widespread system that covers practically every place of importance in the Dominion.

The same full service is available to the public at all our branches.

Motor Law Changes

The sifting of suggestions for improving the motor laws of Ontario is no idle hour's task. The Legislative Commission on revision has already received nnmerous important pleas for changes. Among these are the licensing of all drivers of motor vehicles, and the black marking of the ones convicted of offences untill, on a fourth or sixth offence, t ere follows suspension for a certain period The glaring headlight evil, motor owners' liability, parking lights, the spot light, speed limits, and other subjects are dealt with in recommendations to the Commission.

The licensing of individual drivers would be a drastic step. It is often proposed, as a means of elimating reckless drivers, but the objection is at once raised that the majority of drivers are careful, sensible people who ought not to be punished with examinations because of a few daredevils. A preferable method, if it could be carried out, would be a vigorous attack on the reckless ones, letting the others alone. Magistrates ought to have, and to enforce, power of suspension from driving on those convicted of gross carelessness. A jail term is usually handed out now for the offence of driving while under the influence of liquor, but "negligent" driving gets off with a fine, unless there is some material damage done. Far better than licenses for all drivers, with the nervous strain of an official examination—which might be of no value whatever as proof of driving skill in real emergencies—would be the enforcement of a regulation compelling all persons convicted of careless driving to wear for a stated time, a certain plainly visible mark, such as a particular badge, when operating an automobile. Police officials and others could at once distinguish offenders, and take particular care to watch them. This publicity for offenders would probably keep them from driving a car until their period of punishment was over, for everywhere they drove they would get sarcastic attention. The system could be easily arranged. A magistrate's order, a police record, a heavy fine for failure to wear the badge, and jail for getting into a collision when driving without it, would work out splendidly in checking the defiance of the reckless ones. The general mass of motor drivers would then be exempt from Prussian-like supervision.

Among the other suggestions that merit approval are those which advocate use of small single parking lights on the left hand side of a car, the codification of all motor and vehicle laws, the testing of non-glare lights on the cars, and enforcement of the law in this respect, warning signs on overhanging truck loads, and time limit protection for car owners against suits for damages. Ontario's two hundred thousand motor car owners are an important part of the population, and their need of protection against injustice is hardly less than that of the public against the foolhardy drivrs in their ranks.

The Load of Vehicles Act

A general warning to farmers, owners of threshing machines and others who have occasion to transport heavy machinery along the highways of various municipalities has been issued by the county police, says the Ottawa Citizen. They draw the attention of such persons to section two of the Load of Vehicles Act, which governs the transportation of threshing machines, power tractors and other heavy vehicles along the road.

During the last few days several owners of threshing machines have been stopped moving from one farm to another unless they have a permit to move their heavily weighted machines along the county highways. All of those stopped professed ignorance of the law, and before making prosecutions the police decided to issue a warning.

Section two of the Load of Vehicles Act reads;

"No vehicle shall be operated or object moved over or upon such (municipal) highway which has any flange, rib, clamp or other device attached to its wheels or made a part thereof which will injure the highway and no vehicle, object or contrivance for moving heavy loads shall be operated or moved upon or over such highway the weight of which resting upon the surface of said highway, exceeds six hundred and fifty pounds upon any inch in the width of tire, without first obtaining a permit. The Loads of Vehicles Act also provides that no tractin engine, trailer or motor vehicle shall travel on any highway with a weight in excess of twelve tons without first having obtained a permit.

Domestic Electrical Devices May be Fire Hazard

Various domestic electrical devices are being multiplied, the ingenuity of the inventor being backed up by the advertising activities of local electrical companies, which seek to increase the use of their current. The papers and magazines are full of advertisments of electric toasters, plate warmers, hair curlers, electric irons and sewing and washing machines. The interest of the makers is chiefly in disposing of the device and they are not specially interested in seeing that proper installation is secured. Often the connections are made by the purchaser without any knowledge of electrical conditions, and they result in serious hazards. Heaters are often installed on electric circuits the wires of which are already so fully loaded that any considerable increase of the current is likely to set fire to the property. A great many fires have resulted from leaving electric irons on the ironing board without turning off the current. The number of such losses has been so large and the amount involved is so great that the insurance companies are considering the necessity of some form of protection against this increased hazard. Householders should remember that great care should be exercised in the use of electric current for domestic purposes.

The Girl Delinquent

At the Child Welfare Conference in Toronto last week, Magistrate Emily Murphy of Edmonton, handed out the following straight talk on the duty of parents and others responsible for the care of girls of tender years.

In dealing with the subject of the girl delinquent, Magistrate Murphy declared that girls should be taught the wisdom of paying their own way. Many girls had become delinquents because they were grafters and sought free rides, theatre tickets and meals. To girls so inclined she would issue the warning that there was an army of men and women in Canada whose sole occupation was the acquiring of girls for the white slave traffic. Of late years this purpose had been in a large measure achieved through the use of cocaine and heroin as the means to an end. Investigation had disclosed that one third of the drug victims in Canada were girls in their teens and the victims of "snow" or "Hell dust" thus obtained for the traffic were enslaved for life as there was no cure for the habit. It would have been better for the girl victims to have been placed up against a wall and shot. The cases of such girls which had been brought to her attention included one but 13 years of age.

But the blame for the downfall of girls should not all rest upon males. A share of it belonged to municipal bodies in the various big cities of Canada, who, in spite of large civic buildings and magnificent hotels, had so far failed to provide a place to sleep for the girl who happened to become out of work and out of money. The self-righteous mistress who locked the domestic out because she failed to return at a certain hour was another cause of the moral downfall of girls. Another cause was the mother who conducted a boarding house and would on occasion leave the house in charge of a girl of tender age. A great source of danger found in the present day was the growing habit of young girls dressing to attract attention to themselves before they were old enough to know how to guard themselves against certain dangers and temptations they would thus attract. Girls of 13 14 and 15, who ought to be playing with dolls and wearing pinafores were now to be seen parading up and down the streets in clothes that were more loud than becoming. Why parents allowed them to do so was a mystery. They should be brought to realize that by far the largest number of girls who fall before temptation do so before they reach the age of 18, and that the greatest danger period was between the ages of 12 and 15.

Owing to changed social conditions of the present day a girl was supposed to be able to take care of herself, and it was no longer thought unrespectable to walk along the street after dark unescorted, but many a parent of such a girl had learned that a girl of 14 or 15 was no more fit to protect herself than a minnow among a school of sharks.

She also warned parents against giving away to the girl of 16, who, because she had brought home her first pay cheque, feels she should be free from parental restraint. Too many parents allow her to spend her evenings in a way and with companions whom they knew nothing about for fear that if questioned she would leave home. In too many cases these parents discovered when too late that parental restraint should be exercised until the child has reached the age of at least 18 years.

Advice of Boss To His Employers

(New York World)

In a big buyers' exchange in New York, with which buyers from one hundred and forty department stores are associated, Alfred Vanti, who conducts it, recently posted these epigrams for the benefit of his employers. They are headed, "Advice From the Boss:"

Mind your own business and in time you will have a business of your own to mind.

Dishonesty is never an accident. Good men, like good women, can see temptation when they meet it.

Don't lie—it wastes my time and yours. I'm sure to catch you in the end, and that's the wrong end.

Watch your work, don't watch the clock. A long day's work makes a long day short, and a short day's work makes my face long.

You owe so much to yourself that you can't afford to owe anybody else. Keep out of debt or keep out of my place of business.

Give me more than I expect, and I'll pay you more than you expect I can afford to increase your pay if you increase my profits.

Don't kick—if you're worth while correcting, you're worth keeping. I don' waste time cutting specks from decayed apples.

Don't tell me what I'd like to hear. I don't want a valet to my vanity, but I need one for my money.

Don't do anything that hurts your self-respect. The employee who is willing to steal for me is capable of stealing from me.

Oldest Horse in The World
(Cur Dumb Animals)

The ordinary span of life is twenty years, but there is a horse in Catawissa, Pa, the property of the Rev. Dr. Uriah Myers, which is fifty one years old and rated the oldest horse in the world. As a matter of fact, there is no record of any other horse having lived anywhere near as long as this. A short time ago it looked as if the horse, named Clover, might have to be killed, because his owner could not afford to keep him. But the story of his extreme age and admirable character having gone abroad, gifts of money and offers of maintenance came from many sources so that now Clover will be retired from active service on a pension. Moreover, an eminent veterinarian even promises Clover many more years in which to enjoy his good fortune and fame.

When Clover was a young horse he was famed as a racer in Kentucky and has a record of having trotted a mile in 2.22 and paced a mile in 2.17 many years ago, of course. His owner believes he could do fifteen miles a day at present time without any physical strain. He comes of Hambeltonian stock, his head particularly, resembling that of Rysdyk's Hambeltonian. At fifteen years of age he came into the possession of Dr. Myers and for thirty-five years locally served his ministerial master.

Clover has a certain sporting look even yet. He stands a bit shaggy and crocky today, for his half-century legs that carried him a mile in the blue grass country when Jay Eye See wasn't even foaled, never were mates. Oddly enough, Clover isn't lame, because the hoof of the shorter leg is longer and equalizes its length to that of the longer foreleg. He stands 16 hands and weighs about 1,200 pounds, and his condition shows the excellent care his master has given him. His ration, twice daily, consists of one scoop of bran, one of middlings, and two of mixture of oats, clover and molasses, topped off with three ears of corn. It takes him a long time to eat this as he masticates slowly.

According to the veterinarian who examined Clover recently, the horse is sound in wind, and has wonderful clean legs, and there is a lustre to his coat that is remarkable in an animal so old. His only blemish is a cataract on the right eye, but this is not necessarily traceable to old age. It is hard to tell the exact age of a horse by his teeth after his fifteenth year. However, the contour of the mouth changes with age. In a young horse the teeth meet at an obtuse angle, but as the animal grows older the angle becomes more and more acute. Judging by this, Clover has the oldest mouth that veterinarians have ever seen. His encisors are as long as a man's forefinger and straight in the jawbone. The most surprising thing is that the teeth are in as good condition as those of a ten year old horse. His molars are perfect and in this fact undoubtedly lies the secret of his health. The horse is remarkably spry and playful and astonishes one, who knows his age with the quickness of his movements. He lies down and gets up with ease, a sign that he is still many years from his end. One of the first symptoms of marked old age in a horse is the difficulty of lying down and getting up again.

Cattle Relished Mouldy Silage

In view of the reports of trouble arising out of the feeding of mouldy sweet clover silage to cattle, and the fact that the trouble amounting in some cases to death of the animals, has been attributed to the condition of the silage rather than to the crop used in making it, the report of experiments conducted at the Minnesota Experiment Station, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn, will be interesting to live stock feeders in this country. Unfortunately the material of which the silage was made is not designated in the short item that appears in the University Farm Press News, which is as follows;

"Mouldy silage fed to cattle, horses and sheep at the Minnesota Experiment Station, University Farm, by dairy division men, co-operating with university plant pathologists and veterinarians in conducting feeding tests, caused no sickness or apparent ill effects among the animals. In fact some of them seemed to thrive upon the prescribed diet. Only the sheep registered occasional protests against the daily menu. Horses and cattle apparently relished it after the first week.

"A great variety of mouldy silage, sent to the farm from various parts of the state, was fed to the stock. To make the experiment as thorough as possible drenches which were fairly alive with molds in a growing condition were administered. Then the scientists sat back and waited, but nothing happened.

"The experiments, running several months, were prompted by many inquiries concerning moldy silage and the dangers supposed to be connected with it in feeding. Twenty pounds of it were fed daily for about four months to each of five head of cattle. The diet was tried out on young and old animals. Spoiled silage, to which an upstate dairyman had attributed the death of six of his cows, was also used in the feeding experiments at University Farm without any sign of injury to the stock.

"University investigators do not contend there are no elements of danger under all the varying conditions affecting silage, but because of the experiment made at the farm with three classes of livestock they feel that molds are not dangerous in the general plan of feeding.

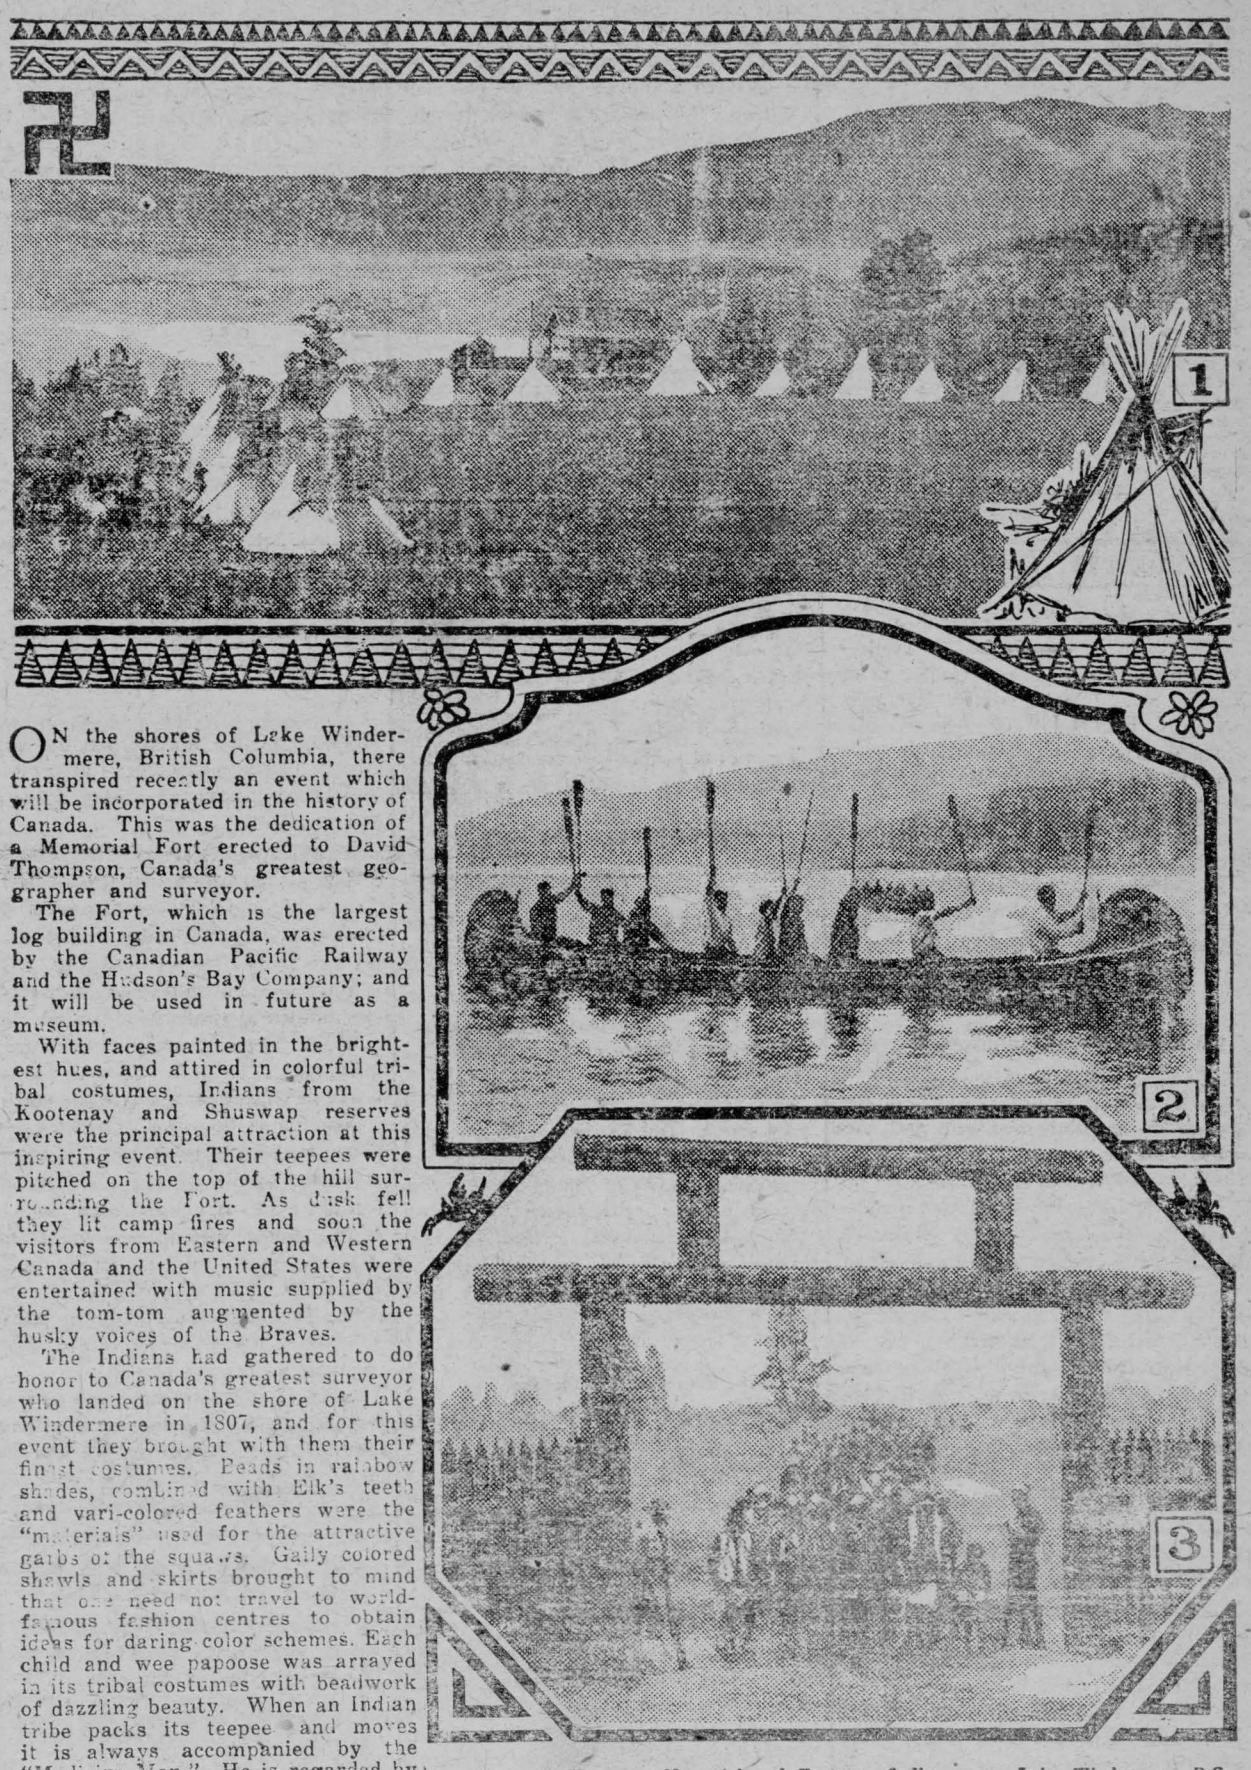
Proper Storage For Potatoes

Thousands of bushels of potatoes are lost annually by careless storage—by being put in wet in comparatively warm and illy-ventilated cellars and by being piled in great heaps. Touching on the matter the Dominion Horticulturist in Bulletin No 90 of the Dominion Experimental Farms, that is to be had upon application to the Publications Branch, Ottawa, furnishes advice that could profitably be well heeded. In the first place, potatoes should be stored as far as possible in perfect darkness in a cool, well ventilated cellar. Instead of heaping the potatoes against the wall, slats should be nailed, a little apart, about six inches or more from the wall. A temporary floor should also be laid a similar distance above the permanent floor with cracks between the boards. This plan will permit air to circulate under and through the pile. If large quantities have to be stored and the piles have to be made very large, square ventilators formed of slats and running from the top to the bottom of the heaps can be placed here and there, which, with the ventilation derived from the spaces below and at the sides, will keep the potatoes in far better condition than if they are packed solidly. Another plan for storing the tubers is to put them in large crates made from small slats with small interstics between. The temperature is an important point. While every percaution should be taken against frost, the heat should not exceed from 33 to 35 degrees F. A further matter of importance is to provide some means of letting in cool air when Spring is at hand to prevent sprouting. The best method is to let the cool air in at night and keep the cellar closed during the day.

Investigations by the Department of Agriculture show that the gypsy moth cannot do much damage in parts of the country where the thermometer goes as low as twenty-five degrees below zero. The eggs that are subject to such a low temperature do not hatch. Only those hatch that are covered by snow and are protected against the cold.

The State of Louisiana requires lumbermen to leave uncut and "unbled" for turpentine at least one healthy young pine tree to the acre to reseed the land. It has also passed laws encouraging reforestation, and limiting the taxing of lands the owners of which enter into contract with the state to devote the cut-over land for a term of years to growing a new crop of trees.

The David Thompson Memorial



ON the shores of Lake Windermere, British Columbia, there transpired recently an event which will be incorporated in the history of Canada. This was the dedication of a Memorial Fort erected to David Thompson, Canada's greatest geographer and surveyor.

The Fort, which is the largest log building in Canada, was erected by the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Hudson's Bay Company; and it will be used in future as a museum.

With faces painted in the brightest hues, and attired in colorful tribal costumes, Indians from the Kootenay and Shuswap reserves were the principal attraction at this inspiring event. Their teepees were pitched on the top of the hill surrounding the Fort. As dusk fell they lit camp fires and soon the visitors from Eastern and Western Canada and the United States were entertained with music supplied by the tom-tom augmented by the husky voices of the Braves.

The Indians had gathered to do honor to Canada's greatest surveyor who landed on the shore of Lake Windermere in 1807, and for this event they brought with them their finest costumes. Beads in rainbow shades, combined with Elk's teeth and vari-colored feathers were the "materials" used for the attractive garbs of the squaws. Gaily colored shawls and skirts brought to mind that one need not travel to world-famous fashion centres to obtain ideas for daring color schemes. Each child and wee papoose was arrayed in its tribal costumes with beadwork of dazzling beauty. When an Indian tribe packs its teepee and moves it is always accompanied by the "Medicine Man" He is regarded by his fellowmen as gifted with rare talents. The "Medicine Man" of the Kootenay tribe was, perhaps, the most picturesque figure of the pageant. His costume was most colorful and his headdress was unique.

[illegible] tribes entered into the spirit of [illegible] event [illegible] keen interest and were responsible for the pageant being such a huge success. The second day's programme included activities of a more modern nature, and here, again, members of the Kootenay and Shuswaps carried off prizes which they captured in almost every case, with little effort.

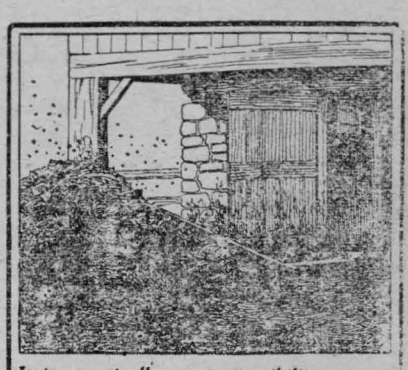
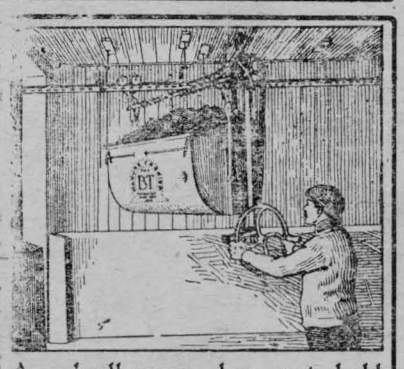
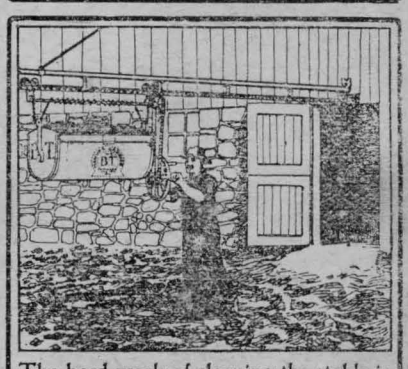
Day in and day out, the hard work of cleaning the stable has to be done. Stable cleaning with a wheelbarrow is a monotonous, hard, disagreeable chore. It is hard to wheel a heavy wheelbarrow load through a muddy yard and up a slippery plank. And the worst of it is, this hard, disagreeable chore has to be done every day.



It is practically an impossibility to get the manure far enough away from the stable. The conditions in the yard make it impossible. Manure piles right up close to the stable give off ammonia fumes that spoil paint and woodwork, rot harness and at the first opportunity breed flies.



A wheelbarrow does not hold much at a load, which means many trips before the work is done. The BT Carrier holds three times as much as a wheelbarrow. It will tackle 800 lbs. in one load.



The hard work of cleaning the stable is cut in two with a manure carrier. It runs on overhead track so it does not matter about the state of the yard. No planks to lay; no snow to shovel; no more pushing to the top of the pile with a wheelbarrow.
