She attended Iroquois schools and in 1886 was married to John Eamon of Morrisburg, who predeceased her in 1941 She came to Morrisburg after her marriage where she has since resided.

Survivors are two sons, and one daughter,—John Eamon of Cornwall; Ernest Eamon of Ottawa; Mrs. Frank Hummell of Morrisburg; and two sisters—Mrs. J. E. Sullivan, Rochester, N.Y.; and Mrs. K. G. Moore of Detroit Mich. There are also fourteen grandchildren and 18 great grandshildren.

The funeral servire was held at her home on Church Street, Sunday afternoon. Rev. Maxwell Allen of the United Church, of which she had been a faithful member, officiated.

Many friends, who will long cherish the memory of this kind lady attended the service and floral tributes were numerous.

MRS. EDGAR CASSELMAN

Following a brief illness, Mrs. Edgar Casselman, a lifelong and highly respected resident of Williamsburg, passed away in the Winchester District Memorial Hospital last Wednesday, September 23rd.

Born 74 fears ago in Williamsburg, she was a daughter of the late Thos. Eastwood and Susan McIntosh. She received her education in the Williamsburg schools and in later years married Mr. Edgar Casselman, who survives. She was a member of the Williamsburg Women's Institute, St. Peter's Lutheran Church, and the Lutheran Women of the Church.

Surviving besides her husband, are two sisters, Mrs. Merton Saddlemire of Williamsburg, and Mrs. Florence McIntosh of Winchester Springs.

The funeral was held on Friday last from the Locke and Fairbairn Funeral Home to St. Peter's Lutheran Church, where the service was conducted by the Rev. J. L. Kirchhofer, who took his text from the 116th Psalm, Verse 15. Congregational hymns sung were "Just As I Am" and "Sun of My Soul". A duet, "In the Garden", was sung by Mrs. Garnet Weegar and Mrs. J. L. Kirchhofer.

The pall bearers were Grant M. Casselman, W. E. Trickey, Ross Wingard, rOan Wert, Walter McGowan and Reg. Barkley.

NEW ROAD SKIRTING WATERWAY URGED SOON

The Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission is pressing for an immediate stant on a new highway to skirt the proposed St. Lawrence deep waterway between Prescott and Cornwall, J. D. Millar, deputy minister of highways, said yesterday.

Mr. Millar said the Commission wants an immediate start to avoid traffic tie-ups when work starts on the waterway.

Meanwhile, the government will go ahead with a $400,000 resurfacing job on No. 2 Highway between Cornwall and Aultsville, part of an old highway which will disappear when flooding starts.

Mr. Millar said waterway construction is at least five years away and a good road is needed in the interval.

EUCHRE

The Morrisburg Ladies' Softball Club will hold a Euchre Party in St. Mary's Hall, Morrisburg on October 9th. There will be good prizes and a door prize of a Kenwood Blanket, and a good lunch, all for 25c.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Friday, September 25 started out cool and cloudy but by 10.30 a.m. the Track and Field Meet was well under way and the weather was just right for running, Jumping, throwing, vaulting and cheering, and all the other things that take place at a track and field meet.

Mr. J. Cole and Miss M. Galvin, this year's physical education instructors at M.H.S., did a wonderful job of organizing the meet, and the events went off on schedule.

At the end of the day there were some sore and tired young athletes in Morrisburg and district, but they had an idea of what to expect at the Meikle Track and Field Meet to be held in Cornwa on Wednesday, October 14th and they will probably be in fine shape by that time.

In the senior boys' events, Lee Wells won the most points, with Ron Merkley second, and Jim Jordan 3rd. (Lee's time for the mile was 5 minutes, 24 seconds).

The remainder of the results are as follows: Junior Boys: Leland VanAllen, 1st; Roger Bouchard 2nd; Donald Whitteker, 3rd.

Senior Girls: Marilyn Meikle. 1st; Jane Ouderkirk and Jean Steward tied for 2nd; Carole Connor and Janet Fraser, tied for 3rd.

Intermediate Girls: Catherine Wiitman, 1st; Doris Willard 2nd.

Congratulations to the winners and all who took part, and good luck at the Meikle Meet.

"SALADA" TEA

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: My young niece, 14, is causing us some anxiety. In many ways, she is wonderful. Since she has found her first boy friend, however, she thinks she knows all the answers. She considers her parents hopelessly old-fashioned. For some reason she brings her 'problem' to me; I raised a nice daughter, without having any trouble.

"My niece doesn't know how to behave with a boy. When they get home from the movies, she stands outside the house in the dark for long conversations. Her mother has warned her this is not proper and has asked her to bring him in. He seldom enters the house and I think it is her fault. Her parents think she's too young for good-night kisses, and so do I.

ALL-WISE YOUTH

"She thinks it's sophisticated to talk about the boy to anybody who will listen. I remind her they're not interested, but she won't believe that. We live in a small place, where everybody knows each other's business. Her parents are only trying to bring her up properly, so that she will be well thought of. I remind her how much they love her. She says they don't understand her! They are, as a matter of fact, wise and kind.

"And they are worried . . . Is there any further advice I could give her?

WORRIED AUNT"

* You have covered the ground well. One angle should be emphasized, the importance of a girl's reputation, particularly in a small community where her every move is observed and discussed. When she gets to the point where she realizes that her parents are trying to protect her from adverse comment, she will see they are on her side; only then will she recognize their authority more willingly. If they plan get-togethers for her friends (both sexes) and make her home the gathering place for the group, that will further their desire to multiply her good times and increase her popularity.

* She needs frequent praise. She must feel her family is proud of her, and compliments will do that. Just now she feels older than she is, so it would be wise to treat her accordingly—suggesting instead of demanding—to show how anxious they are to depend on her judgment insofar as they find they can.

* Let her chatter about her boy friend; he is her first, so she thinks she must boast. She must not feel she cannot talk about him openly. If she oversteps polite bounds, others will put her in her place and, for some young girls, that is the best way to learn restraint.

* It is admirable that she gives you her confidence—especially at her age. A relative is sometimes easier to talk to than one's parents. Encourage her friendliness, and continue to let her feel you stand by.

It is hard to manage a young girl whose first boy friend has gone to her head. To keep her confidence, yet steer a proper social course, is a problem . . . Anne Hirst understands these problems, so send yours to her. Address her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

ROBBER ROBBED

Thieving can prove to be the start of a vicious circle, thinks Douglas Odell, of Carmel, who was caught, red-handed, committing a burglary. The police agreed to his request to be escorted to his home for some clothing.

Great was Odell's annoyance when, on arriving home, he discovered that his home, too, had been burgled. Exclaimed the embittered captive: "A fellow can't leave anything lying around without having it stolen. It's a shame!"

Rare Bird Call — Pretty Annette McGinnis, 15, is mighty proud of these white jungle fowl and she should be. There are only three of this rare breed in the U. S.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline D Clarke

Remember last week I said I expected to be many miles from home before I wrote again. And I certainly was. Between last week-end and this I travelled about a thousand miles. First stop was Deep River, which was the setting for our son's wedding. It was just a small affair—not more than a dozen guests—distance and accomodation limited the number of invitations. It was too long a trip for Partner with his strapped up shoulder; Arthur couldn't get away so Daughter came home and took charge so that I could represent the family.

I won't make any attempt to describe the wedding—after all one wedding is much like another, irrespective of size. There is always the jittery bridegroom; the outwardly self - composed bride; wedding pictures, reception, confetti, tossing the bride's bouquet, and the bright ideas of the young folk to impede and embarrass the bridal couple on the first lap of their honeymoon. So I will spare you the details and tell you something of my trip.

Bob, Betty and I left home at 5 a.m. Friday. It was dark, warm and somewhat foggy. I was looking forward to the dawn to feast my eyes on new scenery. Actually, until we got past Peterborough I was a little disappointed. After that I had no complaints. Along No. 7 to Havelock, Madoc and Kaladar it was rugged and beautiful, jagged rock and evergreens on either side of the road. At Kaladar we took No. 41.—through the loveliest scenery. But oh, that road! Good surface but narrow, winding and continuous short, steep hills. It was like riding a roller-coaster. For anyone inclined to be carsick it wouldn't be so funny. But I loved it all, every inch of the way. We passed dozens of signposts pointing to inland lakes where there were doubtless many summer cottages, but not one could we see from the road. I would loved to have followed some of those roads in through the bush. But when a man is on his way to his wedding he doesn't stop for sight-see-ers. From Cloyne onwards we passed many sparkling lakes, in fact the farther north we went the more beautiful was the scenery — through Eganville and on to Pembroke, where we stopped for dinner. I was expecting to see a few bush fires but there wasn't so much as a puff of smoke. At Petawawa we did see blackened earth and naked trees from a fire which had long since been extinguished. Following the Ottawa River we arrived at Deep River about 2 o'clock, passing Chalk River, of atomic fame, on our way.

Deep River is a unique village, unlike any other place I have seen. It is a model village amid natural rustic surroundings, bordering the Ottawa River, and looking over towards the Laurentians. It is clean and tidy. Each house, or double house, stands in its own well-kept grounds, and for dwellings without a garage, there is a community garage on each street with six double doors. There is a shopping centre within walking distance with ten or twelve stores in a row, complete with a shaded sidewalk. Across the road there is a wonderful indoor recreation centre, also a modern hospital, spacious hotel, lovely walks and a beach. Sail boats on the Ottawa complete the picture.

Lovely, isn't it? But don't think you can live there. Deep River is company town. You can live there only if you have a job at the Chalk River Atomic Plant. You can't even get a room overnight at the hotel. Our nephew happens to be a physicist at the Plant so he rates a house—and the wedding was from his home, the ceremony at the very modern church in the village. But, while only a chosen few, as it were, can live at Deep River, the place is well worth a visit. But be sure you don't drive more than ten miles an hour. There are no sidewalks and since most of the homes are occupied by young couples the roads are literally swarming with dogs, children and an assortment of bikes, tricycles and kiddie-cars!

Well, so much for Deep River. Saturday I went by car to Ottawa and then by bus to Kemptville to stay with friends until Tuesday. Sunday we drove towards Gananoque within sight of the Thousand Islands. Monday we visited lovely Ottawa, passing through territory that was entirely new to all of us. Tuesday noon I boarded a bus for home, coming through towns, cities and villages which had previously only been names on a map to me. Many times I thought, "Oh, if I could only have an hour or two to explore" particularly when we passed "Abbey Dawn."

Arthur met me in Toronto, brought me home, and next morning took Partner and Dee to the Exhibition. I stayed home for a change!

And then what do you think happened? Next morning I had to go down town. Coming home I looked towards OUR Mountain. There it was, in alternate sunlight and shadow. Except that the river was lacking, to me our Mountain was just as lovely as the Laurentians. After travelling hundreds of miles I realized to my satisfaction that few districts had little more to offer than our own little county of Halton.

How Can I?

Q. How can I sweep my cellar floor without raising a lot of dust?

A. Try saving all your old coffee grounds and tea leaves Soak these with water, sprinkle them on the floor and then make a clean sweep.

Q. How can I get rid of spiders in my cellar?

A. First, eliminate the webs Use a good, strong insecticide spray Spiders prefer to build their webs in damp places, and so, cutting down on cellar dampness will discourage any spider invasion.

Q. What is a good substitute for a bath mat in my tub?

A. A turkish towel on the bottom of the tub serves very well.

Q. How can I remove iodine stains from my hands?

A. Rub the stained areas with a slice of lemon or a slice of raw potato.

Q. How can I remove oil stains from cloth rugs?

A. Treat the spot first with a cloth soaked in limewater. Then wash if necessary.

Q. What can I use for patching plastered walls?

A. Plaster of paris is very good, but unless you're very quick, it may dry and harden

For A Long Life Keep Back Straight

You want to be healthy physically and mentally fit? Then listen to the secrets of good health just revealed by one of the fittest men in New Zealand, Dr. N. G. Trotter, M.B.E. whose amazing vitality is making him world-famous.

Always keep your head erect and your back straight, he advises. That enables your lungs and heart to do their jobs properly. Swim as often as you can; it's the finest possible exercise.

Walk as much as possible; it gets you into the sun and perhaps more important, it gets plenty of air into your lungs.

Massage is a great enemy of sciatic and similar complaints, says Dr. Trotter. "When I was a boy I noticed that animals were always rolling, rolling, rolling. That made me study massage. As a doctor, I found it was wonderful in the treatment of that so-called modern disease, fibrositis.

Sun-tanned Dr. Trotter also says: "Let the sun get at your body whenever you can. It has a marvellous tonic effect."

Another hint: "Make yourself friendly to other people Help other members of the human race as I have tried to do. It rids you of selfishness, which is too pre-

M.P.'s Awakening

A certain M.P.—who shall be nameless—is a poor orator, but he never minds people telling him so.

Somebody called on him one day and asked: "Is it true that you yawned last evening at one of your own speeches in the House?"

"I certainly did," he replied. "You should have heard the speech — it was terrible!"

On another occasion the M.P. declared: "I dreamt that I was making a speech in the House. I woke up and — I was!"

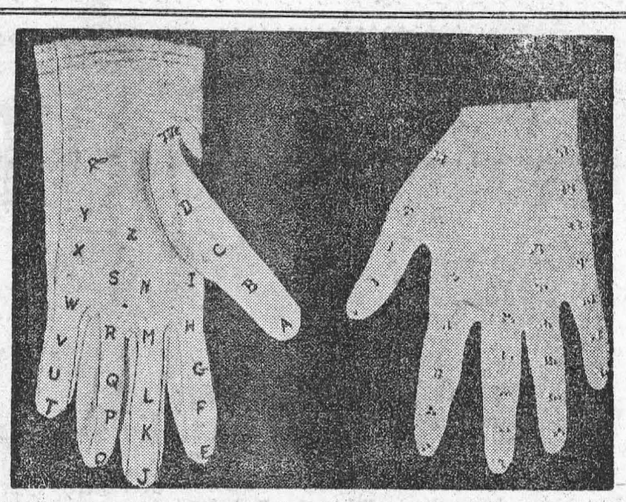
Portrait Of The Years — Mrs. Anna Kren, 88, is framed for posterity with her 60th great-grandchild, four-week-old Catherine Ann McCune, by Catherine's mother, Mrs. Donald McCune. Nine of Great-Grandmother Kren's 10 children are still living, and she has 33 grandchildren.



Styled for conversation — So that blind-and-deaf individuals may communicate more easily with persons who have all their faculties, Rev. Ernst Christian Sibbersson, of The Church of The Deaf, has designed the "communications" glove at right. By use of a braille-imprinted cardboard "hand," at left, the user learns position of letters on the glove, and is enabled to identify them by pressure, when a sighted person touches various letters to form words and sentences.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

• It is inevitable when the super-stars of hockey meet in the annual all-star game, that there will be thrills and drama. For here is the cream of the crop, players who represent literally millions of dollars spent in recruiting, developing and drilling them into the polished finesse that major hockey requires.

But, though the all-star game is now an annual affair, we doubt if it will ever produce such throat-catching drama as developed in the very first of such spectacles. It was on a February night of 1934, in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, the night of the Ace Bailey benefit game and the first time, we believe, there ever was an all-star hockey battle.

A few weeks before, Leafs had played in Boston. What was just another game had suddenly belched forth grim and sinister tragedy; conjured up the chill black spectre of death in the evening, death in a hockey game.

Eddie Shore, powerful star of the Boston, most-idolized in Boston, most-hated elsewhere, had, from behind, roughly hurled his brawn into Bailey, a slim, fast-skating, hard-shooting right-winger, as Bailey turned from an abortive play, and was moving back. Shore never asked, never gave, any quarter in hockey. He played hockey as Dempsey fought, with an inborn savagery, a burning lust for victory.

So, in his own rugged fashion, Shore plunged into Bailey, to shoulder him out of the way. Bailey, off-balance, pitched forward on his face, his head struck the ice with fearful impact, he lay there in a suddenly nerveless, inert heap. You can usually tell these major crashes in hockey, and the crowd, the players, instantly sensed that here was injury and damage beyond the ordenary. His skull was fractured. For days, it was a toss-up whether Bailey lived or died.

The sports world turned bitterly against Shore. He was suspended by League edict, while the mob clamored that he should be barred for life. Others suggested he be jailed and tried for assault — perhaps for murder. The anti-Shore feeling was tremendous.

But Bailey recovered. And when it was decided to stage an all-star game for his benefit, Shore was one of those selected to face Maple Leafs. Before the game Bailey stood in midice, shaking hands one by one with the players who were to perform in his behalf. Finally, it came the turn of Shore, the man whose check, good or bad, had caused all this, the man who had just missed plunging a fellow-player to death. A crowd sat silent, hushed suddenly by the sheer grippling drama of the situation. You might have thought Shore's head would drop a bit, that he would have faltered or hesitated or glanced about. But he did none of those things. Chin up, eyes clear, he wheeled up to Bailey, stuck out his hand. Bailey shook it warmly. And a sudden roar of pent-up emotion, that burst with the sudden force of the Johnstown flood, shook the great building to the very rafters.

That was drama. We doubt if any other all-star game will ever produce its equal.

Calvert DISTILLERS LIMITED

AMHERSTBURG, ONTARIO

SPORTS &c

by A SIXBIT CRITIC

Of recent years our personal fishing has been pretty much confined to the kind where you have an order of chips on the side; and our shooting largely of the variety named after the late Mons. Jacques Crapaud, where the numbers "seven" and "eleven" bulk most important.

* * *

However, that isn't going to prevent us from handing out a little timely advice, which we borrow holus bolus from one of Canada's greatest and most interesting outdoor authorities, Bob Turnbull. Thank you, Robert!

With pheasant and partridge shooting not too far off this is the perfect time to give some consideration to sportsman-farmer relations. Each autumn at pheasant time, particularly close to the larger cities, there comes a justifiable holler from rural residents that trigger-happy city slickers are peppering stock, farmhouse windows and so forth with misdirected shots. Fences are broken down and gates left open so that cattle and horses often wander away.

While it is true that only a small hooligan element is responsible for such poor sportsmanship the unfortunate thing is that an irate farmer is in no mood to differentiate between good and bad hunters, and who can blame him. So all must suffer.

Yet the farmer is the key to good shooting, and maintaining it, in rural areas, hard by our cities. So he must be given every consideration and co-operation.

While all wild game teconically belongs to the province, control of most of its habitat is vested in the owner or tenant of the land. The farmer can lock the door to all hunting on his land, or he can, as many do, be exceedingly generous with his hospitality.

There is an easy approach to the use of the farmer's magic key. This is simply through the use of common courtesy and the following 10 commandments are the open sesame to the farmer's fields and coverts:

* * *

1. Always drive into the farmer's yard and ask permission to hunt.
2. Hunt only in the areas he designates. Stay away from his stock.
3. Respect his fences. If necessary to climb them, do so by a post. Use gates if possible, closing them behind you.
4. Never shoot near houses, barns or livestock.
5. Leave fruit and other crops alone. If you want some, buy it from the farmer.
6. Go around fields where people are working or pastures where stock is grazing. Don't walk on seeded ground. Don't tramp through standing grain.
7. Shoot crows and predators that do damage to crops.
8. Share your game with the farmer.
9. On a subsquent visit, bring his wife or children some little gift or token of friendship.
10. After you've become well acquainted, suggest a planting program to better game habitat, offering to finance it or help him with it, thereby showing genuine interest in his affairs.

Just remember that the farmer makes his living from the land that you want to hunt over, so respect it every bit as much as you would the saw or plane you might borrow from a craftsman in the city. That's all the farmer asks — consideration.

Where's that Barber? — This furry pup would like to get his paws on his barber. Seems he doesn't believe his new hairdo is too fashionable.

Doin' the Turkey Hop — Tom Turkey sets a fast pace for pretty Jean Chapman as they stroll down the Boulevard. The premature Thanksgiving "prom" attracted plenty of mouth-watering attention from sidewalk viewers.

..Plain Horse Sense..

by BOB ELLIS

A few weeks ago we wrote that "judging by the results of the election Rt. Hon. James G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, must have been right when he said in his campaign: 'The farmers never had it so good, they are making more money than ever before. There are no surpluses and the British markets are not lost.'"

Quick Response

This drew a quick response from J. F. Gamble, Secretary of the Ontario Farmers' Union, Chatsworth, Ont., who writes: "Your recent article on the election results would tend to start some people scratching their heads as it seems rather ironical to say the least, but farm people apparently do not change easily, even when they are getting a slap in the face. There is a lack of true facts and the need of a better understanding of election planks if we are to get any natural results, when today there is little personal contact and the average voter becoming more disconnected with elections and parties.

"We feel there is a great lack of unity among members of labour unions and other organizations that aim to improve conditions by political action and until such membership is better educated to methods of achieving their aims, we should not expect too much." . . . "The general public is very critical of labour for some of their actions and we are not condemning anyone, but feel there is room for much improvement in the actions of individuals if labour is to gain the proper spot in the public eye . . . The recent strike of the Teamsters Union did not create public appeal."

Common Aim

Mr. Gamble continues that "it should be the aim of any organization such as labour or farmer to be militant enough to do a good job and still be sufficiently dignified to demand a finer place in the mind of every public minded citizen. It is something we should all aim for as every worker, whether he is in a factory or on a farm, should realize that we are all in need of a better understanding and a more unified aim. In a country with such possibilities we could show the world what a working people can do for themselves."

Producers: Consumers.

We agree with Mr. Gamble as to the necessity of more and better membership education and believe that public relations of unions could be considerably improved. This applies to both, labour and farmers, who incidentally realize it and discuss these two points at most every convention.

Here is a wide field for the joint committees established only a few months ago by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the Ontario Federation of Labour, and also by the Ontario Farmers' Union and the Ontario Federation of Labour.

We heralded these committees at the time as hopeful achievements, but have not heard of any of their activities.

Not an easy job by any means considering that labour unions like farm marketing associations are profit business organizations with the aim to get at large a share as possible of the price of the finished product for their members.

As producers they have no other choice in a competitive system. There is, however, one plane on which their interests are identical — as consumers.

As producers we want to get as much as possible for our product. As consumers we want to buy it as cheaply as possible.

This is the point where the field of co-operation begins.

This column welcomes suggestions, wise or foolish, and all criticism, whether constructive or destructive and will try to answer any question. Address your letters to Bob Ellis, Box 1, 123 - 18th Street, New Toronto, Ont.

Germans Gave Eyes To Blind Briton

Two Germans have each given an eye to restore the sight of William Connolly, a Wolverhampton man who began to go blind three years ago as a result of a World War 1 mustard-gas attack.

This is how it happened. In 1951 a young German walked into a Wolverhamton hospital with a tumor which necessitated the removal of an eye, and he agreed that the cornea should be given to Mr. Connolly. The operation was a great success.

Then, by an almost incredible coincidence, a few months ago another German with the same complaint went to the hospital. He also agreed to give the British ex-soldier the cornea of his useless eye.

Mr. Connolly has never met the two Germans whose eyes have restored his sight, but he hopes that one day he will be able to thank them personally.

THE OTTAWA CITIZEN

Combining both editions to give Ottawa and Ottawa Valley a more complete newspaper

On Thursday October 1st, the morning and evening editions of The Ottawa Citizen will be merged to create a greater EVENING newspaper, especially edited for Ottawa and Ottawa Valley readers.

Our entire news gathering facilities will be concentrated on one newspaper to give Evening Citizen readers complete round the clock news...and more of it.

The Evening Citizen is unsurpassed in its coverage of foreign, national, local and district news. The news facilities of the world news agencies are supplemented by reports from our own correspondents in Washington and London. In addition there are plenty of comics and features, all carefully edited for family readership.

Don't miss a single copy of The Evening Citizen. Place your subscription order today . . . telephone 2-2441 . . . and your paper will start right away.
