OBITUARY

THE LATE JOHN C. WILSON

There passed away at his late residence on Friday last, after a lengthy illness, one of the most prominent and respected residents of Ormond in the person of John C. Wilson, in his 80th year.

The deceased was the son of the late John T. Wilson and his wife, Elizabeth M. Dewar, pioneer settlers of the district, and had lived all his life in that community, where he was a prosperous farmer. He was a life-long member of the Ormond Baptist church and took a keen interest in all its affairs. In his younger days, the late Mr. Wilson had taken an active part in all community enterprises and had been interested in municipal matters.

The funeral was held on Sunday last from the residence to the Ormond Baptist Church where the service was conducted by Rev. I. Burns, pastor of the church. Interment was made in Ormond cemetery.

Those who survive are: his widow, formerly Agnes Dalgleish; two sisters, Mrs. S. A. Parks and Mrs. Peter McRostie, of Kenmore; and two brothers, Messrs. Peter and David Wilson, of Grand View, Manitoba.

PETER EDWARD BECKSTEAD

Peter Edward Beckstead passed away at his home in Williamsburg early Friday morning. Born in Williamsburg 67 years ago, he was the son of the late Jordan Beckstead, and his wife, the late Miriah McMartin. He was a blacksmith by trade and spent his entire life in Williamsburg.

The high esteem in which he was held was shown by the large gathering of relatives and friends who attended the funeral services held from his late residence to St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg, of which he was a devoted member. His pastor, Rev. C. R. Cronmiller, conducted the services. The funeral was under the auspices of Williamsburg I.O.O.F. Lodge No. 349. Interment was made in Williamsburg cemetery.

Surviving besides his widow, who was Miss Lillian Shaver, of Osnabruck Centre, are one son, Ross Beckstead, at home, and four daughters, Mrs. Heber McIntosh, of Winchester Springs, Mrs. Arnold Montgomery, of Winchester, Mrs. Aden Casselman, of Williamsburg, and Miss Mary Beckstead, of Moulinette; two brothers, R. M. Beckstead, of Salt Lake City, and M. S. Beckstead, of Williamsburg; also twelve grandchildren.

The pallbearers, all Oddfellows, were Messrs. Chas. Phifer, Chas. Dewland, George Buchan, M. O. Trickey, O. Graybiel and O. Becker.

THE LATE W. G. BARCLAY

We are sorry to report the death of Mr. W. G. Barclay, a prominent resident of Nation Valley, on Sunday evening, April 8th. The late Mr. Barclay had been in ill-health for two years prior to his passing.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from his late residence, to the United Church, Chesterville, where Rev. Mr. Newman conducted the service. A full obituary will appear in next week's issue of the Press.

TAUGHT 53 YEARS

Mrs. Carrie L. Hazell of the teaching staff of the Morrisburg Public schools handed in her resignation on Tuesday from the staff to take effect in June. This will bring to a close a career of 53 years of teaching in the Morrisburg public schools; in many instances, two generations have passed under the careful guidance of Mrs. Hazell, and her faithfulness and ability has endeared her to the staff, the pupils and the board of education there.

Election Dates

ONTARIO ELECTION EXPECTED TO FALL ON JUNE 11 OR 12

The Telegram, Toronto, of Tuesday last, said it had learned from an official political source that either Monday, June 11 or Tuesday, June 12, would be the date set for Ontario's general election. Whether it will be Monday or Tuesday depends on whether the government sets nomination day on Monday, June 4, or Tuesday, June 5.

With June 3 on a Sunday, the following day is the official holiday for the King's birthday, and consequently, the Telegram said, it is thought nomination day will be June 5 with the election day a week later.

HIGHWAY UNDAMAGED

In spite of the fact that water to the depth of 30 inches covered it for nearly a week, Highway No. 31 from Cass Bridge south for about half a mile was not damaged to any extent, according to the road superintendent, Jos. S. Robinson. The lack of high winds during the time the highway was submerged is believed to have saved the situation.

Mr. Robinson and his men have been busy covering the stretch with small crushed stones this week, in order to preserve the surface as much as possible in anticipation of it being paved this summer.

The work of paving this stretch is expected to be under way in a short time, depending on weather conditions.

LOCAL 100 CLUB ENTERTAIN LADIES

REV. NORMAN RAWSON WAS THE GUEST SPEAKER AT LUNCHEON HELD ON MONDAY NIGHT

About forty members of the local 100 Club with their wives and lady-friends as guests, assembled at Hotel Winchester on Monday evening last to enjoy a special "Ladies' Night." President Harry Flora acted as chairman.

During the supper, Centurian Chester Timmins led those present in a rousing sing-song, Miss Helen Timmins acting as accompanist. A brief business program followed during which the motion was brought in that the Club have a supper meeting the third Friday of each month. It was endorsed by all members present.

Miss Baker, of Ottawa, delighted the audience with two soprano solos that were thoroughly enjoyed. Mrs. Silver of Ottawa, acted as her accompanist.

District Governor Jim Morton, of Kemptville, was then called upon for a few remarks, and occupied a considerable time in emphasizing the need for fellowship among Centurians, after which Centurian Aaron Sweet conducted a prize boost for the ladies. The winners, Miss Baker, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. J. H. Ross and Mrs. A. P. Johnston, were presented with beautiful cups and saucers.

Mr. Fred Johnston, with Miss Helen Smith, A. T. C. M., accompanying, rendered two fine tenor solos that were enthusiastically received, after which the president called upon Centurian Aaron Sweet to introduce the guest speaker of the evening, Rev. Norman Rawson, of Ottawa, to those present.

Rev. Mr. Rawson rendered an address, "The Luck of the Irish," that will be long remembered by those in the audience, for its ready wit and humour. Amusing incidents in his early ministry, told in his own inimitable manner, kept the audience in a state of laughter from start to finish. It was a splendid address and was thoroughly appreciated. At the close Rev. John McKay moved a vote of thanks to the guest artists and speaker which was seconded by Centurian Jim Gray and heartily endorsed by all.

The 100 Club was pleased to welcome as guests, Rev. Mr. Rawson and his party of friends, also several gentlemen from Russell, as well as four visiting Centurians from the Kemptville Club. The evening was brought to a close with the National Anthem.

THIEVES DEMOLISH SAFE

Burglars blew up the safe and partly demolished the office of the Graham Creamery Co. Ltd., of Alexandria early Monday morning. An overcharge of nitro-glycerine is believed to have been used. Little money was taken, although damage will be heavy due to the wrecking of the building.

The thieves then stole a new Chevrolet truck from the garage on the premises and made their escape. They have not been apprehended.

Former Winchester Boy Gains Praise

When commenting on the success of the Durham County seed judging team that carried off major honors at the Bay of Quinte Seed Fair held recently in Napanee, the Bowmanville Statesman has this to say in part:

"It speaks well for two things in particular, the high type of young men who own Durham their birthplace and home, and the ability and high regard in which E. A. Summers, Agricultural Representative, is held. By dint of perseverance, these boys, from every centre in the County, have educated themselves as expert judges, not only in the seed but in the cattle and hog line also.

As for Mr. Summers, he has proven a distinct benefit and genuine asset to the County. It is quite apparent that he knows his work. He has conducted various campaigns which have been extremely successful, and at the present time is conducting a Warble Eradication campaign that is bound to be successful. With junior farmers he has been particularly successful, and citizens will join in congratulating Mr. Summers on the many worthwhile achievements that have come to Durham through his efforts. Mr. Summers is proud of his Durham young farmers, and the young farmers are very proud of Mr. Summers."

The Press might go further and say that Winchester is also proud of Mr. Summers, for he is a Winchester boy, having spent his early years in this district. The success which he has attained in his chosen field brings much satisfaction to his many friends in this community and we trust that it may continue in increasing proportions.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Mrs. David A. McDonald, who passed away on April 18th, 1933.

Peaceful be thy sleep, dear mother,
It is sweet to breathe thy name,
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.

Oft we think of you, dear mother,
And our hearts are sad with pain;
Oh, this would be a Heaven,
Could we hear your voice again.

You are gone but not forgotten,
Never shall your memory fade,
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger,
Around the grave where you are laid.

50p. Husband and family.

CONCERT STAGED BY YOUNG PEOPLE

CONTEST PROGRAM IS ENJOYED. GENTLEMEN ARE WINNERS BY SMALL MARGIN

One of the best entertainments in some time was presented in the Town Hall last evening, under the auspices of the Mizpah Mission Circle of the United Church. It took the form of a contest between the young ladies and the young men, and created plenty of enthusiasm. The hall was filled to capacity.

For the first hour the ladies had charge of the program, and presented a variety of numbers that were thoroughly enjoyed and heartily applauded by the audience. They consisted of a short one-act play, vocal numbers and several skits which were executed in a splendid manner.

The young men then took charge and presented a variety of numbers composed of character sketches, skits, instrumental and vocal selections that delighted the audience for sixty full minutes.

The judges for the contest were: Miss E. Stewart of Ormond, Mrs. H. Thompson, Miss Ruth Barkley and Rev. Mr. Adey, of Williamsburg. After some little time, the adjudicators agreed that the ladies has emassed a total of 85 points while the men had been successful in running up 87. The complete program was:

Ladies:—

Play—"A Good Girl in the Kitchen," with the following cast: Mesdames A. W. Sherwood, C. Rice; Misses L. Merkley, A. Scott, A. Parker and N. Summers.

Trio—Mrs. E. Steele, Mrs. S. Lindsay and Miss Norma Robinson.

Monologue—Miss Shirley Nesbitt.

Pantomime—Mrs. P. Durant, assisted vocally by Mrs. E. Steele.

Skit—Mrs. J. W. Ault, Mrs. W. Barkley and Mrs. R. Crowder.

Duet—Miss Annie Walker and Mrs. P. Durant.

Chorus—Mesdames A. Sherwood, H. Graham, E. Kellogg, W. Barkley, C. Rice, S. Lindsay, E. Gilroy, R. Crowder, and Miss A. Walker.

Solo—Miss Norma Hitsman.

Miss Helen Smith, A.T.C.M., and Miss Alice Singleton acted as accompanists for the various numbers.

Gentlemen:—

Old Time Orchestra—Violins, Messrs G. Dixon, C. Rattray and L. Summers; guitars, H. Helmer and D. Jones; piano, D. Hutt.

Reading—Earl Helmer.

Quartette—Messrs. H. Nesbitt, W. Rowat, C. Timmins and W. Agnew.

Orchestra Selection.

Skit—E. Summers and H. Strader.

Violin Trio—Messrs. G. Dixon, L. Summers and C. Rattray.

Character Sketch—W. Rowat.

Tenor Solo—Fred Johnston.

Musical Selections by five mouth-organs and two guitars:—D. Jones, H. Helmer, D. Hutt, L. Summers, C. Strader, H. Strader and G. Wilson.

Dialogue—"Hired and Fired,"—Earl Helmer and Ernest Helmer.

Orchestra Selections.

Closing Chorus.

Following the program, those taking part were pleasingly entertained by the members of the Mission Circle with light refreshments. The total proceeds of the evening amounted to over $35.

Manslaughter Charge

James Cross, 22, Aultsville, Ont., was arraigned in Montreal on Tuesday on a charge of manslaughter arising out of the death last Sunday of Miss Mary Hayes, 55, who was struck by an automobile the night before as she crossed a street after leaving church. No bail was allowed, accused being remanded for preliminary hearing April 17.

Evidence adduced at the coroner's inquest which preceded the arraignment tended to show Cross had failed to stop after his car had struck Miss Hayes Saturday evening. Rene Poirier, who took part in the chase after the Cross car, declared accused refused to stop even when motorists shouted to him he had knocked down a woman. The chase came to an end, witness testified, when Cross drove his car into a blind alley and pursuers held him until the arrival of police.

William Greff, Cornwall, Ont., who had been in the car with Cross, was released after testifying at the inquest. Charges of failure to stop after an accident and of having no registration cards laid against Cross in the interval between the accident and the time of the victim's death, were dropped automatically with the drawing up of the manslaughter indictment.

STORE ROBBED

$400 IN GOODS STOLEN FROM MORRISBUURG SHOP

Goods to the value of more than $400 were stolen from the dry goods shop of John F. Casselman on Main street, Morrisburg, during Monday night by marauders who got away without leaving a trace of their identity with the exception of one or two fingerprints. Shirts, socks, ties, suits, watches and sweaters comprised the lost articles. The thieves broke through a window at the rear of the store.

Miss Emily McCaffery, of Russell, spent a couple of days this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Robinson, the guest of Miss Shirley Robinson.

COMING EVENTS

RESERVE APRIL 25th—MIDGET MINSTRELS, UNDER AUSPICES OF THE 100 CLUB. WATCH FOR POSTERS.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The April meeting in the Town Hall next Tuesday, the 17th, at 7.30 p.m. Will have for roll-call "Garden and Poultry Hints." A paper will be given by Mrs. D. Bruce, and a contest held. Refreshments served, and collection taken. The public are invited.

PENNY BANK DEPOSITS

The pupils of the Winchester Public School are holding their own with regard to deposits in the Penny Bank. In 1933 the total sum was $552.24, as compared to $546.28 this year.

The one regrettable feature, however, is that only 19 per cent. of the pupils are depositors. This could easily be increased, for other schools throughout this district have a much larger number of pupils depositing funds in this bank. Cornwall, for example, has 95 per cent. of the pupils in their public schools depositing money while Morrisburg ranks well up with 42 per cent. Let us try to increase this percentage, for thrift is a good habit.

"OLD HOME WEEK"

We are having a Reunion
For the boys and girls of old,
We hope you will be present
For the weather won't be cold.

It is being held in August,
Nineteen hundred thirty-four;
You will find we'll entertain you
As we've always done before.

Some are coming here by motor,
Others coming here by train;
No doubt some will come a-walking
And some by aeroplane.

You will find a hearty welcome
From the people of the town;
You will find them all a-smiling
And you'll never see a frown.

And Mayor Ross will clasp your hand
You'll think it in a vise;
And say! Won't he be happy
If the weather's only nice.

He has a band of workers,
Who work with all their might;
They are working in the daytime,
Yes, they work most every night.

They plan to make it pleasant
And as sure as you're alive,
All of them will greet you
On the day that you arrive.

There will be games and sport and music,
Amusements by the score;
Fine sermons by our preachers,
Like you've never heard before.

We are holding a street dance,
In the centre of the town;
Just find yourself a partner,
Step in and "hoe it down."

And when the week is over
And you're thinking of the fun;
You'll laugh yourself to sleep although
You've spent most all your mon.

I am sure you will be glad
That you ever took the time,
To visit old Winchester.
In the good old summer time.

"LITTLE BITS OF EVERYTHING"

THINGS OF BEAUTY

Sunsets and moonlight, clouds of gray,
The call of a bird at close of day;
Twilight's shadows, the sea's white foam,
The drifting snows and the lights of home;
Music and roses, the stars at night,
The rainbow's arch and a sea-gull's flight;
Violets nestling close to the sod,
A child's pure laugh, and the Love of God.

—Author Unknown.

BUT

We say, "It is a fine day, but—"
And with this little word we shut
Out all the beauty of the day,
And turn its skies of blue to grey.
We say, "He is a good man, but—"
We get into this verbal rut—
And when we get through butting him,
Poor fellow, he looks pretty slim.
When we say something very nice
This "but" comes in as cold as ice,
And chills our sunny words of gladness.
Now, when this "but" comes butting in
Just butt this "but" upon the chin,
And tell it nevermore to tarry
Around in your vocabulary.

THE LITTLE THINGS

It is the little things
Bring happiness; the winnow of soft wings
Beneath the bright undrooping of the dawn;
A kiss, a smile; sunlight upon the lawn;
A tender word
Breathed in the twilight hush; a rose leaf stirred
To deeper crimson when the moon is bland;
A glint of moonlight; notes from plaintiff strings
It is the little things!

THE EDITOR'S DREAM

The editor after working over his list of delinquent subscribers until he was weary, fell asleep. He dreamed that he was a boy away back in the district school, that they were having an entertainment and that his part was to recite "The Old Oaken Bucket"

When it came to his turn he spoke out in his sleep but this is what the stenographer heard him say:

How dear to my heart is the steady subscriber,
Who pays in advance at the birth of each year.
Who lays down the money and does it quite gladly,
And casts 'round the office a halo of cheer.
He never says "Stop it, I cannot afford it;
I'm getting more magazines now than I read."
But always says "Send it; I read it; I like it;
The fact is I think it a help and a need."
How welcome his cheque when it reaches our sanctum,
How it makes our pulse throb; how it makes our heart dance!
We outwardly thank him, we inwardly bless him—
The steady subscriber who pays in advance.

ELEVEN AGES OF MAN

The eleven ages of man, as expressed in menu style, run about alike, according to Typo Graphic:

Milk.
Milk and bread.
Milk, eggs, bread and spinach.
Oatmeal, bread and butter, green apples and all-day suckers.
Ice cream sodas and hot dogs.
Minute steak, fried potatoes, coffee and apple pie.
Bouillon, roast duck, scalloped potatoes, creamed broccoli, fruit salad, divinity fudge, demi-tasse.
Pate de fois gras, weiner schnitzel, potatoes Parisienne and Roquefort cheese.
Two soft boiled eggs, toast and milk.
Bread and milk.
Milk.

IMPERISHABLE

There are three things a man can give
To others more and more,
Of which the while God lets him live
He has an endless store.
And one is courtesy to all,
Which kindly hearts possess;
The second's love for great and small
And the third is friendliness.

One cannot give these three away,
However hard we try,
For should he drain his heart to-day,
He'd gain a new supply.
Who scatters smiles and words of cheer
And poorer men befriends,
And loves all living creatures here,
Has wealth that never ends.

Though gold through fingers often slips,
And fame may quickly fade,
Who walks with kind words on his lips
Will keep the friendships made.
And who has courtesy to give
To all who come and go
Will never find while he may live
Such riches running low.

—Edgar A. Guest.

THE WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION

There was a good attendance at the April meeting on Tuesday, April 3rd, when the president, Mrs. J .W. Ault, opened the meeting with prayer, and read a beautiful Easter message, written by Canon Dyson Hague, of Toronto. Mrs. E. Merkley read an Easter lesson from Luke.

After the reading of the minutes by the Secretary, Mrs. H. Nesbitt, the reports of the Cor. Sec'y. and Treasurer were given. A vote of appreciation was given the ladies who made and quilted the quilts for the Good Cheer work, also those who sewed the new carpet, and the men who put the carpet on the platform in the S. S. rooms.

Different plans were discussed for raising money to pay for the carpet, and some of these will be acted on shortly. Two of the groups are combining to have a pot luck supper in the S. S. rooms on the evening of Friday, April 2th, when a social time will be enjoyed as well as a program. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

APPLIES FOR DIVORCE

Austin Eugene Stansfield, clerk, of Montreal, is applying to Parliament for a bill of divorce from his wife, Dame Laura Lougheed, residing at Morrisburg, on the statutory grounds.

HAS DISTINCTIVE LODGE CAREER

Our readers will recognize in the picture our old friend, Mr. H. B. Fetterly, Superintendent of the School for the Deaf at Belleville, Ont.

He was recently exalted by the Orange Order to one of their highest offices in Canada, and to which we made brief reference in our issue of March 29th.

But the career of Mr. Fetterly has been so truly phenomenal in many respects that we have felt that his host of friends who read the "Press" will be interested in learning something really authentic about his manifold activities over a long period of years and we have therefore by diligent effort now completed our research work into the subject and submit herewith a fairly complete report of at least the major acomplishments of this dynamic personage. He lived for many years as our close neighbour and, as a neighbour and friend he stands unexcelled.

As Inspector of Public Schools in this County he was held in high esteem by the members of the various school boards and the many improvements he left behind him are witnesses to the painstaking and capable way in which he performed his duties, a never failing characteristic.

When he left Winchester to take up his important duties at Belleville our municipality lost a valuable asset, for he was always active in everything beneficially effecting the welfare of our citizens.

In the church he was loyalty personified, a tower of strength in the good work; as a member of our Municipal Council he was earnest, diligent and capable, and the ratepayers could well entrust their municipal affairs in his hands. As a sportsman he was well liked by his associates and as a supporter of all healthful, wholesome sport he could always be depended upon for a prompt and unstinted response to all demands.

May he live long to enjoy his past successes and to achieve many more; He was initiated in Monrie L. O. L. No. 880 at Cornwall in the year 1905. This lodge was named after Duncan Monroe, Cornwall Grand Old Man—a Past Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, who is nearing the century mark. Mr .Fetterly filled nearly every office in the lodge up to that of Master, and when the Black organization decided to start a lodge in Cornwall he was included in the list of members, and filled most of the offices up to that of Master and Preceptor.

He took an active part in organizing the Black lodge at Winchester and later was Preceptor and was honored by the Grand Chapter of Eastern Ontario, filling many of the offices including that of Grand Master, filled most of the offices in the Grand Lodge of Ontario East, and at the session just closed was elected Grand Master for the ensuing year.

He is a member of Winchester L. O. L. No. 887; Belleville L. O. L. No.274, and Prince Edward Royal Black Preceptor No. 509 of Winchester.

50th WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Leizert, of Iroquois, parents of Curtis J. Lazerte of the Customs offices at Morrisburg, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding in Iroquois on Monday, April 2, 1934. A golden wedding dinner was served at their home, located some distance west of the village, attended by six of the seven children. The children gave their parents two easy chairs in honor of the occasion.

Hints For The Home

To improve the flavor of French dressing, add a little onion juice.

Carbonated water will clean mirrors quickly and without streaking.

Fresh lime kept in the cellar absorbs moisture and freshens the cellar.

Doughs that contain baking powder should be handled as little as possible.

A glass washboard is better than one made of zinc and it will last much longer.

To make a hearth brush out of an old broom, soak the old broom in hot water and trim it short.

Beware of too much bluing in the water in which you rinse your white goods. It will yellow them in time.

To open a glass bottle with a glass stopper, light a match near the stopper. The bottle will open immediately, and very easily.

Sprinkle a liberal quantity of chloride of lime in the garage, cellar, or other haunts, and the rats will not bother.

Before washing the articles, always soak the egg spots in cold water or sponge the spotted places. Part of the egg can often be scraped off with a knife.

When basting a garment, place the knots of the thread on the right side of the material. They will be much easier to remove when the article is finished.

Tack a shoe bag to the inside of each bedroom closet door. This is much better than having the shoes scattered over the closet floor, and also keeps the shoes in better condition.

An acid for the manicure can be made by putting one teaspoon of lemon juice into a cup of warm water. Stains will be removed from the fingers and nails and it will loosen the cuticle.

Keeping stockings straight is merely a matter of knowing where to fasten your garters. If you fasten the back garters first, directly over the seams, and then hook the front ones, your stockings will never get twisted.

Never trust to your memory when putting anything away for storage. It takes but a minute to write on the outside what is on the inside and you will be very glad you did so later on when you find your memory is not so reliable after all.

Fold your sheets in half, place them across the ironing board and press other articles on top of them until the sheets are almost dry. When the rest of the ironing is done, you will find the sheets require only a little touch here and there with the iron.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Rev. Charles E. Dunn

Jesus Teaches Forgiveness.
Lesson for April 15th. Matt. 18:15-35.
Golden Text: Matthew 6:12.

Peter thought, no doubt, that he was extremely generous in suggesting that forgiveness be multiplied seven times. The common rule was "Forgive three times but not the fourth." Jesus, however, with a handsome gesture of spiritual imagination, dispensed with petty, arithmetical calculation, and proclaimed the principle of unlimited reconciliation. "Not seven times over, I tell you, but seventy-seven times over!" And then, to reinforce this advice, He narrated the picturesque parable of the unmerciful servant, notable for its sharp contrast between unusual generosity and shabby illiberality. Here is a king whose servant owed him the impossible sum of ten million dollars. Of course he could not pay, so his master ordered him, his family and all his property to be sold for part payment. But the slave pleaded against this decree so imploringly that the monarch's heart was touched, and he cancelled the debt. Immediately, however, the servant met a fellow-slave who owed him a paltry $20. Seizing him by the throat, and almost choking him, he demanded instant reimbursement. Naturally the king, when the news reached him, was very angry and threw the impudent fellow into jail.

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

It may be objected that the parable is an over-statement, and therefore not a real transcript of actual life. It must be granted that the unmerciful servant is an exceptional case. Nevertheless he does exist. Here is a business man who pleads with his creditors for more lenient terms, but makes no concessions whatever to his debtors.

Obviously the central point of this famous tale is that it is sinful to cultivate an unforgiving spirit. Now it is quite customary for folk to cherish a grudge, or resent an insult. Many a person has not spoken to his next-door neighbor for years because of some trivial altercation or imaginary affront. All such need to ponder upon the meaning of this searching parable.

NO SAND IN SANDPAPER

Familiar as sandpaper is to everybody yet there are very few persons, indeed, who know that this universally used product has no sand in it. Sand cannot be used for making sandpaper because it is not efficient for that purpose, due to the fact that most sand is waterworn and the particles are therefore more or less rounded and have no sharp cutting edge. The fine abrasive particles on sandpaper are specially crushed flint or garnet or are products of the electric furnace, aluminum oxide or silicon carbide. The abrasive particles used in the manufacture of sandpaper, with a few exceptions, are not true crystals, nor are they alike. The particles, though carefully graded, vary in size and shape and have many edges and points, some of which are much sharper than others. Best results are obtained from grits approximately twice as long as they are wide.

RAMBLING 'ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY

A knowing audience, a brilliant audience cheered itself hoarse at the end of the first performance of an opera about nothing in particular which lends it charm and grave beauty—"Four Saints in Three Acts," by Gertrude Stein and Virgil Thomson. The scenery is made of cellophane. It is not true that the costumes of the all-Negro cast are also made of cellophane. . . . "Most of the time the music comes near to familiar tunes, then skips away from them, but the listener hunts in his memory." As for the text—you can take it or leave it. An opera, in short, of inspired foolishness. . . . "You know how children love to run words together no matter what they mean?" . . . Well, that's the way the text sounded to one auditor. But with some superb singing!

Alderman Curley raised his voice and arms in a huge outcry against Mayor La Guardia: "Does he think he is monarch of all he surveys? Does he want to be dictator?" . . . But the high sonority of the alderman's words disturbed "Tammany" the City Hall cat. "Tammany" stepped sedately to the front of the chamber, sat down and stared at the irate alderman. . . . "Does he . . ." The alderman stared at the cat and stopped. The cat stared at the alderman "Does he . . ." he began again. But the cat was unperturbed. Alderman Hart interrupted the aldermanic laughter long enough to express the views of the members: "I move that the privileges of the floor be extended to the City Hall cat."

GIRL WIELDS WICKED PEN AS SHE WHACKS MERE MEN

(Toronto Star)

There's a girl student in Bloor Collegiate who wields a wicked pen when she stirs herself up to write about the males. Recently there was an essay exercise in one of the rooms of that school, and some liberty was allowed the students in the choice of their topics. This sophisticated sister (who prefers to remain anonymous to newspaper readers) chose to write about men, and the drops of vitriol that dripped from her fountain pen formed the following words on her sheet of foolscap:

"Men are what women marry. They have two hands, two feet, and sometimes two wives, but never more than one color or one idea at a time. Like Turkish cigarettes, they are all made of the same material; the only difference is that some of them are more distinguished than others, generally speaking.

"They are divided into three classes, husbands, bachelors and widowers. The eligible man is a man of obstinacy, entirely surrounded by suspicion. Husbands are three varieties, prizes, surprises and booby consolation prizes.

"Making a good husband out of a man is one of the greatest arts known to civilization. It requires science, sculpture, common-sense, faith, hope and charity, the greatest of these being charity.

"They want to marry women just like their mothers, and they finally marry just the opposite. They spend the rest of their lives trying to make their wives just like their mothers.

"It is a curious psychological fact that soft, fluffy, tender, violet scented little things like women should enjoy being kissed by big, awkward, stubchinned, tobacco-tainted and bayrummed things like men.

"If you flatter a man you frighten him to death, and if you don't, you bore him to death. If you allow him to make love to you, he gets tired of you in the end; and if you don't, he gets tired of you in the beginning. If you believe everything he says, he thinks you are a fool; and if you don't he thinks you are a cynic. If you wear gay colors, rouge and a startling hat, he hesitates to take you out; if you wear a brown toque and tailored suit, he takes you out, and stares at some woman in gay colors, rouge and startling hat.

"If you are like him in his gaieties and approve of his smoking, he swears you are driving him to the devil. If you are a clinging vine type he doubts whether you have any brains, and if you are a modern advanced woman he doubts whether you have a heart. If you are silly, he longs for a bright mate. If you are brilliant, he longs for a playmate. If you are popular with other men, he is jealous; and if you are not, he hesitates to marry a wall-flower. Darn the men, anyway."

UNUSUAL FACTS ABOUT SIGHT

Dr. A. L. Crewson, of Cornwall, in a recent address to the Kinsmen Club of that city, related some interesting facts concerning the human vision and its remarkable structure and powers.

He began his address by telling of the construction of the human eye and the manner in which light beams transmit impressions to the brain. Dr. Crewson spoke of the theory that an electrical impulse, caused by contact of the light beam upon cells within the eye, reacts upon the brain constituting what is known as vision.

Infants, Dr. Crewson explained, are born blind but begin to see a few hours after birth. However, because the eye is similar in its action to a camera, the infant sees all objects upside down. The child must learn to reverse the position of the image and gradually, this becomes an automatic function of the brain.

Cause of Squint

Squint is due to the fact that one eye, or possibly both eyes, give obscured vision and strain is placed upon the muscles as a result of the efforts of the child to see clearly. This causes the eye to pull to one side or the other and results in the distressing condition known as squint. This, in varying degree, is quite common, and glasses are required to correct it by aiding the eye which is below normal to attain correct vision. Dr. Crewson cited an instance in which he treated a boy who had reached the age of 16 without him or his parents being aware of the fact that he was totally blind in one eye. This eye had not functioned, but no squint had developed to give an outward sign of the condition. The boy had become so accustomed to seeing with one eye only that he was wholly unaware that the other was blind. Dr. Crewson dealt at length with the common defects in vision, long and short sight and astigmatism, explaining how these come about.

Optical Illusions

Highly interesting were the speaker's references to methods employed by optometrists to detect "malingerers," persons who for reasons of their own make the statement that their vision is impaired. He also spoke of optical illusions, based upon the ability of the brain to fuse images seen by the eyes. For example, if two cards, one green and the other yellow, are laid upon a table and a vertical card placed between them in such a manner that each card will be seen by one eye only, the colors will fuse and the cards will appear to be gray in color.

Dr. Crewson told a series of little known facts about the eyes.

If a foreign body gets into the eyes, that organ begins automatically to remove it. The lid of the eye closes, with the upper and lower lids first coming together at the outer corner and working across the eyeball in a manner similar to that of a wave. This action causes tears to be excreted and the fluid, combined with the wiping action of the lid, tends to carry the foreign object to the inner corner of the eye, where it may be carried away through the duct leading into the nose.

"If you get something in your eye, do not rub it," was Dr. Crewson's advice. "Just blink the eye a few times and in 99 cases out of a hundred, the object will be carried away. If you rub the eye, you may force the object under the upper lid and into the soft tissues, where it may cause some inconvenience and pain."

Coldest Part of Body

The cornea of the eye is the coldest part of the human body, being about two degrees lower in temperature than any other portion.

Dr. Crewson was questioned regarding treatment of eye defects by exercise of the muscles. He explained that there are machines for the purpose of exercising the muscles and, in some cases, partial results had been noticeable. So far, however, such treatment has not been of sufficient value to enable glasses to be dispensed with, nor has it proved particularly valuable.

The speaker told of a German invention known as "contact lenses," which he described as a definite forward stride in optometry, despite the fact that they are by no means perfect so far. "Contact lenses" take the place of glasses in certain cases, and consist of thin shells of very clear glass which adhere directly to the eyeball. They are held in place by suction and this causes a minor inflammation which makes it impossible for the wearer to use them for more than three or four hours at a time. In addition to being applicable in only rare cases, the contact lenses are very costly. When worn, the lenses are not apparent, and do not alter the appearance of the eye.

Eye Well Protected

Nature has provided remarkable protection for the human eye. First of all, it is set in a pocket of bone and, in most cases, is set well into the head. In addition, there are deposits of fat about the eye which act as "shock absorbers."

Dr. Crewson advised his listeners to read or write with the light coming from behind, over the shoulders. As far as he knew, there is no basis for the theory that the light should come over the left shoulder except that it is natural to have the light in such a position while writing in order to avoid the shadow of the hand upon the paper. He also discounted the statement that it is best to sit on the left side of the screen in a movie theatre.

The speaker explained why the eyes of an animal shine so brightly in reflected light at night, while the human eye would not be visible. This is due to the fact that the pupil of the eye of a cat or other animal is much larger in the dark than that of the human eye and offers a large reflecting surface.

One-Eyed Man of Future

Dr. Crewson referred to the fact that a well known authority on eyes has published his theory that in human evolution, man will eventually have but one eye, set in the centre of the forehead. The same theorist believes that this single eye will have the stereoscopic properties of the pair of eyes possessed by present-day humans, and that it may also have the faculty of seeing through opaque objects. The speaker was of the opinion that this, if it came about, would be a backward step. A human being now has the chance, if one eye is injured or its vision impaired, of having one eye left. This privilege would be lost to the human of the distant future if he possessed but a single optic.

THE UNITED CHURCH

A forceful message was given by Rev. John McKay on Sunday morning from Deut. 22:8. In this text we find that God is vitally interested in the way a man builds his house. The principle: 'I am my brother's keeper," is emphasized here. Jesus and His followers also laid stress upon this: "Bear ye one another's burdens." Self-sacrifice is the first law of the Christian religion. The liquor situation is very prominent in the minds of the people of this province. What does my religion tell me as regards my attitude to this question? The Christian Church dare not dabble in party politics but should insist on the practice of Christian statesmanship and public honesty. It should stand by the weaker. In this spirit each individual must face this issue. "Does God want this bulwark taken down?" is a question for the individual. "Who does want it?" asked the pastor, and he went on to show that no church, educational or society organization has asked for it. He then named three elements that go toward the building of the battlements against this traffic: education, legislation and moral and spiritual training of our people.

The evening service was conducted by Rev. Charles Adey, of Williamsburg, who gave a stirring message on Elijah, taking I Kings, 17:1 for his text. After describing his birthplace, he said that his life was a protest against corrupt civilization. He witnessed by deeds rather than by words Through the influence of Jezebel the worship of Baal became the religion of the court, but owing to the efforts of Elijah, did not become the national religion. Elijah's story is the story of human life all through. Men and women worship at the shrine of pleasure, wealth, ambition, etc., and Elijah's are needed to show them the better way. The choir very acceptably repeated some of their Easter music.

Next Sunday evening the worship service will be in charge of the Young People of the Summers' Settlement.

FELLOWSHIP AWARDED FORMER MORRISBURG MAN

The Guggenheim Foundation, New York City. has awarded a fellowship worth $2,500 to Dr. Douglas Bush, professor of English at the University of Minnesota and a former resident of Morrisburg, Ont. Dr. Bush, son of Mrs. Dexter Bush, of Toronto, and the late Dexter Bush, of Morrisburg, is a graduate of Victoria College, Toronto. He graduated in 1920 with a gold medal in English and classics. He obtained a doctorate of philosophy in English at Harvard University in 1923.

WHITE—STRADER

A wedding ceremony of unusual charm and interest was quietly solemnized at Stewarton United Church, Ottawa, in the presence of immediate relatives on March 29th, at two o'clock when Dorothy Lillian Strader, daughter of Mrs. Strader of Ottawa, formerly of Williamsburg, and the late Philip Strader, was united in marriage to David Roy White, of Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. White, of Ottawa, Rev. F. S. Milliken, minister of the church, was the officiating clergyman.

The bride was attended by Miss Eileen Brown, of Ottawa, and Mr. John E. McIntosh, of Kingston, cousin of the bride, attended as groomsman. A pretty costume of blue in a swagger suit effect with accessories of a darker shade of blue, was worn by the bride. Her hat was a fabric model of blue and she wore Talisman roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid wore a swagger suit of tan with accessories and a hat to match. Mrs. Strader, mother of the bride, wore a black ensemble with a straw hat to match. Mrs. White, mother of the groom, wore a black fitted suit and black hat.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held for the immediate relatives and friends at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McIntyre, 148 Bronson Ave. Ottawa. For this happy occasion the rooms were artistically arranged with mixed spring flowers and the tea table was centred with prettily decorated four-layer wedding cake which was surmounted with sweet peas and lily of the valley, and was also adorned with lighted pink tapers in silver holders. Tea was poured by Mrs. F. C. Brown, of Ottawa, and Mrs. Strader McIntosh, of Williamsburg, cut the ices. Those assisting at the tea table were the Misses Marion Gordon, Iva Whitteker, Mary McIntosh, all of Ottawa, and Miss Eva Donaldson, of Winchester.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left for a short honeymoon trip to Toronto and other points west, the bride travelling in a suit of blue with accessories to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. White will take up residence in Ottawa.

The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. D. J. White, Mr. and Mrs. B. White, Mr. and Mrs. H. White, Mr. and Mrs. F. White, Mr. and Mrs. R. O'Neil, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Hummell, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Shannette, the Misses Marjorie and Doris White, Iva Whitteker, Marion Gordon, Eileen Brown and Nettie Hill, all of Ottawa. Out-of-town guests were the bride's grandmother, Mrs. J. A. McIntosh, Miss Florence McIntosh, Mr. and Mr. Strader McIntosh, all of Williamsburg, and Mr. John E. McIntosh, of Kingston.

FIRST MAN CURED OF ARTHRITIS BY DR. LOCKE

First man to be cured of arthritis by the noted Dr. Locke, Peter A. Beckstead, village blacksmith, died in Williamsburg on Thursday last in his 67th year.

Back in 1909, a young country doctor, just starting in practice, was called in by Beckstead, suffering from arthritis. After treatment of four hours by young Dr. Locke, the blacksmith was able to return to his work and has continued at this until stricken with a heart attack some weeks ago.

> sent a messenger to Elijah saying, So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by tomorrow about this time.

Elijah was forced to flee, and suffered a breakdown from which he never fully recovered. But he had strength enough left to plant himself squarely across the path of King Ahab. That royal gentleman desired to extend his estate and tried to buy the vineyard of a self-respecting citizen named Naboth, who refused to sell. Ahab caused Naboth to be accused of treason, and he was put to death, and his estate, according to the law, was confiscated. King Ahab hurried over to look at his new acreage, and there was Elijah waiting for him.

> And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O, mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee; because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord.
> Behold I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity. . . .
> And it came to pass, when Ahab heard these words that he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly.

All the starch went out of the kings when the prophets spoke up. Elijah was one of the most heroic of them all, and Mount Carmel, where he faced the idol worshipers, is a monument on the path of human progress. It marks the spot where one man stood against tremendous odds and by his own single-handed courage turned back a nation to spiritual worship. Of him we might say what Whittier wrote of another champion of righteousness:

> The world redeemed from superstition's sway
> Is breathing free for thy sake to-day.

We are told that Elijah never died but was snatched up to Heaven in a chariot of fire. Elisha, who had been his assistant, put on his mantle and continued his work, a power in the land for many years. So great was his vitality that even death could not destroy it.

> And it came to pass, as they were burying a man that, behold, they spied a band of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha; and when the man was let down, and touched the bones of Elisha, he revived, and stood up on his feet.

The earlier prophets did not write their sermons, but about 800 B. C. some of them began doing so. The first to write was Amos. He was not trained in a theological school and did not belong to the priestly party or wear the union label, so that when he began to preach an officious priest tried to stop him. Amos would not be stopped; he had plenty of courage.

THE OVERBURDENED TAXPAYER

It has become almost popular with the public press of to-day to write about the over-burdened taxpayer, and publish, or refer to a list of useless expenditures on the part of our governments, and our governing bodies. We are over-governed; we have too many useless canals and railroads that are being maintained at the expense of the poor taxpayers. In a sense there is justification for complaint, but one wonders why such evils, or defects, are allowed to exist in a free and democratic country where the voice of the people is suppose to rule.

It may be that no one has the courage to tackle the problems that are so freely criticised and so easily condemned. It may be that the evils complained of have grown up with our system of government, and are so hedged about that it is next to impossible to uproot them.

Dominion and Provincial Governments, Senates, County Councils, city, town and village Councils, School Boards, and many other such organizations, all with their body of officials, duplicate buildings and machinery to maintain, with their caretakers and attendants; expensive machinery that is idle half the year, and many other duplications and unnecessary machinery, are some of the things that might easily be done away with. And yet the people seem to like it, and if one raises a voice against any one of the established systems, he is set upon as a disturber of ancient and established forms of government. The army of paid officials are quick to take offence and offer opposition. They enlist the sympathy of their friends, and there is a general hub-bub over the one who has dared to suggest a re-organization.

Premier Henry did the bravest thing that any provincial prime minister ever dared do when he introduced his bill to cut down the number of provincial representatives by twenty, and also the number of his cabinet ministers. He did it in the interests of economy, and to help relieve the burden of the taxpayers. As a practical man he saw that drastic reductions in public expenditures were necessary, and this was one of the effective ways in which he could act. And how much is his act appreciated? Now that the provincial elections are in the offing, how often is this splendid and courageous act for public economy on the part of Premier Henry referred to by the so-called independent, or semi-independent press.

Last Saturday the Toronto Globe devoted its whole editorial page to the meanest kind of misrepresentations of the motives of Premier Henry, and it had not one word of credit for the many good things he had done. Supposed, or insinuated mistakes were retailed and magnified, but no credit given. Is this honest and fair journalism? Is it not pure, unadulterated political spite?

It is significant, however, that the leading Liberal newspapers who are devoting so much space and talent to abusing the Henry Government, have very little to offer in its place. Their acknowledged provincial leader, Mr. Hepburn, is not mentioned very often and many of his absurd and vulgar public speeches, while reported in the best possible form known to newspaper men, offer nothing that he has suggested or outlined as a constructive policy, nor have they yet found a place among the big headlines of first page daily newspapers.

Premier Henry may not be what one would call a brilliant statesman. Neither is he in the same class of political manipulators and wire pullers as his predecessor, Hon. G. H. Ferguson. But Premier Henry is an honest, practical, resourceful and courteous statesman, who has the courage of his convictions. There is no doubt he met strong opposition in his own party, and is still meeting that opposition, because he reduced the number of provincial representatives as well as the number of his Cabinet ministers. He, himself, has taken on not only the duties of Prime Minister, but also is Minister of Education, and is now acting as Provincial Treasurer, and there is not a business man in the province who is carrying a heavier load, a greater responsibility, and still maintaining an efficient government, than Premier Henry.

We hear much of the over-burdened taxpayer, but none of that burden can be laid at the door of Premier Henry.

County Councils, Municipal Councils, School Boards have heaped up debts that are becoming a great burden, and in many instances, the Henry Government is being asked and urged to help the "over-burdened" taxpayers, who, as a last resort, are appealing to a government that has done more to help the people solve their troublesome problems than this province has ever known.

The people of Ontario may be thankful that they have a leader and prime minister such as Mr. Henry, and it would be a sorry day if the people were misled into making any change at the present time.

ARE MEN SELFISH?

Over seventy men could spare 50c or $1.00 each to attend, singly or with lady friend, the meeting of the 100 Club held at Hotel Winchester on Monday night. There was the usual supper, but the main attraction was an address, a humorous address, delivered by Rev. Mr. Rawson, of Ottawa. It was a happy crowd, and the entertainment was worth the price, as entertainments go. We wonder, however, how many ever think of anything but paying for personal entertainment. Perhaps it is not wise to criticize or express opinions publicly, but one could not help think that much of the so-called depression exists only when it interferes with our personal comforts and pleasures. There were a good many people and many children in Winchester who went to bed Monday night hungry, and with hardly enough to cover them warmly. The 100 Clubb is doing splendid work in this community, and deserves the support of every good male citizen. The point is, however, how come that so many are willing to hand out 50c or a dollar for a bit to eat and a little entertainment when they refuse to contribute to religious or charitable organizations when appealed to. We wonder why this is because men are not as a rule so utterly selfish. Probably they need a little education along certain lines, and honestly, it may be that they are so pestered by the multiplicity of church organizations and their solicitations for funds, that they welcome a diversion. It is an old truism that there is a possibility of overdoing a good thing, even a humorous address.

ON ANOTHER EDITOR'S OPINION

The Trenton Courier-Advocate is fast becoming one of the leading weekly newspapers of the province. Fearless, outspoken, independent and to the point; its editorials are entertaining, refreshing as well as enlightening. But the editor of the Courier-Advocate does not believe in the Canadian Weekly Press Association placing itself on a pedestal to judge the merits of the other weekly newspapers of the province without having any knowledge of them. It appears that the Association, endeavouring to promote better editorial work among weekly newspapers, offered a prize to the paper showing the best editorial page for a year. There are only a comparatively few competitors, and, of course, good as they may be, are not outstanding among Ontario weekly newspapers. The Courier-Advocate concludes with the following observations, to which compliment the Editor of the Winchester Press makes its humble bow:

"Many newspapers, with just as good editorial pages as those mentioned in the Montreal despatch, were not heard from for the very reason that they are not members of the press association or, being members, they did not compete.

"Among these papers are The Winchester Press, The Bowmanville News, The Almonte Gazette and The Elmira Signet. And don't you ever think that these papers have not editorial pages that are outstanding. In our opinion, and we should have some opinion after thirty-five years of weekly newspaper experience, The Winchester Press, Almonte Gazette or Elmira Signet have it all over some of the papers mentioned as runners-up in the Montreal competition."

RELIEF FUND TO BE INVESTIGATED

In the administering of what is known in Canada as the Relief Fund, there is bound to be some irregularities, and grasping municipalities have not been slow in taking advantage of any chance that presented itself to secure an amount to be expended in their municipality that was really beyond their need. The Relief Fund is made up of one third by the Dominion Government, one third by the Provincial Government and one third by the municipality applying for and receiving relief. That there is here a certain amount of wire-pulling to secure a share of that fund, is beyond doubt, and had there not been at the head of the administration of that fund men of good judgment, firm determination, in all probabilities things would be far worse than they are. Several investigations held in Ontario into the dispensing of the Relief Fund in certain municipalities have shown that advantage was taken of the generosity of the Federal and Provinical authorities in a way that does not reflect in a very creditable manner on the honesty of some public men, and has exposed the utter meanness, rotten principles, and downright grasping dishonesty of certain men who were trusted to do the right thing in the dispensing of that fund. That the millions of dollars expended during the past two years in Relief work have helped much in enabling this country to weather the storm of general trade depression, and have kept many families, and especially little children, from untold suffering, there is no doubt. We, in this section, have not felt the depression the same as in industrial centres, and we know little of what it means for men with wife and family to be without jobs, and unable to procure, because they had not the money and could not get the work, and in many cases turned out of house and home. The thousands of young men who have tramped our highways, getting food and shelter wherever they could, was a sad sight, but those young men had no work, no prospect of work, and rather than be an extra burden to their parents, they took to the road.

The Federal and Provicial authorities have been as careful as men can be in the administration of the Relief Fund. The demands made, and the expenditures made by municipalities, have been carefully looked into and checked up, and every precaution taken to avoid and prevent waste and extravagance.

It is hinted that some startling disclosures will be made. If men have dishonestly taken advantage of the Relief Fund they should be exposed, and punished. Thousands upon thousands of men, women and children have been compelled to undergo deep humiliation and severe privation because there was no work, no income, and relief had to be asked for. It was no fault of theirs, and men of hearts that felt for the needy, men who were willing to devote their time and ability to help relieve such distress, were, no doubt in many instances, imposed upon, and advantage taken of their somewhat widespread and complicated work. If it can be shown that men in comfortable circumstances took advantage of the Relief Fund administration, and procured for themselves advantages they were not entitled to, they should be not only exposed, but given a little of the suffering they compelled others to undergo because of their avarice and greed. Premier Bennett has taken the right stand in ordering the fullest investigation.

EDITORIAL NOTES

They are talking of erecting an Onion Warehouse at Petrolia, Ont.—Whew!

The Petrolia Advertiser says "Spring house cleaning has come to take the joy out of spring." Evidently our contemporary doesn't know woman, for there is no joy on earth to her like than turning the house inside out in the early spring. And, after all, while some men grumble, they enjoy the after effect..

Exeter Times-Advocate: We have no particular fault to find with the winter of 1933-34. It came too early, it stayed too long, it was too cold and too windy, with too much snow in the wrong places, with too little sunshine. Outside of these things the winter was not bad.

"Did you see Jesus?" was the title of the Pageant put on by the Young People of Mountain Station in the United Church, of South Mountain, on Sunday evening, April 8th, at the regular hour of service, under the leadership of Miss Laura Moorehouse, president of the Y. P. A. of Mountain Station. The story was centred about a pagan Greek merchant, Dionysius, who, very anxious to learn all he could about this man "Jesus," made enquiries of all he came in contact with. Finally Paul had conversation with Dionysius and persuaded him to accept this new religion which was for the Greeks as well as the Jews.

The cast was composed of the following: Dionysius, Allan VanAllen; Mary, the mother of Jesus, Nona Balkwell; a child, Ruby Simzer; the rich young ruler, Chas. McGill; lad with five loaves and fishes, Robert Cheney; Mary, Violet VanAllen; Martha, Hazel simzer; Lazarus, C. Bryan; Ben Ammon, a leper, E. Workman; Mary Magdalene, Mrs. M. Foster; John, A. Moor-Merrill Foster; John, Arthur Moorehouse; Peter, John McCargar; Jairus' daughter, Myrtle Tracey; Spirit of Judas, Roy Cameron; Paul, Ken. Cameron. Assisting with the singing were, Mrs. Duncan Cameron, Stanley Wallace, and Clair VanAllen. Miss Gladys Barriger presided at the organ.

Pictures depicting the various phases of the life of Christ, were thrown on the screen by Mr. H. C. Fader. The large audience present, and the silence prevading throughout the entire service bears testimony to the way the Pageant was received by all. It is very gratifying in these days of stress and strain to see so many young people who are willing to devote their spare time in the service of their Master. At the close the young people were entertained at the Parsonage by ladies of the congregation, and after a hearty sing-song of the good old hymns our fathers and mothers delighted in, the evening was brought to a close.

MOTORISTS ARE STILL LIABLE FOR RIDERS

Ontario motorists will continue for another year at least to be liable for injuries suffered by voluntary passengers. The bill of Chas. Robertson (Liberal, North Huron) to prevent voluntary passengers in motor vehicles bringing an action against the owner or driver for negligence to him while a passenger was withdrawn from for the present session with Mr. Robertson' consent. Hon. Chas. McCrae, presiding in the legal bills committee, said that the government would in the next year make a study of similar legislation in two of the provinces and some of the states and legislation might then be drafted.

The committee was informed that the rate for passenger risk which now stands at $2 is likely to be increased to $5.50 or $6 next year because of the increasing number of claims filed under the clause endorsing policies for this risk. Mr. Robertson said that the insurance companies were being fleeced through collusion between motorists and passengers with the assistance of racketeering lawyer.

"I am quite content to let the bill rest as long as the matter is not dropped entirely," said Mr. Robertson.

The Dollar Bride

Fourth Installment

To get fifteen thousand dollars to save the family honor, Nancy Gordon promises to marry the well-to-do Dr. Richard Morgan. Her beloved brother, Roddy, has come home from New York to confess that he has taken that amount from the bank where he works —because a woman needed it—and that he will be jailed if he is found out before he returns it. So Nancy, in love with the penniless Page Roemer, decides to borrow the money from Morgan, and pledges herself to marry him in return. He agrees to the bargain, feeling sure he can make her love him. While they are talking at his house, Roemer comes to see him. "Oh, Richard, don't let him come in here," begs Nancy when she hears his name. And as Richard looks at her the pitiful little secret of her love for Page is revealed to him.

Now go on with the story.

"Nancy, you don't quite hate me—do you?"

She blushed; she remembered suddenly her cry to her father: "I hate that man!" And she was going to marry him. She felt ill and weak and trembling, but she remembered her father's ashen face in his sleep.

"N-no, I don't hate you!" she answered faintly. "I—oh, don't ask me, Richard."

He did not; he was silent for a while, looking at her, and then he remembered.

"I'm going to get that money for you, Nancy. Fortunately, I have it here in the bank, in such shape I can get it, the whole of it, today. But it's only eight o'clock, the banks aren't open, won't be for an hour. Will you breakfast with me? I've only got Mammy Polk here, but she's a good cook. Come to breakfast with me, Nancy, for the first time."

Then she raised her eyes involuntarily to his and her heart seemed to stand still. How his face had changed! She would never have known it. She trembled. If he loved her like that it was terrible to treat him so; to come into his life and wreck it—for—for—money! Every noble instinct in her nature revolted against it, and yet there was Roddy and her mother and her father! Suddenly she covered her face with her hands and groaned.

"Oh, Richard!"

He was startled; he felt a change in her, and his flush deepened. Something almost like hope quickened in his heart, but he did not speak.

Neither did she, they had no time. Mammy Polk came to the door.

"Breakfas' a' ready, Mist' Richard."

She was a tall, old black woman, gaunt and erect in her striped purple calico and her long apron.

"Mammy Polk, we've got company to breakfast," said Richard quickly. "Miss Gordon is going to eat breakfast with me."

Mammy Polk courtesied.

"Howdy, Miss Nancy? We'se got waffles an' coffee; de doctah, he don' eat noffin mornin's. Can't I drop yo' egg on a bit ob bacon, Miss Nancy?"

"No, no! I like waffles, Mammy Polk. I'll take anything you have."

Mammy Polk smiled. "I reckon yo'll like de waffles," she said proudly.

"Mammy's famous for them," said Richard. "Come, Nancy, let's go out to breakfast."

He bent over her, his face aglow, offering his arm. Nancy took it and tried not to look at him. Together they walked into the dining room, following the tall figure of Mammy Polk.

Richard led her to a chair opposite his own. Nancy sat down weakly, hardly daring to lift her eyes, she was afraid the old negro woman would see the traces of tears.

"Try to eat something, Nancy, you'll be ill if you don't," she heard Richard's voice.

"Indeed I can't eat, Richard!"

She felt his eyes on her and tried to hide her own, toying with her fork. Her lips trembled. Was he wondering why she wanted that awful money?

"Don't ask too much, Richard!" she cried, agonizingly.

He shot a look across at her, and his own color died away slowly.

"I wish you'd try to eat—see these waffles," he offered Mammy Polk's best.

Nancy took one and sat looking at it, her lips still trembling.

"I don't want to cry into a waffle," she said in a choked voice, "don't watch me, please don't!"

"I can't—there's someone at the door now to see me." Richard rose. "I'll send him off in a jiffy—why, it's Page Roemer!"

Nancy sprang up, her face white. "Oh, Richard, don't let him come in here!" she gasped.

Richard who had started for the door, turned and looked at her, his heart in his eyes. For a full minute they stood thus, looking at each other, and Nancy's pitiful little secret told itself. Richard knew it. He seemed to hesitate, to be thinking hard, and his strange eyes deepened and darkened wonderfully.

"I sha'n't bring him in here, Nancy," he said quietly, and went into the next room.

Nancy sank down again into her chair at the table. Every nerve in her body throbbed and quivered, she heard Page Roemer's voice, then Richard's, then the movements of the two men out there in the hall. Richard was sending him away and she felt like death. If Page came into the room, if he dreamed what she had done—her face burned with shame. Horror seized her, she clung to the arms of the old mahogany chair in which she sat. It seemed to her that she had lost all power of thought and action. Then she heard the front door shut and Richard coming back alone. She did not look up, she could not. He came in slowly and stopped beside her.

Every nerve in her body throbbed and quivered when she heard Page Roemer's voice.

"Nancy," his voice was kind, but there was emotion in it as deep as hers. "I'm going out now—to the bank. Stay here, please, with Mammy Polk, I'll bring it straight back—the sum you need."

She tried to answer him but she could not. She had risen and was standing weakly, and he made her sit down again. His touch was gentle and his face, close to hers, flushed and paled almost like a woman's. Their eyes met. and. for the first time. he kissed her.

"Nancy!"

She was trembling violently and she could not raise her eyes. He held her close, pressed to his heart, and she felt his breath soft and warm on her cheek.

"I'll make you love me!" he said again. "If I thought I couldn't—I wouldn't dare—but I will, Nancy, I will!"

Her head sank lower and there was a little silence more eloquent than words. Then she gasped. "Please don't—not now, Richard! I—I can't bear any more."

"I know—forgive me!" He was up and half way to the door, then he turned back, his heart in his eyes, hot with wrath. He was thinking of Page Roemer. But something in her attitude, in the appealing profile, the air of grief and helplessness, went to his heart. He did not speak; he opened the door and went out.

To Nancy the shutting of that door snapped the tension. She sank lower in her chair, her eyes fixed on a space of sunshine outside the window where she could see the soft green turf, and here and there the yellow flame of a crocus.

Those yellow crocuses out there leaped up like tongues of flame, she watched them, fascinated. If she could only get out of that window and run away—she caught her breath at the thought. It would be so easy! Could she? But there was Roddy to go to jail, and her father! She remembered and shuddered, hiding her eyes.

She heard Mammy Polk's voice, but the words were blurred, the old woman was babbling about Richard. Nancy's ears were strained, listening for his step coming back; she heard, instead, the clock strike, a single flute-like bell, half past nine.

Mammy Polk set a dish down and turned quickly.

"'Clare t' goodness, dere's Mist' Richard coming back now!" she exclaimed.

Nancy sank lower in her chair; a deep blush mounted. Then she rose slowly to her feet, gripped the edge of the table and stood, swaying a little, her face turned toward the door, waiting for this man who was so soon to be—her husband!

Richard had brought the money, all of it, and he had asked no questions, not even when he saw the haste that invaded her like a tempest, the secret haste that she wanted to hide from him and could not.

"Richard, I've got to go home!" she cried trembling. "I—I must go alone, too. Don't ask me why!"

And he had not asked. Suddenly his voice and his eyes were kind, as if he knew. The passion seemed to have died out of them, but there was tenderness.

"I'd come if I could help—could I, Nancy?"

She shook her head, speechless, poised for flight, and he was generous. He let her go unquestioned and undelayed.

Fear winged her feet; she almost ran down the long street; she was possessed with a horror of being too late, of having done it all in vain! Her imagination, a vivid, restless thing at best, pictured Roddy's arrest just as she entered—or, worse still, he'd be on his way to New York with the detectives.

She turned the corner, had a glimpse of the old house and garden, quiet under the fine old trees, and drew a breath of relief. When she opened the gate she saw Roddy walking up and down inside the lilac hedge. He paced restlessly, but with a dragging, dejected gait. He wanted to escape it all, but there was no escape—except by the road. He had promised Nancy not to go until she came back. And then it might be too late.

Nancy was thankful that he was alone. She could tell him so much more easily than she could tell her parents. They were her real problems.

"Roddy," she breathed in catchy gasps, "I ran all the way—here's the money—go to New York and pay it all back!"

Roddy, utterly amazed, stood staring blankly as she thrust the bulky package into his hands. She had never looked smaller or more childlike; her pale face a little drawn, tears of excitement misting her blue eyes, only her lips touched with red, moist and trembling. She must have gone mad, he thought soberly.

"Take it, take it, Rod! It's all right—bonds and securities as good as gold, you can cash them, take them and go—quick, quick, before it's too late!"

He took the bundle, glanced at its contents and stared at her with his mouth open.

"Where in mischief did you get it, Nancy?"

"I—I got it—" she stopped, leaning against a tree, breathless. She was so pale that her blue eyes looked dark. "It doesn't matter—I borrowed it, you can have it, Roddy."

He was turning the papers over, bonds and securities and cash. His amazement deepened as he counted and assured himself that all were genuine. Fifteen thousand dollars—the whole sum—from the gods! How in the name of heaven—? He stared at his sister, the red glinting in his wine-brown eyes.

"What have you been doing? Where in the world did you get this, Nancy?" he demanded hoarsely.

"I didn't steal it!" she said in a low voice.

He turned on her. "Don't rub that in!" he cried almost fiercely. There seemed to be no gratitude, no response in him. He stared at her as if he thought her a thief, she had hurt him cruelly.

Her face crimsoned under his eyes. "It's mine!" she repeated with stiff lips. "Don't stand there, don't stare at me, go back to New York. Oh, Roddy, go before it's too late!"

A light broke over his perturbed face. Relief or something akin to it.

"Oh, Lord, I'm thankful!" he breathed, folding the envelope up and staring at her, "I'm going—but—Nance, where on earth did you get it? I must know that!"

Her eyes darkened suddenly, she choked back a sob.

"I'll never tell—unless you trust me and go—right away."

Roddy stared, his jaw dropping, he turned white and then red. "Nancy Virginia, did you tell—to get it?"

Nancy, who felt his shamed misery, threw her arms about him.

"I didn't—I vow I didn't, Rod! I just borrowed it."

"Borrowed it—on no security? Lord, Nancy, how can we pay it back?"

Anger welled up again in Nancy. She had suffered and he took it this way—without thought of her!

"We'll do it somehow, Rod! Can't you trust me—I won't tell, I won't truly! Oh, Rod, do you want to go to jail? Can't you wake up, take it and go—go!"

Roddy, utterly amazed, stood staring blankly as she thrust the package in his hands.

Their eyes met. She was clinging to his arm, pushing him away, urging him to go, and they were very close together.

"I did it for father," she said flatly, "it was killing him. Now go—go. There's a train, you can just catch it!"

He hesitated, in an agony of shame. He wanted to fling the borrowed money back, to say he'd face jail first, but his courage ebbed as the temptation pressed against his heart, he held the package gingerly, but he knew the money was there—the money to save him!

Does it cost money to run this paper?

It does.

Do we have to pay our accounts promptly?

We do.

Do unpaid accounts due us, help us pay our own accounts?

They do not.

Is there any way you can help?

Well, you might try.

For instance, several hundred subscription renewals are due about this time of year. Individually, the items are small, but when multiplied by several hundred they are a serious matter.

How about your subscription account?

Have you renewed?

HOW TO BOOST BUSINESS

Let's sit down and whine
Until business is good.
Let's grumble and pine
Until business is good.
Let's kick and complain
And display our disdain,
From all boasting refrain,
Until business is good.
Let's quit eating meat,
Until business is good.
Let's turn off the heat,
Until business is good.
Let's buy no more clothes,
Or attend any shows,
And shut off the hose
Until business is good.
Let's pay no more taxes
Until business is good.
Let's lay down our axes
Until business is good.
Let's build no more schools,
Or obey traffic rules,
And pawn all our jewels
Until business is good.
Let's not shine our shoes
Until business is good.
Let's holler for booze
Until business is good.
Let's blame all our cares
On the bulls and the bears
And rest in our chairs
Until business is good.
Let's hide all our cash
Until business is good.
Let's live upon hash
Until business is good.
Let's stop paying bulls
And quit taking pills
And shiver with chills
Until business is good.
Let's quit paying rent
Until business is good.
Let's live in a tent
Until business is good.
Let's go without socks,
And quit winding clocks
And invest in no stocks
Until business is good.
And quit smoking cigars,
Until business is good.
Let's stop eating pie
And lay down and die
So the undertaker will cry:
"My! business is good."

THE EXPECTATION OF LIFE FORMULA

The remark is often heard: "I wonder how many more years I have to live!" Of course, it is impossible to give a positive answer to that question as no human being possesses the faculty of reading in the future. However, using as a basis statistical records and experience, one can provide an answer to the question which will be found to be close to accuracy. In order to offer an answer to the question so frequently put forth, an insurance company has prepared a "Table of Expectation of Life," which will be of interest to a considerable number of people. The figures which appear on the table, are not infallible, but in the majority of cases, by consulting them, one can obtain an approximate estimate of the number of years "yet to life."

By way of illustration, suppose that the accompanying table is consulted by a man 30 years of age. Opposite "Present Age 30," in the column headed "Years of Life Remaining, Men," he will read 36. This is not a prophecy addressed to him personally that he will live 36 years more, or to age 66. What the figure does mean is that according to the experience on which this table is based, a very large group of men of his age, will, on an average, live 36 years longer—some more, some less.

Let us now consider the expectation of life in the case of people in the ages of 10 to 75:

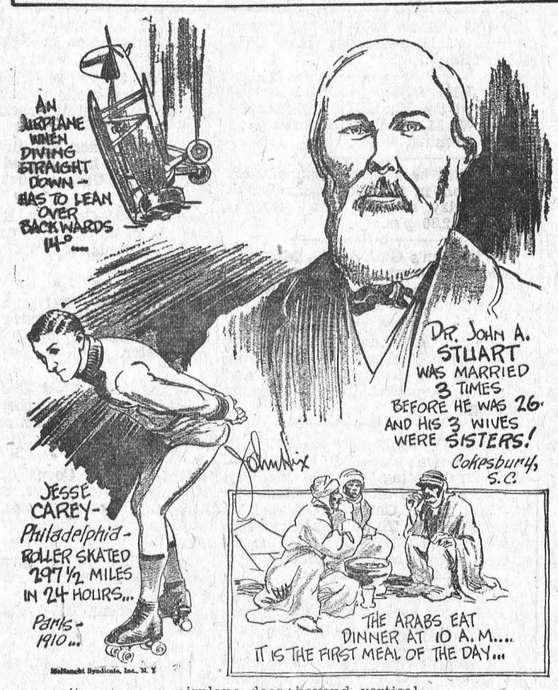
BRIDGE AT MORRISBURG?

Believing that in the Morrisburg area there is the ideal site where an international bridge can be constructed at the least cost, an agitation has been started in Morrisburg and in Waddington, N.Y., which is opposite Morrisburg, for such an enterprise. Prominent citizens of both communities are meeting and arranging details and looking into the matter fully before taking any definite move. They have found, on the Canadian side, that not far from the Morrisburg end of the Ottawa-Morrisburg highway there is a perfect spot for the Canadian end of the bridge. This is at the Muttonville road. It is high and between that spot and the United States shore the St. Lawrence runs but six feet deep over solid rock.

In Waddington, the United States end of the bridge would come at the north end of Main street, an elevated section of the state highway that runs through the village.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



Strange as it seems, an airplane does not dive straight down when it is diving straight down. That is to say, when an airplane is diving directly towards the earth the line of flight must be about 14 degrees beyond verticle.

This strange fact is due to the "lift" of the wings. The wings, in level flight, incline slightly upwards at the leading edge, to give the plane enough lift to counteract the pull of gravity. When the plane is nosed straight down the lift of the wings carries it off its vertical course by about 14 degrees—an angle that amounts approximately to one sixth of a right angle. To correct this a diving plane, in order to do a vertical dive, must dive somewhat beyond vertical.

Strange as it seems, Mary Griffin Stuart was born on Feb. 28, married on Feb. 28, and was buried on Feb. 28.

EARLY TOMATO PRODUCTION

The best prices for tomatoes are paid for early, ripe fruit, but the grower must not make the mistake of having the plants cost more than is reasonable.

The Dominion Horticulturist recommends early sowing coupled with the use of early maturing, good varieties. The sowing should be made just early enough to have stocky, well grown plants in bloom and ready for planting out at the sign of settled weather.

Soils unduly rich in nitrogen tend to promote rank wood growth and a small amount of fruit. Low nitrogen, high phosphoric acid and a medium amount of potash are essential to good results.

Poultry is at last definitely recognized as one of the essential departments of every up-to-date farm where a program of mixed farming is carried on. Not only is it recognized as a necessary department of farm work but more and more farmers are coming to realize that for the capital invested and labor involved there are few if any departments that give as good returns. For the mixed farm, general purpose breeds such as the Plymouth Rocks, which are good both for laying and for the production of market poultry, are recommended. A flock of a hundred such birds carefully managed are returning to many a farmer a profit over cost of feed of from $200 to $500 a year, which is something not to be disdained by even the most successful farmers.

The Family DOCTOR
by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

PAIN IN ARTHRITIS

"Doctor, I could get along—if it weren't for this terrible PAIN." So often we hear that—we doctors. If we could only alleviate the pain!

Now, let's talk sense. First, be sure that it is arthritis in your case. Your doctor can tell you. Second, you can never relieve pain in a joint by walking on it! Don't forget that, please—never! The fat patient with arthritis suffers more; let's talk to the fat one.

If you want to relieve the pain, you will use REST and DIET first. Drugs come last. Ah, you had been trying every drug from aspirin to Sloan's; and you kept right on walking—and eating everything you can get hold of!

If you have arthritis, you are SICK, I tell you. Then be yourself. I'm talking for relief of pain, mind you—and I mean every word I say. Go to bed and stay there; keep off those sore joints, you fat woman with a case of early arthritis. Don't even go to the bath-room. Take your food lying down. That's REST.

Then, "starvation diet." You want to relieve pain, don't you? Here is your diet: BROTH, WHOLE-WHEAT MUFFINS, TEA OR COFFEE WITHOUT CREAM OR SUGAR—FOR THREE DAYS. Fourth day you may add lettuce—and "greens;" yes—spinach. Nothing more. You will be astonished at the result—freedom from pain. Remember, it is the recent case of arthritis that I am talking to. Remember—rest and diet first—drugs last. Rest in bed three weeks if necessary. When pain is gone, gradually—very gradually get back to your usual diet. And, remember—you can never get rid of pain in a joint by walking on it—especially in the knees, feet and ankles. Now I've said much here—but it means a lot as well.

4-H CLUB NEWS

If all the dairy cattle owned by present and former 4-H club members were rounded up it would make a herd of some over 100,000 head. Or one animal to every farm in some of our medium sized states, or one to half the farms of a state like Indiana or Nebraska. It is a wonderfully efficient herd, too, for the animals have been carefully selected, reared well and are from parents of known production. That is, the sires have begat daughters which made profitable yields of milk and butter-fat when put under official test, and the sons of these sires likewise begat daughters of high production.

The dairy cattle registry associations which keep records of all these things watch the work of 4-H club members very closely, because they want to encourage it for general good of dairy cattle breeders and consumers. The more economically dairy products are produced the more profit there is for the farmer and the more the consumer receives for his money. So among other encouragements given club members by dairy registry associations is the awarding of state championship and a national championship title by the Holstein register.

The records of these state and national champions show how much more a boy or girl can do in dairy herd building than most people have any idea. The Iowa state champion Holstein boy named for this year is John H. Whaley of Marshall county. Starting 6 years ago with a dairy calf the boy today has 16 head. In the time he has made 25 exhibits, winning $154 in prizes. One of his heifers made 445 pounds of fat in a state contest; another 388 pounds.

Edwin Crumb has been named New York champion. He is a Chenango county boy and has a herd 4 years old which he started with a calf. The herd is valued at $675. The boy raised the money for his first calf from projects in other lines. A calf of his own breeding which he showed at the state fair last year won fourth place in a long string of calves. Records like these two boys are not uncommon, and a few can be cited for girls.

EARLY COURTS

By the Treaty of Paris in 1763, the whole of Canada was surrendered to the British. The territory now occupied by the County of Grenville was under the control of the officer in command of Montreal District.

For many years any crime committed were punished by the officers commanding the different posts. In 1774 the Quebec Act gave Canada a Council and introduced British Criminal Law, but not Trial by Jury. Thus the U. E. Loyalists, when they settled in Grenville County, had to wait for seven years for this important safeguard to British liberty. The Constitutional Act was not passed until 1791. Any cases which required attention were settled by magistrates, chief of whom was Duncan, of Augusta. In 1793 the Eastern District was formed and regular courts were established and court houses built at Cornwall and Johnstown. Here the courts were held alternately four times a year and called the Courts of Quarter Sessions. The Judges were the magistrates of the District. They chose one of their number for chairman, but each had a voice in the affixing of the penalty.

The minutes of this court are still in existence complete from 1800 and partially so, for the three preceding years.

The powers of the court were extremely varied. They appointed the judges of smaller courts, called Courts of Request. They tried such crimes as assault, larceny, sedition, blasphemy, etc. Ministers had to appear before them to obtain a license to perform the marriage ceremony. They performed all the duties of County and Township Councils, gave licenses to Inn-Keepers, appointed overseers for roads, and persons who wished to start ferries, obtained the right from them.

In the year 1800 the Eastern District was divided and out of it were formed two viz: Johnstown District, consisting of Leeds and Grenville, Counties and the territory north of the Rideau River while the new Eastern District formed the part east of Grenville County.

Courts were now held every quarter at the court house in Johnstown.

Punishments were often severe and to our minds not in direct relation to the crime committed. Assault and battery were of common occurrence, and the punishment was often only a shilling fine and sometimes but a penny.

But let a man steal but a small article and immediately the heavy hand of justice dealt out to him a month on bread and water together wih a dozen lashes. Blasphemy required a month on the simple fare with a public whipping three times during that period.

If you were too great a nuisance to your fellow citizen, at the courthouse were the pillory and the stocks in which two days of your life were spent for the edification of others.

Even in those early days smuggling was not considered a crime except in the eyes of the law for many a citizen gave up hopes of every seeing a barrel of whiskey or a keg of nails when he was summoned before the Magistrates in Quarter Sessions assembled to show cause why such goods should not be forfeited for non-payment of duty.

This court of Magistrates was at a much later date in 1840 superseded by the County Court but it did not remain for any length of time at Johnstown. One often wonders what was the reason that Johnstown was doomed to go down to hopeless ruin. It was the capital of a district, a port of entry before Prescott and Brockville were thought of; it had been the La Galette of the French yet it did not succeed. The dividing of the District proved its ruin. In 1800 when the Johnstown District was formed, the town was only a few miles from one side and the people as far west as Gananoque had to come to it to the Quarter Sessions. Petition after petition was sent to the Legislature and in 1808 the edict went forth that Elizabethtown was to be the capital.

In 1811 the court met for the first time at Brockville and the day of Johnstown was over.

NORMAL SCHOOL REGULATIONS

The Minister of Education makes the following announcements with regard to Second Year Normal Course, commencing in September, 1934-5: 1. Interim Certificates issued in July 1930 to teachers will be extended one year. If they wish to continue teaching after that date, they will be required to reurn for the Second Year Course in September 1935. 2. Teachers who completed the 1st Year Normal School Course in 1929 and whose Interim Certificates were extended to July 1934, will be obliged to return to Normal School in order to take their Second Year Course in September 1934, or relinquish their positions. This Course will be given each of the Normal Schools. Forms of application may be obtained from the Deputy Minister of Education after July 1st.

Electricity!

No tale of wonders and enchantments has ever been written that excelled the actual reality which is today at mankind's fingertips in the wonders and magic of electricity. Step by step the intelligence of man leads him on through the ages of civilization until to-day our most common utility is in fact far beyond the mere comprehension of even the dreams of our forefathers. The Hydro System brings all of this to the citizens of Winchester. There is no new development or equipment in the fields that is not available to the life and business of local citizens. The drudgery can be taken out of housework if you let electric energy be the slave.

Possibly your home needs re-wiring or the present wiring a little overhauling. If so let us know about it. We are here to see that you get the best possible results from Hydro Light and Power.

Thirty-four members responded to the roll call. Meeting closed with the Benediction in unison. Maple taffy was served by a committee

CORRESPONDENCE

April 4, 1934.

Editor of the Winchester Press:

Dear Sir:—I have just read your editorial, "Secrets Safe With Editors." The writer has also had the privilege of reading various editorials written by the editor when he published a paper in a nearby town. Since those days we have observed that the editor of the Press has at times become more Liberal with his editorials and less Conservative, and at other times bold enough to be Progressive.

As we read this week's editorials we have begun to wonder if our old friend, J. H. and the Winchester Press have not fallen prey to a thing that has become quite rife in Canada—they call it political patronage. As the Press and its editor are serving an agricultural county, one of the best in the province, we wonder why the editor has overlooked the drastic proposals for market regulation as laid out for natural products and which have caused a stir at Ottawa. The new Dominion Government market legislation is the most sweeping and comprehensive measure of its kind that Canada has ever known. It covers every conceivable agricultural product and applies to export and domestic trade.

It provides that the Board to be set up, may acquire property, compel marketing at such times or places as deemed advantageous, provide compensation to shippers for losses incurred through its orders, either on account of storage loss or the withholding from the markets. It may finance facilities for the storage and conservation of products. It may purchase or destroy surpluses and encourage or restrict production. It may demand the most detailed information from traders and it may make levies to pay for its costs of operation or to pay compensation, destruction or restriction. A system of licenses is provided to say nothing of complete abolition of trading privileges, should the act be contravened. Altogther it is one of the most embracing and socialistic pieces of legislation ever contrived.

The producers have been crying for Government assistance. The Government has handed them legislation with teeth in it or compelling co-operation. Primarily the act will depend for its success upon the voluntary co-operation of farm groups on whom the onus will fall of organizing themselves so as to take advantage of the Act. Only to the extent to which this is accomplished can producers really expect to be helped. The provision of machinery for the financing of such cooperatives should help to put them on their feet.

This new Dominion Government market legislation Act will be watched with interest by a number of voluntary co-operators throughout the countryside. It would be no secret for the writer to state that the agricultural industry depends on the organization and co-operation of the farmers. There is no other solution. Governments may do what they can to facilitate co-operation but it must come itself from the producers. Until it does, no adequate solution can be hoped for, and unless it does, farmers must accept the alternative of state rejuvenation or else the Russian plan.

THANKOFFERING SERVICE

The Women's Missionary Society of the Williamsburg United Church held their thankoffering service in the church Sunday evening with a large congregation in attendance. The service was under the leadership of the president, Miss Violet Trickey, who had charge of the opening devotions, assisted by Mrs. M. W. Locke, Mrs. L. Barkley and Mrs. C. A. Adey.

The guest speaker for the evening was Rev. John McKay, pastor of Winchester United Church, who delivered an inspiring address.

The choir rendered special music under the direction of Miss Maude Marcellus.

W. C. T. U.

The president, Mrs. Wm. Johnston, opened the meeting last Friday afternoon with the singing of a hymn, and the reading of some passages of scripture on prayer, on which an exposition was given. This was followed by a season of earnest prayer for the temperance cause.

After the reading of the minutes, some items of business were discussed, one being the holding of a public entertainment in the interests of temperance in the near future, when the speaker is likely to be Rev. H. E. Warren. The April clip sheet was taken up, the subject being the methods of work employed by the W. C. T. U., how public opinion is educated and also what is done for the young. It was shown that the W. C. T. U. is an organization of Christian women banded together for the protection of the home, the abolition of the liquor traffic and the triumph of Christ's Golden Rule in custom and in laws. Trained Field Secretaries spoke last year in 400 schools as well as to church organizations, reaching 40000 young Canadians.

A number of good temperance items were given in response to the roll call. The meeting closed with a hymn and the Mizpah Benediction.

NORTH MOUNTAIN

Mrs. Willis Riddell spent Wednesday and Thursday at the home of her brother, Mr. Arthur Balkwell.

Mrs. Maud Beggs has returned to Syracuse after spending the winter with her brothers, Messrs. Byard and Melvin Black.

Miss Elizabeth Dougall has returned to South Mountain after visiting her brother, Mr. John E. Dougall the past week.

The Misses Marjorie and Marion Coleman have returned home after spending the holiday at the home of their grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Coleman.

Mr. and Mrs. Fenton Hyndman and little son, Bill, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Clarke Hyndman.

We are sorry to report that Mr. Bert Hyndman had the misfortune to have his foot badly hurt from a rolling log while sawing wood at his home on Saturday last.

The Young People's Society of St. Andrew's Church held a taffy party on Monday night in the church hall. Progressive Crokinole was played and a very enjoyable programme followed, after which the taffy was served. A very pleasant time was spent.
