Crowds Throng Show Spite of Postponement

Keenly Contested Races, Snappy Ball Game and High Class of Exhibits of Horses, Cattle and Poultry Prove Good Drawing Programme.

With the weather man relenting from his unfavourable mood of the day before, Chesterville Horse and Cattle Show was carried out in perfect fall weather last Thursday afternoon after having been postponed from Wednesday. A large crowd gathered, attracted by an excellent programme of races and baseball and the excellence of the horses and cattle shown.

Smiths Falls St. Lawrence league team and Chappie Johnson's Coloured All-Stars put up a snappy game on the diamond which went ten innings before Smiths Falls emerged the winners by 3 to 2.

Nineteen entries were received for the three races with exceedingly good time being made on a track which was not overly fast owing to the preceding day's downpour. Nothwithstanding this, Turcott's Bedford Gratton captured the second and third heats in the Free-For-All in 2.10¼ and 2.10¾, respectively, to take down first money in the every-heat-a-race plan.

WHY NOT SPECIALIZE IN THESE ATTRACTIONS?

AT THE FAIR Thursday afternoon last a feature that attracted a great deal of attention was the exhibition given by Willie Servage and his colts. These animals had been taught to do several quite clever stunts which showed what might be done by intelligent training. It might not be a bad idea if the fair management would offer a prize for the best trained domestic animals, whether colt, calf or pig, and make this a feature of the afternoon before the grand stand. It would be unusual and entertaining to fair visitors and quite out of the ordinary.

Joint Meeting Is Held By Ladies' Aid and W M.S.

Large Number in Attendance at Sunday School Rooms of Trinity United Church.

The recent meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Trinity United church took the form of a joint meeting with the Women's Missionary Society, held in the Sunday School hall when a large number were in attendance.

The W.M.S. meeting was in charge of Mrs. L. H. Doering and took the form of a questionnaire on the annual report which proved to be very instructive. Mrs. Doering was assisted by Mrs. Tait. Miss Addie Campderros contributed a solo in her usual pleasing manner. After a business meeting by the Ladies' Aid, refreshments were served by Mrs. H. Durant, Mrs. Albert Smith, Mrs. Saucier and Mrs. D. McElheran. The meeting closed with the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Underwriter's Inspector Finds Fire Protection Good

Good Time is Made by Fire Fighters in Test Run.—Water Pressure Satisfactory at Hydrants Tested.

Last Saturday morning about 9.30, citizens were startled by the sounding of the fire alarm only to find that it was an inspection call from the inspector for the Fire Insurance Underwriters for the purpose of testing out the efficiency of the fire brigade. A quick response was made and a line of hose laid at the corner of King and Main streets within five minutes and a stream of water flowing. Hydrants at different points were tested for pressure which in all cases was found to be much better than at the last test. The only exception taken to the equipment was in the condition in which some of the house was found but as new hose is on order with the manufacturers this condition will very shortly be remedied. A recommendation was made that several members be added to the strength of the brigade, all of which leads us to believe that our fire protection is at least normal in a place of this size.

Local Families Bereaved as Deaths Follow Crash

Former Chesterville Girl, Mrs. J. Mills, and Husband Die Following Three Car Crash.

Last Tuesday evening when an automobile crash on No. 2 Highway seven miles west of Belleville resulted in the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mills of Wingham, the Hamilton families of Chesterville were bereaved in the loss of a sister and brother-in-law.

Mr. Mills and his wife, formerly Donalda Hamilton, of Wingham, accompanied by Mrs. Wilcox of Woodslee, after visiting relatives here for a few days, started on the return journey to Western Ontario, having as their guest Mrs. Thos. Hamilton, of Ottawa. When the other side of Belleville, the Mills car, driven by Mr. Mills, was crashed into from the rear by another car going in the same direction, and thrown into the eastbound lane of traffic where a third car, driven by Henry Walden of Ottawa, crashed into it.

Mrs. Mills was fatally injured and passed away in a Belleville hospital on Thursday. Mr. Mills was seriously injured and was taken to his home in Wingham, after receiving treatment at Belleville, but passed away as a result of his injuries on Tuesday of this week. Mrs. Wilcox and Mrs. Thos. Hamilton suffered considerably from shock. The funeral of Mrs. Mills was held at Wingham on Monday while that of her husband will be held this afternoon.

The injured in Mr. Walden's car were Henry Walden, who suffered a fracture of the right leg; Mrs. Walden, who suffered shock; and Mrs. Ross, who sustained a broken leg.

Presentation Made Miss Leila McGee

Mrs. Jas. Hughes is Hostess at Afternoon Tea.—Gift of Walnut Tea Wagon.

Mrs. Jas. Hughes was the hostess of a delightful tea Friday afternoon at which Miss Leila McGee was the guest of honour. Mrs. A. E. Bolster assisted Mrs. Hughes in receiving the guests. The rooms were beautifully decorated with quantities of flowers from the lovely garden of the hostess, gladioli and dahlias being used in the living rooms.

The dining room was a bower of beauty with roses and maiden hair fern. Over the tea table was suspended a pink and white parasol with silver rain hanging from the sides and pink and green ribbons fastened in rosettes at the four corners of the table. Tall pink tapers and a silver basket filled with "Mrs. John Laing" roses completed a very charming table over which Miss Mae Rose presided, assisted by Mrs. W. O. Dixon, Mrs. J. H. Fulton and Miss Marcia Hughes.

An added pleasure during the afternoon were the solos sung by Mrs. W. N. Fulton and instrumental music by Mrs. Geo. W. Reaburn.

Presentation of a handsome walnut tea wagon was made to Miss McGee by her friends to which she charmingly made response, thanking all for the unexpected honour.

Others present were: Mrs. O. D. Casselman, Mrs. Saucier, Mrs. G. C. Lacey, Miss H. Moad, Mrs. D. Allison, Mrs. C. W. Casselman, Mrs. H. E. Wales, Mrs. O. L. King, Mrs. P. G. Hewitt, Mrs. G. H. Barkley, Mrs. A. B. Clayton Mrs. T. J. McGee, Mrs. C. L. Hamlen Mrs. Jas. Hanna, Mrs. R. Dillabough and the Misses McGee.

The hostess and guests regretted that, owing to illness, Mrs. W. B. Lawson was unable to attend.

THE POWER OF GASOLINE.

TWO local young men had a nerve-racking evidence the other day of the explosive power of gasoline. They were cleaning up their yard and had a bon-fire of rubbish gathered up. Several oil drums, in which gasoline had at one time been stored but which had been used as supports for a platform for a couple of years, were being moved when a burning brand came too close to the open bung-hole of one. The result was the top of the drum was propelled about 60 feet in the air, landing in a neighbour's yard, and the remainder of the drum crumpled up. Luckily no one was injured.

Railroad Worker Killed Second is Badly Injured

Boat Special Crashes Into Hand Car East of Finch, Hurling Body of Jonah Alguire 100 Feet.—Injured Man Rushed to Hospital.

Last Thursday afternoon, shortly after two o'clock while a Finch section gang on the C.P.R. was working about two and a half miles east of Finch station, Jonah Alguire, aged 55, of Finch, was instantly killed and Oscar McConnell had a leg broken, while William McMillan, the third member of the gang, escaped without injury, when their handcar was struck by the engine of a special passenger train carrying passengers from the Empress of Australia which had docked that day at Quebec.

While the men had been working on the eastbound track, they had left their handcar on the up-track and failed to notice the approach of the train in time to remove their car from the rails. The impact threw the hand car into the air and is said to have hurled Alguire's body more than 100 feet. McConnell and McMillan both jumped clear before the crash but the former was struck by a flying piece of the handcar and had his leg broken.

Jonah Alguire is survived by his widow. Two brothers, Clarence and Roy, live in Finch, and a sister, Mrs. Clarence Dunbar, lives at Lyn, O.

Muldoon Inquest Followed By Second Perjury Charge

Suspended Fire Chief at Smiths Falls Will Appear With Mrs. Gleason on Charge of False Testimony.

Smiths Falls, Sept. 9.—Police today arrested John Miller, suspended Smiths Falls fire chief, and charged him with perjury in connection with his evidence at the inquest into the death of William Muldoon, locomotive engineer, whose body was found in an automobile a week ago.

Miller's arrest was the second in the case. Previously, police arrested Mrs. John Gleason, another inquest witness, and charged her with giving false evidence at the inquest. Mrs. Gleason was released on $10,000 bail.

Miller appeared before Magistrate J. T. Kirkland and was charged with committing perjury "by falsely swearing that he found the body of William Muldoon crouched in the front seat of a car on Jasper avenue in front of the residece of Milburn Baker on Sept. 1."

Miller told the inquest he and Baker had driven with Muldoon Sept. 1 and had left him after he promised to "pick them up later" and that they went to Baker's home to await him. He said they subsequently heard a car drive to the door and, investigating when Muldoon failed to appear, found his body in the car.

Miller's bail was set at $10,000. He was not asked to plead or elect trial and further hearing was set for Sept. 16.

Lost in Wilds Four Days Young Manitoba Boy Dies

Boy Found Pathetically Huddled Under Shrubbery by Unemployed Carpenter.

St. Boniface, Man., Sept. 9.—Five-year-old Jack Pike, found in bushes 11 miles south of here to-day, after being lost 96 hours, died at 9.40 p.m. 10.40 p.m., E.S.T.) to-night despite a blood transfusion and the best of medical care.

The boy wandered away from his parents while picking blueberries last Thursday afternoon in the St. Norbert district, 12 miles south of Winnipeg.

The lad was found this afternoon by E. Olson, unemployed carpenter, who had taken part in the search since Saturday morning. Rushed to hospital here, the boy was given a blood transfusion, his father providing the blood.

Olson discovered the lad huddled pathetically under some shrubbery. The boy was about two miles from where he left his father, Charles Pike while picking blueberries. He was only 150 yards from the Red River.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Swede Roots for Seed.

Swede roots for seed may be stored either in outside pits or in a dark, well ventilated cellar, free from frost, yet sufficiently cool to keep them from sprouting too early in the spring. When the roots are pulled the tops should be cut off about an inch to an inch and a half from the crown.

A Good Time to Raise a Foal.

According to the Dominion Animal Husbandman there is at present a definite scarcity of good, fresh, young horses for farm and city work and an increasing demand for them at fairly remunerative prices. Since it takes four or five years to breed, raise and develop a horse to marketable age, it will be some time before the demand can be satisfied, therefore present prices may be expected to hold or even improve for a number of years. It would seem, therefore, that it would be a profitable venture for any farmer who has a reasonably good draft brood mare, that he can spare from heavy work, to breed her and raise a foal.

Cheese Board Order.

The Local Board hereby orders all cheese manufactured by the following factories shall be sold through the medium of an organized cheese board: Registered Numbers 840, 871, 627, 708, 1153 763 591 998 1393 883 872 320 706 529 922 91 737 996. And further, that the South Leeds Cheese Patrons' Association is hereby designated as the agency through which all cheese from the aforesaid factories shall be marketed. Factories are exempt from this order during which they are making a special type of cheese, such as High Coloured, Washed Curd, Triplets, Twins or any cheese made on special order which is other than the regular export type. This order became effective on and after August 31st, 1935.

Potatoes as Stock-Feed.

When the true value of potatoes as feed for live stock and poultry is realized, much larger quantities than at present employed will be used. With high prices for stock and poultry feeds and a surplus of potatoes in Eastern Canada, stock raisers near the plentiful supplies of potatoes have a good opportunity to reduce their feed bills by feeding potatoes. Other countries make use of potatoes as stock feed. In Germany, for instance, only 30 per cent of the total potato crop is used for table purposes and approximately 40 per cent for stock feeding. On the other hand, in Canada 64.5 per cent of the crop finds its way to the table and only about 11 per cent for stock feeding. Stock raisers would be well advised to inform themselves on the proper methods of feeding potatoes in the rations to ensure the best results. In brief, potatoes are in fact "watered" carbohydrate concentrates. They may be used, therefore, as a substitute for barley and corn, as in the rations of pigs, in which case it is important to bear in mind that four pounds of potatoes are equal to one pound of cereal meal.

Cutworm Control.

Although the farmer knows much about the matter the amateur gardener little suspects that long before he sows his highly prized seeds an enemy has been waiting in preparation for immediate assault. This is the cutworm which attacks all kinds and conditions of plants, and so far as agriculture is concerned, is such a menace that each year the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture publish the latest intelligence on the most effective means of counteracting the ravages of this destructive pest. Bran bait has given most effective control for many years and it is made up as follows: bran 20 pounds; Paris green, ½ pound; molasses, 1 quart, and water about 2½ gallons. In making the bait, the dry ingredients should be mixed thoroughly first. The molasses is then stirred into the water and this solution added to the bran and Paris Green. In mixing the bait, only enough water should be added to reduce the material to the consistency of wet sawdust. The mixture must not be made sloppy but should be so that it will crumble in the hands and slip through the fingers easily. Land that was heavily infested last year should be treated before the plants are set out. This is done by broadcasting the bait at the rate of 15-20 pounds per acre a few nights before transplanting. The bait should be spread in the evenings just before dusk, and, if possible, on a still, warm night.

Assistance for Sheep Industry.

Ontario sheep breeders and sheep raisers are again to have the benefits of the Ram Grading and Ram Premium Policies. The Dominion government, realizing the importance of a continuous policy in the production and use of good rams are providing liberal assistance so that farmers may buy good rams with confidence at a reasonable cost to the purchaser. The Government is anxious that pure bred breeders of sheep should continue to improve the purebred flocks so that better quality rams and ewes may be produced. Furthermore, it is hoped that as a result of the use of graded rams on grade flocks throughout the provice, the quality of market lambs will show a marked improvement.

All purebred breeders will be given an opportunity to make application for the Ram Grading Service and the premium which will be paid on graded rams will be as follows:

On the Purchase of	Bonus Payable By Dominion Dept. Agriculture
XX Ram Lamb	$ 4.00
XX Yearling Ram	6.00
XXX Ram Lamb	6.00
XXX Yearling Ram	10.00

These premiums apply only on rams officially graded under the Federal Ram Grading Policy in 1935.

Applications for Ram Grading should be mailied to James Telfer, at Paris, Ont.

Housing Farm Equipment.

Want of care of farm equipment causes heavy inroads into the operating costs of a farm, and the fact is not always appreciated that a machine should not be left out in a field or shed unless properly protected at all times from the effects of weather. It is not always feasible to afford this sort of protection to machinery on a farm, but a great deal more can be done to prevent deterioration than is sometimes the case. Machinery requires suitable housing all the year around, if the overhead is to be kept in check, although often in the exigencies of farming this is not always an easy matter. In the absence of proper protection from the weather, rust and decay play havoc with the various parts, and careful farmers make it a rule to get their machinery under cover as soon as possible. These farmers know that stabling for machinery is as necessary as for the livestock. Besides building inexpensive but efficient sheds for their machines, they make it a rule to inspect each machine every day to see that the bearings have been properly oiled, that the nuts are tight, and the working parts are in alignment and working smoothly. These precautions have saved money, prevented loss through delay, and obviated exasperation and worry. The present-day machine-worked farm really requires to be equipped with a forge, an anvil, a stock of dies, a drill, a tool grinder and sets of hammers, wrenches, punches and chisels, not to mention a supply of stock repairs for replacement of parts.

Former Glengarry M.P. Narrowly Misses Death

Angus McGillis Passenger in Car Rammed From Rear by Five-ton Truck.—Both Vehicles Wrecked.

Cornwall, Sept. 9.—Angus McGillis, former M.P. for Glengarry, narrowly escaped death or serious injury this afternoon when an automobile in which he was riding was struck by a truck and badly wrecked.

Mr. McGillis was a passenger in a light sedan driven by Napoleon Saucier, North Lancaster, which was proceeding along King's Highway No. 2, west of Lancaster village. The car was struck from the rear by a five-ton truck driven by Teddy Bernstein, Toronto, with such force that the entire body of the car was collapsed like an accordion. By some miracle, neither occupant of the car suffered injury. The truck took to the ditch and was badly damaged.

"Father, how far is it between your ears?"

"I think it is 7½ inches," he answered.

"No, father, it is half way round the block," she declared.

The Quality Remains Exactly The Same. Only The Price Is Changed.

Dating from to-day, the price of first quality house paints manufactured and sold by the undersigned companies is reduced from $4.65 to $3.75 per gallon.

There has been no change in market conditions or manufacturing costs to justify this step. We feel, however, there is urgent need for action that will make it possible for householders to obtain the highest quality paints at the lowest price consistent with strict maintenance of quality.

Thousands of people all over the country have been forced to put off much needed painting. Thousands more have been misled by "bargain" prices into using inferior paint of little or no value. Cloverdale Resident's Death Came Verv Unexpectedly

A. B. Cinnamon, 66, Was Prosperous Farmer Who Had Spent His Entire Life in Vicinity.

Very unexpectedly on Friday evening last, death came to Mr. A. B. "Ben" Cinnamon who resided about four miles north of Winchester at Cloverdale. He had been at his usual farm work during the day and had helped with the milking in the evening after which he complained of not feeling well. A doctor was summoned but a few minutes later Mr. Cinnamon breathed his last.

Mr. Cinnamon was in his 67th year and had spent his life in that vicinity being a successful farmer, and a good neighbour. He leaves his wife, four sons and three daughters to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father. The sons reside at or near home, and the daughters are: Mrs. Fred Lannin, Winchester; Mrs. Jas. Fawcett, Mountain Ridge, and Miss Stella at home.

The funeral service, which was largely attended, was held at the family home on Sunday at two p.m., and was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. S. Atchison, assisted by Rev. D. W. Summers and Rev. Mr. Burns. Mrs. P. Durant sang "Does Jesus Care?" Interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Estimated Loss of $5000 As Winchester Barn Burns

Fire of Unkown Origin Breaks Out Just After Six o'Clock Last Night to Completely Destroy Barns.

More than $5,000 damage was caused last evening by fire of unknown origin which broke out on the farm of William Hay, on the outskirts of Winchester village shortly after six o'clock.

A barn, the largest in the district, and containing the season's store of hay, about 60 tons, much grain and a new hayloader; an adjoining horse stable and a small dairy were all destroyed.

The blaze, which lasted about an hour attracted all the residents of the town and the Winchester fire brigade, captained by John Fader, fought the flames with all their equipment. A strong west wind prevailed and embers were blown to the roof of the farmhouse of John McCauley, half a mile distant, where a hole was burned in the shingles before the fire was extinguished.

The first arrivals on the scene helped Mr. Hay remove the horses from the stables but they were unable to get the hayloader from the barn.

GLEANINGS FROM THE GREENS

By The Secretary.

Thursday night, Hamlen found some easy picking when he drew Hanna for lead and Willis Harper vice. The teams all played one man short, Bernice Woods filling in to make up the draw. With a little practice Bernice would be back to his old form of a few years ago. Eric had his foot done up when he lost a rubber and had to substitute cloths. Ham won three games straight, Woods won one, tied one and lost one; Eric won one and lost two, while the best Art could do was a tie and two losses.

The line-up:

Hanna, W. Harper, Hamlen, skip—.....6 6 7—19

Marcellus, Merkley, Woods, skip—.....5 4 7—16

David, Plantz, Casselman, skip—.....4 8 3—15

B. Woods, Hess, Robertson, skip—.....5 2 3—10

Tuesday night, Dixon and Hanna each took rinks in to the Point tournament in Ottawa under the auspices of the P.B.L.A. District 16. The local boys did not get in the high score, the winners being both from the Ottawa Lawn Bowling Club, Martin Rosenthal getting first and Jack Bradley second. There was a large entry and a good time is reported by all.

Wednesday night the boys turned out for prize night and some close games were played. The night was one of the finest enjoyed this season and when the gang got properly warmed up there was plenty of rooting. Hanna won the prize with three wins, taking Hutt, Dixon and Robertson in a row. Doc Hutt lost his first to Hanna, trimmed Robertson to the tune of 7 to 1 but lost to Bill Dixon 6 to 2. Art got away to a good start when he took the Dixon-Hamlen combination for a 7 to 1 win but went down to Hutt and Hanna in the next two games. Bill Dixon won his last game after getting a late start and spoiled Doc Hutt's chances to get in the money.

Gilroy, Haldane Durant, Wales, Woods, Hanna—skip.....5 6 6—17

Monday night two rinks from thiis club will go to Prescott to try to lift the Higgins Cup, and next week we expect Prescott to play for the Birks Trophy on the local greens, four rinks to compete 21 ends, total score to count.

Four Candidates to Fight For Election in Stormont

Reconstruction Party Places Candidate to Give Largest Number on Ballot Ever Known.

For the first time in the history of the riding, Stormont electors will mark a ballot listing candidates of four parties on October 14th. Nathan Copeland, Cornwall Township farmer, was named at a well attended convention at Finch last night as standard-bearer of the Reconstruction party. Conservative, Liberal and Independent Social Credit candidates are already in the field.

Mr. Copeland is a former reeve of Cornwall township and has been assessor for the municipality for many years. He was a U.F.O. candidate in the provincial election in 1922. No ballot was necessary at last night's convention as Mr. Copeland was the sole nominee.

Dr. C. A. Patterson, Jasper, Reconstruction candidate in Grenville-Dundas, was the chief speaker. His address was featured by emphatic denial of a rumoured agreement between Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and Hon. H. H. Stevens for the mergering of their parties after the election.

UNUSUALLY TALL MILLET.

Not only does corn grow to great lengths in this district. Last week Mr. Lorne Marcellus brought a stalk of Hungarian millet to this office which had been taken from a crop growing on his place which measured 62 inches with heads about six inches long.

Archbisop J. C. Roper Visits Holy Trinity Congregation

Service of Confirmation Held Sunday Morning With Large Congregation Present.

Archbishop J. C. Roper, of Ottawa, paid his annual visit to the Parish of Winchester on Sunday, being at Holy Trinity church in town for the administration of confirmation at the morning service. A large congregation was present to hear His Grace and take part in the service which began with Morning Prayer to the Third Collect and then the service of laying on of hands.

The elderly Archbishop voiced his pleasure at observing the church and the grounds in such splendid condition and then delivered a very fine sermon on "Personal Freedom." We are only free, he said, when we are doing those things which are our duty. The moment we say to ourselves we will do as we like, we will be free, then we become slaves to some set of habits. To be free we must recognize our limitations. The freedom under British rule was compared with conditions existing in three other countries at the present time. The closing part of his sermon was addressed to the candidates for confirmation, with three helpful suggestions given to help them through the added responsibilities that would now be theirs. The confirmees were presented to His Grace by the rector, Rev. G. Oliver Davies.

During the offertory, Mr. G. W. Brooks sang the very appropriate solo, "My Task" The flowers on the altar were placed by the ladies of the Guild.

Student Keeps His Promise To Brockville Court

17-Year-Old Youth Asks Magistrate For Receipt to Keep as Reminder of First and Last Escapade.

Brockville, Ont.—In July, a youth of 17 years, of good appearance and dress, was taken into custody by R.C.M.P. constables along with 15 transients for stealing rides on C.N.R. trains and, when he appeared before Magistrate Wright in court, told a story of being a scholar bent on going to Ottawa for the purpose of seeing for the first time the Capital of Canada.

His parents were unable to finance his trip, which was the first he had made away from home.

Magistrate Wright believed his story and let him off with a fine of $5. He had $3 on his person, of which he left $2 as part payment of his fine. Later he sent another dollar and yesterday morning a money-order for the remainder of the amount against him was received with a letter thanking the magistrate for his kindness and stating he was now "alumnus princeps" of the collegiate he attends, having won five scholarships, the highest in his province.

He asked that the magistrate write him a letter acknowledging receipt of the full amount of the fine, which he intends cherishing "as a sort of a first and last escapade."

Premier Bennett's Speech Cut Short by Radio Limit

Rigid Radio Time Limit Leaves Three Pages of Manuscript Referring to Farm Conditions Unread.

Ottawa.—Premier R. B. Bennett had practical experience with the limitations which radio imposes upon a public speaker when he was cut off with three pages of his manuscript still unread.

As a matter of fact it was the prime minister himself who cut short his address. Speaking with his watch in his hand, he saw that he had only 40 seconds left of the half hour for which he had contracted. He refused, therefore, to break into any other person's time, and simply cut short his speech.

The pages which were unread were those concerning minimum wages for farmers.

THICK OR THIN.

O MANY PEOPLE, thin blood means the same as poor health. They speak of "good rich blood" as if it were the trade mark of robust health.

The blood is an important part of the body. There are various diseases and certain disorders of the blood, but the most remarkable thing about the blood is how little it changes in certain respects despite a variety of changing conditions.

There are salts and minerals in the blood of which sodium chloride or table salt is the largest constituent. Under ordinary conditions the concentration of these salts in the blood is kept at the same level. They are lost from the body in the urine and sweat, but a reserve is stored in the skin whence it is called forth as required. The concentration in the blood is controlled by the kidneys.

The blood is slightly alkaline. Those who speak of their blood's being too acid are evidently ignorant of the fact that if their blood were to become even barely acid they would die, and if it were to swing a fraction more to the alkaline side convulsions would occur.

These things are mentioned to remind our readers that the human body, as evidenced by the blood, has a remarkable ability to keep on running smoothly because of its capacity to adjust to changing conditions.

But just because of this, there is no excuse to abose the body by calling upon it to meet unusual and severe strains, through carelessness or ignorance. There is a point beyond which lies danger. Repeated strains may cause a premature wearing-out; it is better to keep the demands within reason.

Thin blood, poor health and other complaints are most common in the spring because during the winter so many people fail to live in such a way as to give their bodies a fair chance. For one thing, they deprive themselves of fresh air. Fresh air is just as desirable in winter as in summer, and it can be had the year around without cost. It is outside your doors and windows, waiting for you, and it will come in if you will only give it a chance. Leave your bedroom window open a little each night, and so allow yourself to sleep in fresh air.

TEMPTING LIVER RECIPES.

WHETHER the doctor advises liver in your diet or not, it is always good for you—and perhaps by including it in your menus you might be able to keep a couple of jumps ahead of the doctor.

Aside from its dietary value, liver is a valuable addition to our meals as it has a flavour which is different and so will add variety, and there are a number of very attractive methods of serving it.

COLD BOILED LIVER.

The words "cold boiled liver" perhaps do not sound very tempting but they are no criterion of the taste. Liver boiled until tender with the addition of salt and a few mixed spices is worth a top place in your list of cold meats.

LIVER SANDWICHES.

No. 1 Place thin slices of cold boiled liver between buttered slices of bread.

No. 2 Chop cold boiled liver and mix with salad dressing and chopped pickles, to form a paste which can then be used as a sandwich spread.

SCALLOPED LIVER AND RICE.

1 cup rice
1 quart water
2 tablespoons butter
1 lb. calf's or lamb's liver
2 cups stock
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons fat
Crumbs
Salt and pepper

Boil the rice in the water and mash smooth with the fat. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Boil the liver, drain, chop fine and season. Heat the stock, fat and flour; add chopped liver. Arrange rice and liver in layers in a buttered casserole. Top with buttered crumbs and brown in the oven.

Cooked tomatoes may be added to the rice if desired.

POTATOES OR TOMATOES STUFFED WIH LIVER

Broil liver until cooked through; put through a meat grinder. Season with salt, pepper and onion juice. Moisten with tomato juice or boiled salad dressing. Fill baked potato shells, green peppers or tomatoes with this mixture and in the case of the tomatoes or green peppers bake in the oven; if baked potatoes are used, heat thoroughly before serving.

LIVER LOAF.

Season ground broiled liver with salt and pepper, moisten with tomato juice. Place in a buttered baking dish, cover with crumbs and brown in a moderate oven.

LIVER SALAD.

½ cup cold boiled chopped liver
½ cup diced carrots
½ cup diced celery
1 teaspoon chopped onion
Salt

Mix all ingredients together with boiled salad dressing. Place in mounds on lettuce leaves. Garnish with slices of tomato and a sprig of parsley.

The carrots may be either raw or cooked according to the preference.

CALF'S LIVER WITH VEGETABLES.

1 pound liver
1-3 cup cubed carrots
1-3 cup cubed onions
1-3 cup cubed celery
½ teaspoon pepper berries
6 cloves
Small piece of bay leaf
2 cups hot water or brown stock
2 tablespoons butter

Place liver dredged with flour and seasoned with salt and pepper in a well-greased casserole. Surround with the cubed vegetables; sprinkle with spices and add stock or water. Cover tightly and cook in a slow oven two hours. Remove the cover the last half hour of cooking to allow liver to brown. Remove the liver to a platter and set aside in a warm place. Strain the stock fom the vegetables and use for making a brown sauce. Pour sauce around liver and vegetables, serve hot.

SAUTÉD LIVER WITH TOMATO SAUCE.

Cut liver into slices one-half inch thick; cover with boiling water; let stand five minutes. Drain; remove membrane and skin. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Sauté in hot fat over a moderate heat. Place on a warmed platter and pour over it the following sauce:

1½ cups canned tomatoes
1 cup water
2 cloves
2 allspice berries
2 pepper berries
Piece of bay leaf
2 sprigs of parsley
1 slice of onion
3 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cook the first seven ingredients 15 minutes. Press through a sieve; there should be 2 cups tomato stock. Brown onion in butter, then remove onion; Add flour and seasonings to the butter; mix well. Add tomato stock gradually; stir and cook until thick.

A little chopped liver added to hash will improve the flavour.

* * * *

Broiling of meat is done over or under or in front of an open fire or other direct heat. The meat should be turned at first to sear the outer surface and retain the juices.

* * * *

Baked potatoes make an excellent addition to the menu of your early fall picnics. They can be easily prepared by placing in a covered baking dish (you might use an empty coffee can) which can be placed directly over the fire. If you choose small or medium-sized potatoes they will bake in about half an hour.

* * * *

Good beef should have a bright red colour and a moist juicy surface when freshly cut; the suet should be crumbly, dry and white in colour; there should be a thick, solid edge of straw-coloured fat.

Good veal should be a faint pink colour with little or no edge of fat. Flecks of fat in the meat should show a pinkish tinge.

Sunday School Teacher: "Who knows what happens to the person who never thinks of the soul, but only of the body?"

Little Jane: "I know; they get fat."

The late Uncle Joe Cannon was telling Chauncey M. Depew about a fish he had almost caught.

"About the size of a whale, wasn't it?" asked Mr. Depew, softly.

"I was baitin' with whales," answered Uncle Joe.

Wifie: "George do you love me still?"

Hubbie: "Of course, the stiller the better."

A traveller dining at an hotel was asked in quick succession by three different waiters if he would have soup. A little annoyed, he said to the last one, "Is it compulsory?"

"No, sir," answered the waiter; "it is mock turtle!"

AS BETWEEN REPORTERS

(Complete in Four instalments of which this is No. 1)

MISS PATRICIA PRENTISS, Pat to the newspaper world, tapped an angry foot rapidly under her desk. Colour flamed high in her cheeks and one white hand clenched in her lap until the nails hurt her palm. But her voice was level and even.

"The Times-Star is a newspaper with principles as well as courage, Mr. Wentworth. We don't have to steal for it; and reporters don't need to buy stories to beat the Herald!"

Mr. Robert Wentworth, star reporter, looked away from the small girl who thus rebuked him. It was the magic hour in the city room, when the city edition dead line is passed, when pipes come out and tired workers relax, when the last "take" of copy has gone upstairs to the linotypes, when almost momentarily the deep rumble of the rotaries in the basement tells the comforting tale of another morning paper pouring out of the vitals of the machinery.

Wentworth reddened a little at the words of the young woman who so valiantly defended her paper and profession. On the Herald, from which sheet he had just come to take a better position on the Times-Star, a sob sister was a useful but unimportant member of the staff; good to have around to kid, perhaps, or to borrow a dollar from until pay day. A sob sister with an annual income which almost touched six figures was a new experience. All the newspaper world knew that Pat Prentiss, society girl, had been left practically penniless by a supposedly wealthy father. When her few dollars were gone and she had realized that the only jobs opened to her were impossible from her standpoint, she had in desperation agreed to play "eyes" for Jenny Blessing, Times-Star sob sister, whose sight was failing. Through a hectic year which included several adventures, many failures and some successes, Pat had learned not only to be the reporter she was, but to love the mixed smell of printer's ink, mucilage, hot type metal, gasoline, spoiled paste, dusty floors and bad air and all that it stood for. The burns she received in rescuing State Senator Kelton's children and reporting the fire in their home left honourable scars; the runaway balloon she had brought safely to earth had lifted her into newspaper fame; her courage, grit and cleverness in defeating a grafting plot made her both friends and enemies in high places.

Then had come upheaval; from Michael Fogarty, her father's former associate and Pat's particular detestation, she had received a letter from her father and the one million, two hundred thousand dollars he had left in care of Fogarty in the safe deposit box in the International Trust Company. Realizing the uselessness of her bringing-up and outlook, Mr. Prentiss had put his daughter to the test and given her a year to find herself, or fail. She had found herself; in spite of every temptation held out to the heiress who deserted her in her poverty and flocked to her in her wealth, she had remained on the Times-Star, filling the place of Miss Blessing, whom Pat sent to Vienna for one last desperate try to save her injured eyes.

Wentworth had no conception of a girl who preferred newspaper work to spending her money for pleasure. Perhaps the star reporter was somewhat jealous; Pat had scored a clean beat over him just before he left the Herald.

It was to this he referred, saying that Pat had either stolen or bought the story.

"Well, Pat, I'll make you a gentle wager," Wentworth retorted. "I understand the Times-Star regards getting the political views of Sylvanus Morton as impossible. I'll bet you a dollar, or a dinner, or a new gown or anything a reporter can earn that I'll beat you getting it."

"I never bet," answered Pat, her foot still tapping the floor. "If you get it, I'll publicly acknowledge you as a good newspaper man. If I get it first, you'll publicly apologize for being unable to think of a better comeback for being beaten than saying I stole or bought a story."

Wentworth flushed again. Gordon rose from the next desk to saunter over to Pat. "Was she a little peeved, then?" he asked. "Well, I don't blame her. Go on and beat him out; personally, I think he's throwing a bluff!" He looked at Wentworth impersonally, but he spoke so the new star could hear.

Later he asked, "Pat, can you do it? Do you know Morton?"

"I met him once; he doesn't know me," answered Pat.

"Oh, you child of wealth!" murmured Tommy.

"I am not—it wasn't my confounded money," stormed Pat. "It was that assignment to write up the new safe deposit vault of the International Trust Company. That's where I keep my bonds; left 'em where Fogarty kept them. Mr. Morton is president of the International Trust; I was introduced to him. He even condescended to show me the big vault himself, and explain about the telephone in it, in case a visitor got locked up accidentally and how the ceiling light can't go out because it's in circuit with the lamp in the anteroom; both of them are always kept burning. But I don't know how that will help me get this story. I hate a man who uses perfume," she ended, referring to a noticeable idiosyncrasy of Wentworth, who was just leaving the office.

PAT drove her little car home recklessly, banged her apartment door noisily, threw her hat on a chair and walked the floor. Even a millionaire sob sister can have troubles. One of Pat's was the girl who had befriended and helped her, introduced her to the newspaper world, opened up a new life; Jenny's eyes were no better and the famous Schlossman of Vienna was very noncommittal. Another was a small but annoying fear and Pat was normally courageous. Since she defeated the graft plot she was conscious of a sinister influence in the city working against her. The great ward boss, Kelly, had much influence. He was too clever to make it obvious that city officials and police had orders to make it hard for Pat to get facts. The Times-Star was an influential paper which could in the future, as it had in the past, cause him much trouble. Single-handed, Pat had won out over Kelly by a clever ruse, and Kelly, she knew, was a good hater. He had arranged for the false bid Mike Dabney was to put in for the city orphanage, but when Pat exposed the plot Fogarty received the contract. Could Kelly or Dabney ruin her newspaper career, they would, she knew.

That her wealth made her fair game for the underworld worried her little, especially since she had written up the new vault in the International Trust Company. She thought of it now—the long line of little customers' rooms, each with its glass shelf, single chair and locked door; her story had stressed the suite Mr. Morton had shown her. The two centre rooms in the line were communicating; a locked door between them could be opened if two customers wished to work together.

"If anyone tries to rob me of my bonds in the International safe deposit, I hope they get shut up in the vault!" She smiled. "There's only air enough in it for twenty-four hours!"

Since the totally unexpected fortune had fallen like a bolt from blue sky, she made it a rule to act, as a reporter, exactly as if she had to live on her modest salary. She drove a small and inexpensive car and lived in an inexpensive apartment, though in a better neighbourhood than that she and Jenny had lived in that first year.

But her clothes were no better than her salary permitted; indeed, Pat's money was another problem. She wanted to use it for something worth while, but newspaper work leaves little time for philanthropic planning. She would not use it to do for herself, as a reporter, what wit and knowledge could not do. She was meticulously honest about this, and Wentworth's taunt that she "bought her beat" rankled.

How to interview Sylvanus Morton, the city's greatest financier, who never gave interviews? It was a fair contest, Pat admitted. Every possible influence had been tried and failed. "I have nothing to say," was all any reporter ever heard from him. His views on the political situation were urgently wanted. Senator Kelton, foe to graft, was being battled vigourously by the corrupt ring in the city. Representative Gilford, also believed to be favourable to the passage of the Corrupt Practises bill, did not come up for re-election this year, but Senator Kelton was having a hard fight. To know that Morton would openly support Kelton would hearten the forces of right and discomfort the political ring. The reporter who could make the sphinx-like president of the International Trust explain his views would have a feather in his cap, indeed. How, how—how?

Pat brewed herself a cup of tea and ate a cheese sandwich and wished for Jenny. Four o'clock in the morning is an odd time for cheese and tea, but morning newspaper workers must have queer habits. Every swallow was accompanied with a new plan to interview Mr. Morton; every bite was masticated to a new scheme. All the tried and tested methods had failed. He wouldn't talk politics to anyone. Any friend through whom his opinions were given publicity ceased to have that status. As the friendship of the financial Crœsus was worth having, his opinions simply were not published. To reach him through his family, his employees, his associates, was impossible. Pat dismissed a possible bribe without a thought. Ten thousand dollars would be a cheap price for an interview, but to make Wentworth's taunt true was unthinkable. Pat's most precious possession was the good opinion of Mr. Hillman, her city editor. Pat would rather Mr. Hillman call her a pest—his favourite expression for those who pleased him—than score a beat over Wentworth. Hillman was a real newspaper man, honourable and fair; the Times-Star was a bitter enemy of graft and corruption largely because of Hillman.

PAT went to bed as the sun streaked the sky and slept immediately; of such stuff are vigourous and youthful sob sisters made. She woke with a nightmare automobile accident as Sylvanus Morton lifted her from the wreck remarking, "I have nothing to say."

Pat dressed thoughtfully; a slow smile curved her slender lips. "At that, it might work!" she cried. "Only I don't want eyes like Jenny's—"

She drove to the Times-Star the long way round—a very long way. It took her past Mr. Morton's great house on Palisade Boulevard. It also took her to a garage where she left instructions to remove the windshield of her little car and replace it with safety glass. "And if that's using money improperly, I'm willing," she told herself. "I won't risk my eyes for all the smelly Bob Wentworths there are—ugh!"

Pat entered the city room with the same thrill which was hers ever since she had made her place in it. She never knew what assignment waited for her: murder trial, morgue identification story, fire, accident, interview with an actress, to get a picture from a woman who didn't want it in the paper, accompany a raid on a gambling den, interview a jailed bootlegger—anything and everything is an assignment for a sob sister, whose duty it is to see and write the human, pathetic, humourous or dramatic angle which is less than news yet which makes a dry-fact story vital.

After Jenny left, Pat developed rapidly Hillman daily gave her more important- work. Every increase in responsibility was written to Jenny; important jobs were cabled. Pat knew the girl with the bandaged eyes in far Vienna was lonely for news of the work she loved.

"Pat, here's a lost child just recovered; travelled two days with a hobby horse and a tin bank with thirty-five cents in it. Take Sandy and spread two with pictures." Hillman handed her a slip.

"Give it to Tommy," begged Pat. "Got a hunch — you'd rather have something about Kelton from Morton, wouldn't you?"

Hillman looked up from behind a barricade of newspapers, reached up and tilted the paper-shaded droplight so that it glared in Pat's face.

"Why, that's Wentworth's story!" he warned.

"It is not!" cried Pat. "It's mine!"

"The baby is sure-fire—"

"Send Tommy," pleaded Pat. "Maybe I can work this thing."

"How?"

"Pease! I don't want to tell."

"Go to it, you pest!" Hillman turned to his assignment pad and yelled, "Tommy!"

Pat fled before he could change his mind. If Bob Wentworth was at work with any plan she must waste no time. Hers was wild enough to succeed, but Wentworth, for all his perfume, was a clever newspaper man.

Pat flew to the garage, paid her bill, wet her handkerchief and wiped rouge and powder from her face, then drove rapidly out of the business section. Every member of the Times-Star knew Sylvanus Morton's habits; too many had tried unsuccessfully to waylay him for them not to be common knowledge. He always drove up Palisade Boulevard, arriving home at 6 p.m. Hundreds of stories had been published about him; his establishment, his family, his scheduled day, his conferences with the great, his philanthropy; ordinary space fillers and Sunday feature stuff. What he thought about Kelton's fight against corruption would be great news. The Kellys and the Dabneys of the corrupt city-ring were worried; if Kelton was not defeated at the polls they might be. Morton's support would ensure almost certain victory for Kelton, yet Mr. Morton had always declined to use his financial power as a political instrument.

Pat drove slowly. She must be coming down Palisade Boulevard just as Mr. Morton's big limousine drove up to his house. This required careful jockeying with wheel, traffic policeman and red light and green at the intersection of Greencastle Avenue. Her wrist watch was often consulted.

Pat was a clever driver; she whisked around the corner at thirty seconds to six, to see the big green limousine with the famous M-100 license plate coming up the boulevard. It would continue to Greencastle, turn and return to the palace which Mr. Morton called hime.

As she passed it, Pat swung her wheel sharply to the left, swerving into the front wheel of the big car. At the crash she threw up her arms to protect her face—safety glass might not be safe. The collision might have been heard for blocks. Pat's car was a wreck; so she thought, ruefully, was the hood, fender and front wheel of the great monster she had struck. But Pat gave no sign; she drooped over her wheel, her eyes closed, waiting, hoping—

Shouts, footsteps, people running. Excited voices talking, a rich Irish one crying over and over, "It wasn't me fault, Mr. Morton, shure it wasn't me fault at all, at all—"

"Be quiet Timmy. Help me to get her out."

Strong arms tugged at Pat's limp body. She prayed they would take the careful absence of rouge for pallour. She was lifted, carried up steps. Pat took a slit-eyed peep. She was in Mr. Morton's house! The strong arms put her down, evidently on a couch. Then swift orders, more footsteps, cold water on her face—

"My cue, I guess," thought Pat and opened her eyes, staring vacantly.

"My dear young lady, I hope you are not hurt" Pat's heart leaped at Mr. Morton's words.

"I—I don't—what happened?" she asked as weakly as she could.

'You collided with my car," explained Mr. Morton. "I don't know how. My driver says you did it, but I want to hear your side. Are you hurt? Shall I call a doctor?"

Pat sat up, then relaxed in genuine alarm. Even an intentiontal collision she found, has its shock. She felt sick and weak.

"No—doctor!" she gasped, "I— Oh, so many people—"

Mr. Morton motioned; the hurrying servants left the room.

"Now tell me," he commanded. "If I am responsible, be sure I will gladly pay for your car."

"You are—not responsible! It was—my fault."

"Well, I'm glad of that. How did it happen?"

Pat covered her face with her hands. "Oh," she whispered, "I am so ashamed, Mr. Morton. I—I did it on purpose!"

"You did it on purpose!"

"Yes. But I can't go through with it. I—I didn't know how it would be—you have been so kind—and offering to pay for my car, too! No, I—I can't do it!"

"Do what, you remarkable child?" demanded Mr. Morton. "Why should you run into me on purpose?"

Pat held her breath to make a blush come. It was working—Wentworth should see! She put out her hands appealingly. "I—I'll pay for your car, Mr. Morton," she stated. "Oh, please forgive me! I'm a reporter. We've just got to know whether you'll support Kelton or not. If I don't get an interview with you I'll lose my job. I didn't know any other way—so I—so I tried this. I thought—I thought maybe if you took me in, a girl injured in an accident with your car, you might say something—you'd be sorry for me. But—but I can't do it It isn't honest. And—and I'll pay for the damage to your car—"

Pat allowed her voice to trail off, weakly. She put her handkerchief to her eyes.

Mr. Morton said nothing; on his face was amazed amusement — or amused amazement. Then—

"Well, upon my word! My dear young woman whose name I don't know, I wish I had some of your stripe in my business. Pertinacity which will risk life for a job is unusual. You deserve to succeed. You may say that I will support Senator Kelton for re-election. I have never used my place and power to influence politics. But this is less politics than right and decency. Senator Kelton stands for law and order against graft and corruption. I shall support him for these, not for political reasons. Now I will give you a cup of tea and send you home—or will you go to your paper?—in another car?"

PAT'S world whirled around her. Her trick had succeeded. She had the impossible interview. Wentworth was beaten! The Times-Star would have a triumphant beat over all other papers. And no more miserable girl ever stood in the presence of a man she had tricked. Jenny, with her ideals of what a reporter should be, looked at her sadly. Hillman's brown eyes turned away. She had not bought her story; no, she had tricked a good man out of it. And no one knew it but she—no one but Pat knew that Pat's clever brain and ability as an actress had won what Mr. Morton would not otherwise have given.

Now regret filled her, but it took courage to make a second acknowledgement. Which would Mr. Morton believe—or would he be so thoroughly disgusted with her that it would not matter? Pat covered her face with her hands.

"Oh, I hope you will forgive me!" she burst out. "I cannot—I cannot do it! I lied, Mr. Morton! I do not stand to lose my job! I hit your car on purpose. Then I confessed that I did it, on purpose to win your sympathy, your admiration. I planned it to happen just this way. I was sure that you—big, successful man—would be sorry for a poor little girl reporter who would lose her position if she didn't get the interview. The accident and confession were both of the plan. I am not poor. I am Pat Prentiss, and I have an income of almost a hundred thousand a year. I will pay for your car, but I can't pay for your kindness—and your decency—and I'm ashamed—ashamed—ashamed—"

This time Pat's tears were genuine. She cried softly into her handkerchief as she confessed the rest: the taunt from Wentworth; the pride which made her plan; her dream; the use she had made of it.

"This confession is true, Mr. Morton," she went on, her face flaming. "I am not a bad girl, truly I am not. I am not a liar or a crook. I am just a reporter trying to forget I'm rich, and to aid the forces of right for which my paper stands—but you can not aid right by wrong. I hope you'll forgive me—I will not use what you have said against your better judgment." Pat wept afresh that she should have so wonderful a story and not be able to use it.

Mr. Morton looked at her quizzically. "And you took me in completely," he said at last, very gently. "But your real confession revives my faith in human nature. I have heard of you. I know Fogarty. I had intended to publish my support of Kelton in all the papers day after to-morrow. Now I give you full permission to publish what I said whenever you want. I admire both your courage and your honesty."

WENTWORTH was studiously inattentive as Pat turned in her story.

"However did you get it?" demanded Hillman, shooting takes into the hands of copy boys as he read it.

"By being honest as the Times-Star," answered Pat. "And, by the way Mr. Hillman," after dead line Mr. Wentworth will say something to the city room I want you to hear."

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

TWO TYPES OF DISCIPLINE.

AN interesting comparison of two types of discipline—military, and that of Boy Scouting, which is self-imposed, as part of the Scout code—was provided officers of the troop ship Nevasa, chartered to carry some 1200 British Rover Scouts to the World Rover Moot in Sweden. The comments were distinctly in favour of the Scouts. Other comments were that the Scouts "settled down" much more quickly than the soldiers, and that they ate "half as much again!"

HOLLAND ASKS NEXT MEET.

Holland made a bid at the International Scout Conference for the World Scout Jamboree to be held in 1937. Decision will be announced early in November.

TRAINING JUNIOR FIREMEN.

Selected Boy Scouts of Blackpool, Eng., are being trained for their Scout Fireman's Badge by the Superintendent of the Blackpool Fire Brigade. They will serve as an emergency section of the department. Similar training is given Canadian Boy Scouts by many local fire chiefs.

MORE SCOUTS, LESS CRIME.

Addressing a Scout gathering at Kenton, England, Magistrate Charles declared that if there were more Scouts in the country there would be less need for reformatories and fewer cases in the juvenile courts, the number of which at present was very disturbing.

SCOUTERS OF 24 NATIONS MEET

Delegates from 24 nations attended the 8th Biennial International Conference of Scout Leaders held in the Parliament buildings at Stockholm in August. The assembly was opened by H.R.H. Prince Gustaf Adolf, President of the Swedish Scout Union, and was addressed by Lord Baden-Powell.

TO HAVE DEEP SEA SCOUTS.

So impressed were the officers of the troop ship Nevasa with the bearing of the 2100 British Rover Scouts carried to and from the World Rover Moot in Sweden this summer that it was decided to form a Deep Sea Scout unit among the officers aboard. One of the officers was invested as leader.

Ronald was staying with an aunt who held strong views on how little boys should behave. He was obviously unhappy.

"You're homesick," said the aunt.

"No, I'm not," was the answer. "I am here sick."
