W. H. S. CAPTURES THE MEIKLE CUP

OLLIE SUMMERS, NAIRN BOYD AND ART SUMMERS COLLECT TWENTY-SEVEN POINTS

After adorning the trophy case of the Cornwall Collegiate Institute for the past four years, the Gerald Meikle Memorial Cup, emblematic of athletic supremacy in the United Counties, is "home again" in the Winchester High School. On Friday afternoon three trim young athletes from the local school, Nairn Boyd, Ollie Summers and Art Summers ran and jumped their way to victory in one of the most exciting contests ever held in connection with the trophy.

In the opening event, the mile race, with the Winchester supporters cheering him every step of the way, Ollie Summers ran a beautiful race to win in handy style, only to be disqualified for supposedly fouling a Cornwall runner on the first lap of the race. It was a most unfortunate incident, for Summers undoubtedly had the race well in hand from start to finish and it created a certain amount of friction among the competitors and supporters that was not good.

Now faced with defeat, through Cornwall gaining eight points in the opening event, the three local sprinters systematically set about their work of collecting points. The 100 yards dash found all three in the finals. At the crack of the gun the boys were away to a flying start, Nairn Boyd going out in front at the fifty yard mark closely followed by his teammate, Art. Summers. They took first and second places with ease.

The old fighting spirit was up and with their teeth shut the local trio went after the broad and high jumps. A first and third in the former brought seven more points to the home team with Boyd taking the event nicely with a leap of 20 feet, 5 1-2 inches. Ollie Summers collected a third and repeated his performance in the high jump which was captured by Harper ,of Chesterville.

In the 440 yards, Winchester mowed down the opposition in the heats to place two men in six in the finals. In the meantime the event took place which put the meet and the cup right on the ice—the 120 yd. hurdles. At this time Cornwall was leading the meet with 20 points to Winchester's 17, but changes took place abruptly. After winning their heats in the event the Winchester trio of Boyd, O. Summers and A. Summers galloped away with all three places to win the coveted trophy.

The final of the 440 followed, but as sufficient points had been accumulated to win the meet, the local runners eased off in their efforts. The event was captured by a Finch athlete who ran a smart race from gun to tape.

Following the meet the officials athletes and friends were delightfully entertained at a complimentary banquet in St. John's Presbyterian church hall as guests of the Cornwall Collegiate. Here the presentations were made of the Meikle and Smith cups to the winners and runner-ups and a most exciting day brought to a close.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY

Mr. Andrew W. Summers, a well-known citzen of Winchester, suffered an apoplectic seizure on Monday evening last. His condition is regarded as serious.

He was attending a prayer meeting at the home of Mr. James Gordon when he was suddenly stricken. Medical assistance was obtained at once and Mr. Summers removed to the home of his son, Rev. D. W. Summers, Main Street, West, where his condition is reported as being unchanged.

Mr. Summers had not been enjoying good health for some little time, having suffered a weak spell in June of this year. On Monday he complained of weakness, but in spite of protests on the part of his family, had spent the afternoon splitting wood. The Press joins with his many friends in hoping that Mr. Summers may be restored to his former health.

C. Hutchinson's Barn Destroyed By Fire

The citizens of Winchester were startled on Friday evening last when the fire alarm announced a blaze about 6.30 p. m. at Mr. Colin Hutchinson's Main street west, where it was found that the barns, located about 100 feet north of their residence, had become ignited. It is alleged that young boys who were smoking in the barn had carelessly tossed aside a cigarette which started the fire.

The local fire brigade was on the scene in a few moments and were soon playing water on the flames. The barn could not be saved as the fire had made too much headway, so the efforts of the fire-fighters were concentrated on the residence, which caught several times, and the other outbuildings. It was not until after a hard fight that the flames were brought under control.

A quantity of hay, some harness and a racing bike were destroyed among the contents. The loss, which is estimated at approximately $1000 is partly covered by insurance.

It was fortunate that there was no breeze blowing at the time or a great deal more damage would have been done. A field of newly cut grain north of the barn was ignited and only the constant efforts of the brigade kept the flames from leading to nearby buildings to the east.

FATALLY WOUNDED BY .22 BULLET

HILLIARD COONS MEETS WITH UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT ON MONDAY LAST

A very sad accident occurred on Monday morning about nine o'clock when Hilliard Coons, 24, son of Mr. Herbert Coons and the late Mrs. Coons, formerly of Winchester, accidentally shot himself while driving in a buggy on the pet swamp road.

The young man had been visiting at the home of Mr. William Prunner, south of Inkerman. and before leaving for the late Frank Johnston farm where he was employed, had borrowed a .22 rifle with which to scare marauders whom, he alleged, had been stealing grain from the barns.

Mr. Prunner examined the gun carefully before giving it to the young man, and asserts that it was not loaded, nor was he aware that Mr. Coons had any ammunition on his person. The weapon was placed in the back of the buggy.

Arriving at Inkerman, the deceased had stopped to talk to several men whom he met and then proceeded Inkerman Station. This was the last time he was seen prior to the accident.

Just where the shooting occurred is a mystery, but it was first discovered by Mr. Arthur McFarlane, a mechanic in Lannin's Garage, who was returning to Winchester on the Pet Swamp road with a load of wood on a truck. He noticed the horse and buggy meandering along the roadway apparently without a driver and slowed down to investigate. He found Coons slumped over in the seat in an unconscious condition with a bullet wound over the heart.The riffle stood in the seat beside him.

Mr. McFarlane immediately stopped the horse and ran to the home of Mr. Wesley Rose for help where medical aid was summoned. Dr. Gross arrived shortly, but the unfortunate man was beyond help, having been dead for some minutes prior to the arrival of the doctor.

It is believed that the hammer of the gun became caught on something in the buggy causing the cartridge, which must have been inserted in the gun by Mr. Coons while driving along pierced his heart.
the road, to explode. The bullet

The late young man was married and had one daughter, Vivian, who resides with her mother, in Cornwall. He is also survived by his father and a brother Cecil, in the West, and one brother, William, of Cornwall.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. performing the service. Interment was made in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

100 Club Entertains

About fifty Centurians were present at the meeting of the local 100 Club in Hotel Winchester on Friday evening last when the Montreal Club members were guests of the local branch. Centurian President Albert Johnston presided over the gathering and enthusiasm ran high.

It was the first time that members of the Montreal Club had visited Winchester since the formation of the local branch, and no effort was spared to make the occasion a memorable one.

Centurian Chester Timmins kept the meeting in a lively mood by conducting a sing-song in which all joined heartily, after which dinner was served by Centurian Jack Singleton and his assistants.

The speakers of the evening were then called and were warmly received by the local Centurians and friends. Centurian Dr. Lightstone, District Governor of Quebec, Centurian Alf. Eccleston, president of the Montreal 100 Club and Centurians Coleman Lewis and G. Laverriere, all of Montreal, gave short addresses in which they stressed their pleasure at visiting the local Club and touched briefly on the work of the 100 Club International.

Two interesting features of the program were a monologue, by Erle Helmer, and a "Boost" conducted by Centurian Jack Singleton in which Centurians Gordon Johnston, Hyman Bessin and Leslie Dixon were prize winners. Both were much appreciated and enjoyed by those present.

The local Club were also delighted to welcome visiting Centurians from Ottawa, Kemptville and other centres to the meeting. Among those visiting were seen Centurians Mark Powell, International President; Art Sled, International Secretary, of Ottawa; Centurian Rev. Lloyd Morrison, of Kemptville, and Centurians G. Gordon and Gus. Stratton, of Ottawa.

Following the program, a business meeting was held to discuss the progress made in connection with the relief of crippled children. It was decided to vote $100 to the committee in charge for the advancement of the work. The meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

Boy Seriously Injured

BOTH LEGS FRACTURED IN JUMP FROM TRUCK

Jack Rubenstein, a 10-year-old boy, of Morrisburg, is lying in a Brockville hospital with both legs fractured and a possible injury to his spine as a result of being run over by a truck loaded with gravel in Williamsburg on Saturday afternoon. The young lad was riding in the cab of a truck drawing gravel to the section of Highway No. 31 which is under construction, when he expressed his intentions of jumping out. The driver, Beaumont Hutt, of Morrisburg, warned him not to but he jumped, struck a protruding part of the truck and was thrown beneath the vehicle, both parts of the double hind wheel passing over his body. He was taken to Dr. M. W. Locke for treatment and then removed to the hospital.

GOLDEN WEDDING DAY

A very happy event took place on Friday evening last when Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Foshen of Mountain celebrated the golden anniversary of their marriage, being "at home" to more than eighty relatives and friends.

A wedding dinner was served to the guests and a beautiful three-tier wedding cake centered the bride's table.

A toast was proposed by the Rev. Mr. Johnston, pastor of the Mountain United Church, to which the groom replied. Mr. Harry Casselman, nephew of the bride, delighted his friends with several guitar solos during the meal.

Mrs. S. W. VanAllen played the Wedding March, after which the marriage vows, solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Johnston, were renewed by the bride and groom. Miss E. Norton was a dainty flower girl. Mrs. D Cameron sang "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes." The groom's gift to the bride was a gold piece. Many other beautiful gifts were received.

Guests at the bride's and groom's table were: Rev. and Mrs. Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Foshen, Mountain; Mrs. Mary Baldwin, South Mountain; Mr. and Mrs. F. Casselman, Morrisburg.

MOUNTAIN UNITED CHURCH

Large congregations were present at Mountain United church on Sunday last, at both services, to particiate in the anniversary celebration. Rev. E. Lacey, of Maynard, was the special speaker for the occasion, assisted by Rev. Mr. Cathcart, of Mountain Presbyterian church at the evening service. Excellent music was rendered by the choir, assisted by Mrs. A. Logan, with Mrs. S. W. VanAllen at the organ. At the evening service the North Gower Ladies' Quartette, consisting of Miss Norma Wallace, Mrs. G. McCullough, Mrs. Joe McCordick and Mrs. B. Craig, rendered several numbers.

False Account Of Meikle Cup Incident

POLICE DID NOT HAVE TO FORCE PRINCIPAL OFF TRACK

If the district correspondents for Cornwall to the Ottawa papers are as unreliable at all times in sending news items to their papers as they were in the account of the Meikle Cup Track Meet, held on Friday last, the Citizen and Journal would do well to appoint new correspondents for that territory.

Appearing in prominent places of Saturday morning's editions under head-lines, the items started off brilliantly by saying that "a school principal was escorted from the field by a constable, and police reinforcements were called out to clear the track, etc.

In fact, there is no truth whatever in the first part of the sentence referring to the principal, and very little in the latter portion regarding the police reinforcements clearing the track. The district correspondents for Cornwall began with a grain of truth and by flavouring it liberally with local colour and their imagination, made quite an event out of it. Principal E. J. Spinks, of Winchester, was not escorted from the field by a county police officer at any time during the meet, nor was there a suspicion of such action being taken. Neither was the crowd of spectators "chased to the stands," for by the time two provincial officers arrived upon the scene, the track was free of everyone but officials and competitors, and the "riot" was over to such an extent that one of the provincial officers, who is well-known to the writer, enquired as to why they had been sent for.

We are inclined to believe that the Citizen and Journal correspondents were overcome by the prospect of making it a well-padded account of a trivial affair. They showed a decided lack of discretion, for their endeavours to eat up space caused them to bring their imaginations into too great prominence throughout, at the expense of an unsuspecting school principal. The Citizen and Journal correspondents for Cornwall should keep in mind that the first essential in newspaper writing is to be sure of one's facts and then develop an article based on those facts, never varying from the truth.

"LITTLE BITS OF EVERYTHING"

LIFE A MARATHON RACE

One of the most successful men of the age has said that achievement is always hard. One can fail just by sitting still and folding his hands. He can succeed only by doing his best and continuing to do it. Many a one who is good at the start, lacks the determination to hold on in spite of the difficulties and discouragements, month after month, year after year. If life were a hundred-yard dash, there would be many more successes than there are; as a matter of fact, it is a marathon race.

Ambitious young people should realize from the start that success is not going to be easy. It demands all they have. It calls for perseverance, determination, the will to hold on when the future looks most unpromising. If the condition you want is ease, then take it; but do not be surprised if failure comes with it.

PLUCK

When things are running crosswise
and the engine's out of gear,
When the road is rough and rocky and the sky is far from clear,
When your plainly up against it and you're surely out of luck.
That's the time to use your courage and to show your stock of pluck.

Most anyone can travel on a road
that's smooth and clear,
And anyone can get there if he only
has to steer,
But when the motor's balky and you're running in the muck,
If you're ever going to get there you must call upon your pluck.

There's no thrill in easy sailing when the skies are clear and blue,
There's no joy in merely doing things which anyone can do,
But there is some satisfaction that is mighty sweet to take
When you reach a destination that you thought you'd never make.

So when everything's against you and your plans are going wrong,
Just face the situation and keep moving right along—
Don't sit down and wail and whimper.
even though you may be stuck,
You're not absolutely helpless if you still possess your pluck.

YOUR WORST ENEMIES

Some people have a genius for making you feel abused. After talking over matters with them, you are thoroughly convinced that your teachers are partial, your employer unjust, your parents expect too much of you, and your friends are ready to use you and drop you when you can no longer serve them. They are so sympathetic that they soon succeed in making you feel that the world is full of injustice and unkindness and that life is a disappointment from first to last. With only a little real thought you will realize that such a sympathizer is your worst enemy. Those who attack you. deride you, and wake your fighting spirit, do not make you half so uncomfortable as the people whose pity makes you ready to shed tears over your forlorn condition. Having your face slapped is not so bad for you as to be the recipient of sympathy which leaves you as limp as a piece of string. Keep away from those friends who have a genius for this weakening sympathy; they are the enemies you most need to fear.—Acton Free Press.

GOOD AIM

A farmer was attacked by a savage dog and his wife came to his rescue. When she arrived, she found the dog holding on for dear life to the man's leg. She picked up a stone and was about to throw it at the dog, when the husband, knowing a woman's uncertainty in the matter of accuracy, shouted to her.

"Mary! Mary! Don't throw the stone at the dog. Throw it at me!"

What I am thinking and doing day by day is resistlessly shaping my future.—Dresser.

No man ever did a designed injury to another without doing a greater to himself.—Hume.

THE OPTIMIST S CREED

Promise yourself:

To be strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind. To talk health, happiness and prosperity to every person you meet;

To make all your friends feel that there is something in them;

To look at the sunny side of every thing and make your optimism come true;

To think only of the best; to work for the best, and expect only the best;

To be as enthusiastic about the success of others as you are about your own;

To forget the mistakes of the past and press on to the greater achievements of the future.

To wear a cheerful countenance at all times and give every living creature you meet a smile.

To give so much time to the improvement of yourself that you have no time to criticize others.

To be too large for worry, too noble for anger, too strong for fear and too happy to permit the presence of trouble.

I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true,
For the heaven that smiles above me
And waits my coming too;
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And for the good that I may do.

FORGIVE AND FORGET

Some people have too good a memory for their own shortcomings. They remember some youthful folly, some embarassing blunders for years, and wake up in the night groaning over a mistake everyone else has forgotten. They recall an unkind speech to some one they love wth a pain that seems to increase as time passes, rather than to diminish. In fact it is hard for them to forgive themselves any of the weaknesses that are common to humanity.

"Forgive and forget" is a good motto, even where your own failures are concerned. You are unwise to start the day weighed down by shame and regret. Morbidly dwelling on little blunders of the past is itself a serious blunder. If you have done wrong, it is your business to right it, as far as possible. to ask forgiveness humbly and from your heart, and then forgive yourself. Life would not be tolerable if there were no ways of escaping the load of mistakes and wrongdoing which every year increases, no matter how good your intentions.

WHO'S BLUFFING

In a country newspaper appeared the following advertisement:

"The man who picked up my wallet in Forke Street was recognized. He is requested to return it."

The next day this reply was published::

"The recognized man who picked up your wallet requests the loser to call at any time and collect it."

FINISHING THE POEM

The chairman of a small town gas company was giving an address.

"Think of the good the gas company has done," he shouted, "and if I was permitted a pun, I would say, in the words of the poet, 'Honor the light brigade.' "

Voice from the audience: "Oh, what a charge they made."

A DICTIONARY FEAST

Never let go of a dictionary without getting more than you went to it for. This is one place where playing the hog pays handsomely, and is not just mere selfishness. It is always possible, no matter how great a hurry one is in, to drop the eye down and take in the meaning of another word. Often the chain thus begun will roll one back into past centuries, for our great modern dictionaries are filled with interesting facts, not just words and meaning alone.

A GOOD LAWYER

"How did you get on in your action for compensation against the man whose dog bit you?"

"He had a clever lawyer who proved that I bit the dog."

FIRST MOLLISON TAKE OFF ATTEMPT FAILS

A combination of unfortunate circumstances again jinxed the famous flying Mollisons as they attempted to take off from Wasaga Beach, Ontario, for their flight to Bagdad. A slight cross breeze, two spectators on the beach where they shouldn't have been, and a heavy load of more than 600 gallons of gasoline combined to thwart Capt. Jim and his wife, Amy. However, in typical British style, they accepted their fate and announced that they would try again. At top, the Seafarer tearing down the long stretch of hard sandy beach at 70 miles an hour attempting to get into the air. It did manage to get a foot or so off the ground, but came down when Capt. Mollison was forced to swerve back to avoid two spectators and to keep away from the water. Lower picture shows the captain and his wife scanning the early morning skies studying the weather that balked them. Characteristically, Mrs. Mollison accepted the blame for the failure, declaring that she shouted to her husband to "throttle down". This, however, was not given as the main reason.

REFUGE OF RAMBLING ROSES

Climbing roses bloom on year-old wood, therefore, said the Dominion Horticulturist, it is essential for the canes to live through the winter if one wishes to have a good show of flowers in the following year. Well ripened wood winter best, so care must be taken to allow the sun and air to get to it freely. To ensure this, at the end of the summer cut and clean out all thin and weakly shoots and any old wood so as to give room for the development of strong canes. If the roses are over-grown or shaded with other vines, these should be removed. Cones that are lying on the ground should be raised up and tied to stakes.

In preparing climbing roses for winter, the canes should be taken down and tied together. Good results are obtained by bending the canes down and putting a large box without cover or bottom over the plants. The boxes are then filled with dry leaves, and covered with water-proof lids. If the leaves are wet when put in the boxes, the canes may become mouldy. When they become wet in the spring and are used the cover should be raised at the first opportunity in the spring to allow a freer circulation of air and permit the canes to dry and the bark to harden a little before removing the box.

If boxes are not available or practical pieces of board can be so placed over the leaves used for packing that the moisture will drain off the plant. The degree of protection will depend on the part of Canada in which the grower lives, but it must be borne in mind that as a rule, in protecting roses of all kinds in Canada, the roots do not get enough protection from the soil. The lower parts of all stems should be well earthed up.

DUNDAS TEACHERS HOLD CONVENTION

SESSIONS ARE HELD AT SOUTH MOUNTAIN ON THURSDAY AND FRIDAY LAST

The Teachers' Institute of Dundas County met for their 53rd annual convention on Thursday and Friday last in South Mountain. All schools in the county were represented as well as the Chesterville Separate School, by the one hundred teachers who answered the roll call.

Miss Estella Stewart, of Ormond, presided, with H. Hamilton, of Iroquois acting as secretary. The opening took the form of devotional exercises led by Rev. W. R. Johnston, of the South Mountain United Church, while the piano was presided over by Marion Casselman, of Chesterville, for the opening patriotic selection "O Canada."

This was followed by a most interesting address by the president in which the points of an ideal teacher were clearly outlined. A few remarks from Dr. P. T. Phair, of the Department of Health for the province were much enjoyed by all. After addressing the children briefly, the speaker appealed to the teachers for their support in promoting the work now being undertaken in this county by the Department.

The morning session was closed by a discussion of the 1933 Entrance History paper led by Mr. Hamilton, of Iroquois, and R. C. Dillabough, of Chesterville, with H. E. Graham, of Winchester, and Robert Anderson, of South Mountain, taking part.

Leonard Porteous opened the afternoon session with a report on the Ontario Educational Association's convention in Toronto, followed by an address from Dr. Harry S. Thomson, of the Public Health Department, on dental hygiene.

The following committees were appointed: Resolutions, H. E. Graham, Ola Smith, Lula Mulholland, Doris Tracey and Audrey Marcellus; nominating, Mabel Suffel, Mahlon Strader, Lorne Robinson, W. J. Ellis and Arnold Johnson; press, Clifford Pitt, Garnet Gallinger, E. Donaldson, and Gertrude Weegar. A vote of sympathy was extended to Lloyd La Porte, who recently was in an accident. A. delegate, Florence Waddell; alternate, Alfred Casselman; auditors, Ralph Turner and Kathleen Merkley.

J. A Simpson, B.S.A., Morrisburg directed the public speaking contest at which winners of school fairs spoke. Donald Wylie, of S. S. No. 10, Osnabruck, was given the decision over Robert Warren, Wallace Carkner, Marion Durant and Rose Kerr.

Reference was made by the president to the proposed county-wide public-speaking contest, sponsored by the Women's Istitute. A vote showed the convention unanimously favoured the idea. W. J. Stewart, public school inspector of the county, was the last speaker of the afternoon.

At the banquet during the evening, Miss Stuart presided. Among others at the head table were: Robert J. C. Stead, of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hamilton and H. Potter. Art. Casselman led the sing-song. Mr. Stead, after an introduction by W. J. Stewart, gave a brief address, after which Mary Blanchard, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Blanchard, of Morrisburg, was presented with the Forrester Medal by Gordon Faulds, her teacher. This award is presented to the pupils in urban centres having highest marks in the entrance examination.

The W J. Stewart medal, for the rural school pupil securing the highest entrance examination marks went to Lillian Walker. Mr. Stead made the award.

A solo by Joseph Wood, of South Mountain, completed the program.

On Friday the teachers visited many points of interest in the City of Ottawa and a most enjoyable time spent.

PARLIAMENT HILL HEARS

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

Lord Macmillan told us a charming story of the English tourist in Scotland who found out that the only attraction in one village where he was scheduled to spend the day was the village churchyard!

However, determined to make the best of it, the Englishman strolled over and decided to hold a conversation with a gravedigger.

"You're very quiet up here," he begin. "Not so quiet as they," returned the Scot, thumbing toward a tombstone.

The interview did not seem to be developing, but the Englishman persisted.

"Do people die often up here?" was his next question. "Only once," responded the laconic gravedigger.

A trifle discouraged, the tourist tried once more: "Have you lived h[illegible] all your life?" "Not yet," was the answer.

The Englishman shrugged his shoulders and went back to the inn.

As a grandstand from which to observe the notable public men not only of Canada but of other lands as well, the Canadian Club of Ottawa takes some beating . . . the day Lord Macmillan spoke was typical, but by no means unusual . . . at the head table there were two former prime ministers of Canada as well as the present one . . . Canada's wartime minister of finance, Sir Thomas White . . . Warren Delano Robbins, cousin of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and U.S. minister to Canada . . . the chief justice of the supreme court . . . Sir Charles Addis and Beaudry Leman of the banking commission . . . and down in the crowd a former prime minister of Manitoba . . . as for mere cabinet ministers, private members, chairmen of tariff boards and so forth, they were scattered all over the place.

Maybe mere malicious party gossip but the story has got around that the government candidate is having trouble down in Restigouche-Madawaska because Messrs. Sauve and Maclaren of the cabinet got their wires crossed and appointed a Roman Catholic postmaster in Protestant Campbellton, and an Orange postmaster in some obscure Catholic parish . . . on such small issues do elections hang, sometimes.

If true, it would not be the first time that the powers got confused in a matter of this kind. They tell an anecdote about "Toby" Norris, once premier of Manitoba, and now a member of the railway commission, and an election tour.

Norris had been warned that he was to address two Irish settlements one evening, and that while one was Irish-Catholic the other was even more violently Protestant, and that it might be well to draw up two speeches.

This Norris proceeded to do, but he got mixed up, and delivered the Catholic one at the Protestant village and vice versa!

They say . . . when Premier Bennett got back to native soil he was much annoyed to hear that Machado of Cuba had been given refuge here, and bawled out some of his advisers . . . feared economic reprisals, among other things . . . that "Harry" Stevens is a hard worker, and you can almost set your clock by the time when he arrives at his office . . . he climbs the steps of the West Block at 8.50 a.m. precisement . . . the whole parliamentary library roof is being carefully checked since a ponderous pane of gless broke loose from its moorings and fell 140 feet or so, narrowly missing a policeman.

HON. E. N. RHODES AND PROMINENT BANKERS ENDORSE BENNETT'S FIGURES

The Prime Minister's confident and encouraging statement introducing the new Dominion Loan has created a very positive and favourable reaction throughout the County. Its clear-cut expression of his conviction that recovery is under way, together with the evidence he cited, have stimulated a growing sense of optimism in business circles which is reflected in the subscriptions to the New Loan. There has also been widespread endorsement of his view that, although the road may be long and the progress slow, the events of the past six months appear to demonstrate with increasing clarity that the downward trend has come to a definite stop and that the upward trend is in progress.

Some examples of the comment from prominent Canadians follow. Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance: "As Canadians we must all share in the sense of encouragement that the Prime Minister has inspired by his statement regarding the improvement in business conditions throughout the country. It has called our attention to indications of recovery that have become increasingly definite with each succeeding month, and which have been so sustained and consistent that one can no longer doubt their significance.'

Spirit of Confidence

Sir Thomas White, Vice President Canadian Bank of Commerce: "I fully concur with the statement of the Prime Minister as to the upturn which has taken place progressively in Canadian businesses during the past few months. In almost every branch of the Country's economic life there has been manifest a slow but steady advance from the low point of last April. Despite adverse crop conditions I found, during my recent tour of the West, not only a spirit of confidence, but quite noticeable signs of improvement."

Professor Gilbert Jackson, Director of the Courses in Commerce and Finof the University of Toronto and Economist of the Bank of Nova Scotia: "The very temperate statement made by the Prime Minister with reference to recent improvements in Canada is fully validated by the fact. Not only have the physical volume of business and production increased since February by thirty-four per cent, but an even more encouraging point is that the prices of basic commodities have risen approximately in the same ratio. This has been followed by marked increase in manufacturing activity. Even in construction there are signs of improvement. Most encouraging of all is the increased confidence of the public in the situation evidenced by their increased readiness to spend. The rate of turnover of bank deposits has increased very rapidly since spring."

Improvement is Definite

M. W. Wilson, Vice-President and General Manager of The Royal Bank of Canada: "The Prime Minister has quoted statistics to show that there are definite signs of trade recovery in Canada, but, in my opinion these statistics do not fully reflect the improvement which has occurred. While there are still a number of clouds on the business horizon, notably the low price of wheat and the partial crop failure, business throughout Canada has shown a definite and, in a number of industries, a marked improvement, and my confidence in a continued upward trend is strengthened by the background of what seems to be a definite world-wide recovery. It would be foolish to minimize the seriousness and extent of the problems still facing us, but the evidence of improvement will enable us to tackle these with greater heart and spirit. We are now offered an opportunity to show our confidence in ourselves and in Canada in supporting the Government in its essential financial operations. Dominion of Canada Bonds are the premier securities available to investors."

The greatest men have been those who have cut their way to success through difficulties.—Robertson.

One Minute Pulpit

The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand: they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck: he hath made my strength to fall, the Lord hath delivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.—Lamentations 1:14.

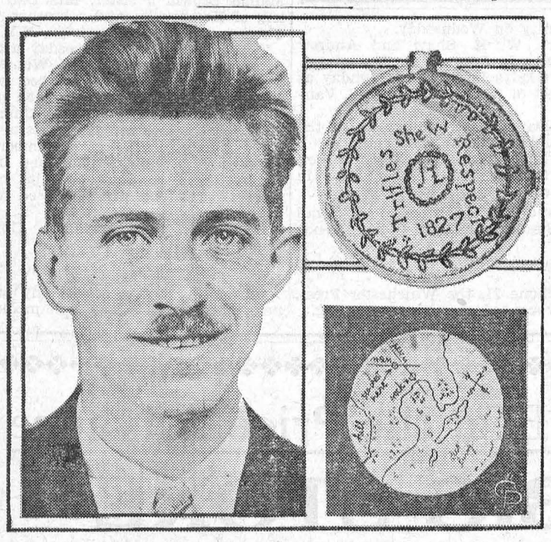
Map in Battered Watch Reveals Chart of Buried Treasure in South Seas

Toronto Man Has Watch Six Years Before Learning Its Secret—Chart Tells Location of $250,000 in Gold Bullion—May Set Out in 40-ft. Sloop



Romance and adventure have suddenly thrust themselves on Mr. C. M. Rice of Toronto. Opening an old watch, Mr. Rice was amazed to discover a chart of buried treasure in the South Seas. Above is shown Mr. Rice, and at top right the inscribed velvet sack in the back of the watch. The map was enclosed in the sack. Lower right shows the map, on the back of which was a last will and testament.

By Central Press Canadian

Toronto, Oct. — Shpanish bullion, pirate gold pieces of weight to the value of $250,000, is luring M. C. Rice of Toronto to adventure in the South Seas.

In a manner that puts fiction stories of pirate treasure to shame, Mr. Rice has discovered a map and a will which tells of a treasure to be found somewhere in the south seas.

By hobby, Mr. Rice is a watchmaker. Six years ago a lady brought him a watch to fix. In return, she gave him an old battered watch that Mr. Rice had long admired, and which had been handed down to her by her husband's father. The watch was a curious piece, and Mr. Rice was proud of it.

Recently he decided to give it a cleaning. It was while attempting to pry open the back with a knife that the knife slipped and the secret of the map and will was out.

Inside the watch case was a chart. On one side was a map and on the other a last will and testament signed "J. L. Trinidad, 1868."

The chart and will were written in microscopic lettering on a piece of paper no larger than a silver dollar.

The will reads as follows:

"Paul, my son, I am not long for this world, I fear I cannot bring you this chart, as I planned, so the only course left is to hide it some place and hope you find it. I am the only one surviving with this secret. At the spot shown lies a tidy sum, at least 50,000 pounds in gold bars and coin. The island is small, uncharted, and far from the main sailing. The rock shown is large, with two small edges. A line drawn through these bears west northwest. Lay off 100 fathoms, then bear west southwest, and 100 fathoms more. The chest is buried eight feet. Good luck, lad, and leave the sea. It's no life for you. (Signed) "J. L. Trinidad, 1868"

Now Mr. Rice, who is a radio expert, is thinking of setting out for the mysterious island in a 40-foot sloop. He doesn't reveal just where the island is, by the way.

His wife and two young sons are all set for the adventure, and Mr. Rice himself, who served in the merchant marine during the war, can hardly contain himself.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF VANCAMP CHURCH

WILL OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY ON SUNDAY AND MONDAY NEXT.

SOME INTERESTING EVENTS OF THE PAST RECALLED

On Sunday next the congregation of Vancamps United Church will celebrate their fiftieth anniversary with special services and a church supper. Special speakers will be present at both services, while a large choir will render special music. Following is a short history of the church.

On such an important occasion as a Golden Jubilee of a church, it is natural to glance back into the past and think of those to whom we are indebted. The Vancamp church had its beginning in the misty past among the very earliest settlers of Dundas county. Buried in the cemetery beside the church is Mrs. Mulloy who, as a girl of fourteen took, the sacrement from the hands of John Wesley, so that this church has a very direct connection with the founder of the Methodist Church. It is quite likely that the Rev. Henry Shaler, the first "saddle bag' 'preacher to go through this part of the country, held services in some of the log cabins that are still remembered by some of the older folk of the congregation. We can find certain trace of indebtedness to the the religious revival held at Iroquois Point in 1832, conducted by the Rev. Wm. H. Hamilton. Before the first church was built in 1845 worship was held in barns, wagon sheds and school houses. A barn could serve even for the most sacred of services, the Quarterly Meeting, although this was not usual for we have stories of people walking long distances to be present at this service in a building that had been properly dedicated. In our records we can catch glimpses of heroic living on the part of the early preachers, class leaders and saintly mothers as they sought to develope the hidden treasure in human hearts. The almost impossible trails of the forests were long and hard but their devotion was more than a match for these most primitive conditions. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shaver whose wedding certificate, dated 1817, we have among our relics, walked the twenty miles to Iroquois each carrying a child to attend a Quarterly Meeting.

The First Church

The first church was a frame building somewhat smaller than the present church. We have a record of a revival in this church held by the Rev. J. Greener whose headquarters was at Kemptville. The following quotation in this good man's words will be interesting. "Kemptville, Nov. 16th, 1854 At a sacramental occasion held in the church at Vancamp's Mills, we were favoured with a large measure of the influence of the Holy Spirit, when two persons desired the prayers of God's people. This favourable omen for good was followed by a prayer meeting in the evening, when more striking evidences of the Divine Presence were felt. Thus encouraged, we held the meeting night after night for five weeks. We were visited with "Showers of Blessings." The altar for prayer was surrounded with penitents, from the aged sinner to nearly three score and ten to the youth of a dozen years. Never did we witness a people more willing to labour for the conversion of sinners. Over 100 professed to receive good, 88 of whom we received on trial. We have the record book of a class leader dated 1848. The class met at the home of Richard Richardson. The leader, according to the book was supposed to mark after the name of each member not only whether he was present or not, but also the state of mind whether penitent, justified, or doubtful, but according to the markings, this leader never had the temerity to classify his fellow worshippers in this way. We have a Methodist Quarterly Ticket dated 1834 and a Presbyterian Token dated 1843. One of the older folk remembers hearing her grandmother describe how they used to wash their print dresses, soiled through the week's wear, that they might have them clean to go to worship in on Sunday. Little Miss Render got chatting with a man on the road home from school and asked if he thought there was a letter in the post for her family. He, wishing to be cheerful, declared that there surely was a letter. The result was the girlie's mother walked all the way to Heck's Corners, now called Heckston to get the longed for letter from England, only to find it had not as yet arrived.

In 1864, Vancamp's Mills church was one of the points of the newly formed South Mountain Circuit. The Minute book mentions as present at the first meeting of the Board, Bros. Wm. Shaver, Ira Shaver, John VanCamp, R. VanCamp, E. VanCamp, R. Shaver, R. Richardson and others from other points of the Circuit. In 1883, we find the minute that Rev. Wm. Philip read the Basis of Union, that Andrew Rose moved its acceptance and that the motion was carried almost unanimously. The present Charge of Inkerman and VanCamp came into being with the union of the Methodist churches in 1884. The minister and Mr. C. Durant, the first Rev. A. C. Chambers was the first a resolution was passed to record secretary of the Board. At that time "heart-felt gratitude to Almighty God for the brotherly love and the harmony which have prevailed during the discussion of the important questions which have come before us for consideration and adjustment as a new Circuit of the 'Methodist Church.' " The neat records and the fine penmanship in these old books do honor to the secretary at that time, Mr. Ruban Shaver.

Church Destroyed By Fire
The Present Edifice

On the 1st of January, 1882, the frame church caught fire from the stove and was destroyed. The loss was keenly felt, but instead of feeling discouraged, the congregation at once decided to build a much larger and finer church. Whether it would be brick or stone was left in the hands of B. VanCamp, D. Briens, and John Rose. In the meantime worship was carried on in the hall of Mr. H. Seymour who was to receive as rent $2.00 a month during the time it was necessary for him to heat it and nothing for the remaining time. The brick came from South Mountain from the bank of the Nation River and the sand from Maple Ridge. We can see clearly the determination to build the finest building possible out of small resources and our present church does honor to these folks of other days. Some of the people were not content until they had gone deep enough in the earth to have a basement and high enough into the sky to have a spire. Both of these ambitions were realized after much discussion and effort. When nearly completed the spire on a very windy day was blown over into the cemetery. But spire there had to be and also a bell. This last bit of church furnishing was secured in 1894.

Program Arranged

The guest speaker for the services of worship on Sunday will be the Rev. A. W. Seaton, of Shanly. Mr. Theodore Miller, of New York State, a specialist in floral decoration, will arrange the flowers. On Monday evening at the re-union supper, there will be displayed a collection of relics dating back one hundred years in some cases. These articles used by the forefathers will seem to bring them very near. Letters of remembrance are being sent to all former members and adherents that can be traced, and replies will be read from those who wish to express their debt of gratitude for what this church has meant to them. A large choir will lead the service of praise. A birthday cake with 50 candles will suggest the past 50 years which have been more of light than shadow. The programme of story, song and music will contain not only backward glances but a word of courage for the future.

The following song, which will be given on Monday evening, is very fitting:

The Old Church

The Old Church stands on a lonely hill,
And at close of day, when the world is still,
The big bell chimes from the belfrey tall,
Ding, dong, ding, dong, God loves you all.

The children hear it and cease their play,
The toilers pause on their homeward way,
And the tears of the mourners cease to fall,
Ding, dong, ding, dong, God loves you all.

The old church stands like a beacon blest,
With the green graves round of the souls that rest,
And I dream they hear when the shadows fall
Ding, dong, ding, dong, God loves you all.

SCHOOL HOMEWORK?

Is homework for school pupils to be or not to be? This has long been an educational question that arises from time to time. It is up again in some places. In Oakville, for example, an experiment is being tried. It, in short, eliminates or abolishes homework and transfers it to the class rooms. Under the arrangement the school will open at 8.30 o'clock in the morning and close at 4.15 p.m., with, of course, the usual time off for noon and recesses. The net gain in time is three-quarters of an hour a day.

One argument for the change, outside of the general adverseness to the old system, is that now-a-days the home distractions are such that there is neither time nor encouragement to study. The radio, bridge and dancing are characterized as enemies of such a course or desire. With studies confined to the class rooms it is believed better results will follow. The Oakville experiment will be watched with interest by interested teachers, trustees and parents.—Collingwood Enterprise-Bulletin.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

Doctor Howard A. Kelly, emeritus professsor of John Hopkins University, says that if before a game of chess or of tennis one of the two players, equally matched were given a glass of beer, he would be easily defeated by his opponent. Whether the game calls for physical or mental alertness, the small amount of alcohol contained in a glass of beer would be fatal to success.

Some young fellows think it is so smart to defy the laws of the country, that they are willing to sacrifice their chances of success to that end. Well, everyone to his choice! If the fumes of liquor on the breath and a slight dizziness is preferable to winning in tests of physical prowess or mental alertness, it is for the individual to decide. The majority of young folks, however, will conclude that success is to be preferred to the empty satisfaction of being a law breaker.

Poems That Live

THE FALLING LEAF

Were I a trembling leaf
On yonder stately tree,
After a season gay and brief,
Condemned to fade and flee;

I should be loath to fall
Beside the common way,
Weltering in mire, and spurned by all
Till trodden down to clay.

Nor would I like to spread
My thin and withered face
In hortus siccus, pale and dead,
A mummy of my race.

No—on the wings of air
Might I be left to fly,
I know not and I heed not where,
A waif of earth and sky!
—James Montgomery

A ROUGH DIAMOND

A rough diamond would be worth little more than any other stone, if it were not for its capacity to take on polish. When it is said that some one is a rough diamond, this does not mean that he should be satisfied with sterling worth but rather that he should make every effort to improve himself. When diamonds were discovered in South Africa, the children of a farmer were using some of them as playthings; and if their appearance could not have been altered, they probably would have remained playthings.

It does not pay to spend months polishing an ordinary pebble. A diamond is worth polish, but it is the polish that makes it prized. If your friends class you as a rough diamond, that means that you have before you a long pedied of polishing before the world will accept you at your worth.

YOU NEED A CRITIC

Doing things over and over does not necessarily mean doing them better and better. Some old women can be found who have made poor bread and tough pie crust all their lives. as well as men whose hair has whitened at a job to which they have never done justice. Some of you young people who are ambitious to become good writers have an idea that all you need is to keep on working day after day and year after year. That is a help, but it does not follow that your work will improve unless you have it criticized by one who knows better than you do. Everyone ambitious to improve along any line needs a critic, unless he has the faculty for self-analysis which is so much rarer than talent. Do not lose your temper with your critics for they are doing you an invaluable service.

A NEW FIRE ENGINE

The people of Winchester may as well face the fact now, that if they expect protection from fire, a new fire engine will have to be bought in the very near future. The one now owned by the corporation is not only out of date, but cannot be depended on at any time. Moreover it cannot be satisfactorily repaired, as the manufacturers no longer make parts. At each occasion where the engine has been used of late years its work is intermittent, and sometimes at the most critical stage of a fire, it will suddenly stop, and sometime elapse before it can be coaxed into action again. Winchester is not suffering from an excessive tax-rate, and within the next few years several of debenture liabilities will have been wiped out. The cost of a new fire engine is not so large that it could not be met in one year, two at the least.

UNFAVOURABLE COMMENT OVER WINCHESTER TOWNSHIP GRANT

There is much unfavourable comment because of the grant made by the Council of the Township of Winchester of $150 to the Fair held at Chesterville. There is no getting away from the fact that when the Provincial Government is cutting down its annual grants to Agricultural and Horticultural Societies for the sake of economy, this uncalled for and very much like a one-sided grant, of the Winchester Township Council was wholly unnecessary. It may be said that it is a good thing to encourage such shows, and that the farmers are benefitted. But when the Fair was held in Winchester the sentiment of certain township councillors was very different. But the chief objection to the grant is that it was wholly unnecessary, and just another burden on the tax-payers. One hundred and fifty dollars they claim is a small amount of money spread over a township. So it is, but it is an added burden instead of a relief. The tax-payers of the township, without exception, have found it is hard enough to pay their taxes, and these are times when every dollar counts. The activities of some of the township councillors on the Chesterville Fair will perhaps explain the grant.

WINCHESTER BOYS WHO HAVE MADE GOOD

This week the Press starts a series of sketches on the doings of some of the boys who have gone out into the world from this district and have made good. There are a lot of them, in all branches of business and professional life, and while the natural modesty of men who have struggled and made their way to eminence, make them somewhat hesitant in furnishing the Press with the information we desire, when we explain to them that the sole purpose of the Press is to not only keep them alive in memory of many of the older of our inhabitants, but to inspire the young men of to-day who are graduating from our public and high schools with a like ambition, most of them approached have kindly given the data asked. The old saying that "There is no Royal road to learning," is very true, but learning alone is of little purpose unless it is made proper use of. We have selected for our first sketch a native-born Winchester boy, whose progress has been the result of application and concentration to those duties assigned him. The positions of responsibility and influence occupied by the men of to-day will be filled by the boys of to-day, and the question is "How many Winchester boys are preparing themselves to occupy positions that will in a few years be open to them in the various walks of life?" We know you will read, with more than ordinary interest, the sketches as they appear in the Press each week.

YOUTHS IN PRISON

A very large number of youths are being committed to Provincial Reformatories by Ontario Magistrates, mostly on charges of theft. May one say the recent depressions seem to have brought forward a large number of seemingly incorruptible youths, and when we read of lads of 16 and17 years being parties to a hold-up of a bank or gas station, and boys of 12 and 14 being arrested as burglars, it is not a very hopeful sign. Parents are largely to blame, but the parents were young once, and so we must conclude there is something wrong in our social and educational system when the youth criminals seem to be on the increase. In these days we hear so much about the cruelty of the strap being administered in prisons to those who become unmanageable by ordinary discipline, that one is hesitant about recommending a more common use of the strap in the home and in the school. Old King Solomon said "Spare the rod and spoil the child," but modern so-called Solomons would spare the rod and ruin the child. There is no getting away from the fact that corporal punishment is effective both in the home and in the prison, and it because there has grown up a silly sentiment that corporal punishment is cruel and unnecessary that so many of our youths are becoming beyond either discipline or restraint. The Press is a thorough believer in modern progress, but there are a few rules of conduct and regulations laid down in that old book we call "The Bible," that even modern civilization cannot afford to ignore—cruelty should not be allowed either by parents or prison guards, but a more effective way of bringing up a family to respect authority and observe discipline has not yet been discovered than the occasional use of the father's or mother's knee and slipper.

PROGRESSIVE TOWNS

Pembroke has now a population of nearly eleven thousand and is increasing yearly. They are a progressive bunch at Pembroke, and last week the business men of the place united in a community effort to boost Pembroke, and stimulate trade. It is because of such public spirit that Pembroke is advancing while other towns in the Ottawa Valley with just as good advantages are either standing still or going behind. The merchant who never cleans his shop window will soon see them covered with cob-webs. The town that is progressive will progress.

DEPRESSION AND SPORT

When between forty and fifty thousand people at Washington, U. S. A., will pay something like $175,000 in one afternoon to see a baseball match that lasted a little over two hours, it does not look as though there was much depression in the land, or much concern at Washington, U. S. A., because of that so-called depression. And yet there is depression, and want, and suffering. Parents and children are going hungry for something to eat, and little children are dying amidst squalor and filth because of a social system that permits such scenes. Historians tell us that "Nero fiddled while Rome burned." We do not seem to have improved much since Nero's time. While millions are being spent weekly in sports, in amusements of all kinds, misery, suffering and want is stalking the back roads and alleys, and who knows that force may in desperation, and under organization, become a power that may even threaten our civilization.

THE NEW DOMINION LOAN

The new Dominion Refunding Loan of $225,000,000, is evidently to meet with the same success as the various preceding loans did. It is not only an evidence of the strong Canadian loyalty, but of a reserve wealth in the Dominion that should make Canadians proud of their country and its resources. The great advantage of a Canadian loan is that the interest will all be paid in Canada, and thus not subject to fluctuating discounts such as proved so disadvantageous to Canada during the past few years. There is little doubt that the loan will be fully subscribed by the end of the week.

As this is Friendship and Fellowship Week, how would it do for the people of Chesterville and Winchester to hold a big gathering at Maple Ridge Cemetery and bury their ill feelings and grudges.

The Council of Niagara Falls, N. Y., passed a by-law prohibiting the employment of any Canadian in that city. The Council of the City of Niagara Falls, Canada, are talking of retaliating by passing a similar by-law. Thus it is that ill-feeling is formulated between nations and nationalisms, which eventually lead to war.

Winchester Boys Who Have Made Good

The Press is very pleased with the selection of subject of this, the first sketch of one of those "Winchester Boys Who Have Made Good," for Mr. Greer is undoubtedly an outstanding example of one who, without any special or exceptional advantage, but by his own industry, application to duties as they presented themselves, perseverance, and backed by a good parentage, good home surroundings and social environment, has risen in the realm of education in Ontario that gives him a place in "The Seats of the Mighty," so far as our Educational Department is concerned.

When Hon. G. H. Ferguson, now Canadian High Commissioner at London, was Prime Minister of Ontario, and also Minister of Education, he came to Winchester to dedicate the new Winchester Public School, which as he then described it, was not only a credit to the community, but a completed school in every way. Mr. Ferguson had been preceded by Mr. V. K. Greer, then, as now, Chief Inspector of Public and Separate Schools in Ontario, and he paid Mr. Greer a very high compliment and a deserved one, not only as a product of Winchester, but a man of exceptional talent and value to the Department of Education.

It is particularly pleasing to the Editor of the Press in preparing this, our first sketch of one of the Winchester boys who has made good, to also claim a personal acquaintance and friendship that is much prized.

Mr. Greer was born in Winchester on July 28th, 1885, his mother being Annie E. Albrant, of Mountain township, and his father Joseph H. Greer, who came to Canada from Belfast, Ireland, and his parents were for many years among the very best of the many good residents of Winchester. When the subject of our sketch entered public school, Mr. W. S. Brunton was principal, and Susie Annable vice-principal, and in conversation, Mr. Greer has not only a vivid recollection of those early days, but a very warm place in his heart-memory for his teachers. There was then a Continuation School, and it was here that Mr. Greer completed the equivalent to two years at High School, under the principalship of Mr. W. D. Brunton, and later Miss E. Maude Hill, (now Mrs. Fulton, of Lindsay). Mr. Greer said:—

"The one teacher who understood boys, gave them a training in high ideals and at the same time made school a place of real pleasure, and even fun, was Miss Annable. Her influence on the boys and girls of this period was never even fractionally paid for and could not have been measured in monetary standards."

Mr. Greer afterwards attended the Morrisburg Collegiate Institute, in 1903, securing full Junior Leaving and later Senior—now Upper School standing.

Mr. Greer then went to the Ontario Normal College at Hamilton, which was the only school in the province at that time which trained First-class certificate teachers and High School assistants. He graduated there in 1904 securing a First-class Professional Certificate and a High School Assistant's certificate.

He begun teaching on August 16, 1904, in Beverly Township, Wentworth County, and spent a very enjoyable year teaching in a one-roomed rural school. A young man or young woman cannot secure a more valuable training for any calling in life than experience as a teacher in an ungraded rural school.

At the end of this year Mr. Greer accepted the Principalship of the Tweed Public and Continuation School, a six-roomed school at that time. He had a splendid three years' experience there teaching all the High School work from the High School Entrance to the Junior Matriculation and Entrance to Normal School standing.

In September, 1908, he went into Queen's University after having done two years' of arts work extra-murally. In 1911 he graduated with First Class Honours in Mathematics. He then secured a position as Mathematical Master in St. Thomas Collegiate Institute and was there for almost two years, when he received appointment as Public School Inspector for his home County of Dundas in December, 1915. Mr. Greer had been married just after graduation to Miss Mabelle E. Brown, of Wentworth County, and Mr. and Mrs. Greer spent three very happy years of early married life in Winchester where he learned to know his home village people more intimately and gained a deeper affection and love for the home area.

In January 1916, he received the appointment as a Master on the staff of the Stratford Normal School. He remained there for four years and became Junior Public School Inspector for the city of London, then Senior Public School Inspector in 1922. In May,1925, he left London to become Chief Inspector of Public and Separate Schools in the Ontario Department of Education.

"As a tribute to Winchester," Mr. Greer says, "the children and young people should appreciate to the full the sacrifices which the people have always made in providing outstanding teachers, splendid school buildings and playground areas, and the adult people have always kept the village a clean and wholesome place for the training of young people. Mr. Greer's father and mother were typical Winchester parents who sacrificed everything in order that the children might get the benefit of the best possible home, school and church training."

ROBINSON KERR

After a lingering illnes, the community of South Gower lost one of its most highly respected citizens in the death of Robinson Kerr, who passed away at his home.

Mr. Kerr was in his 74th year and for many years had resided in Hallville and the surrounding country. Previous to his illness he had been a very active man in his occupation as a farmer.

He leaves his wife, formerly Miss Maime Brown. a sister, Mrs. Dan Allen, of Kemptville; and a brother, Dr. Thomas A. Kerr, of Lewiston, N.Y.

The funeral service, Tuesday afternoon, was conducted by Rev. Wm. McMcLean, of Outremont, Quebec, who formerly who had formerly been pastor of Mountain Presbyterian Church, of which the late Mr. Kerr was a devoted member. The large number of sorrowing friends, attending the funeral gave testimony of the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Weather Forecast For The Coming Winter

LITTLE SNOW AND MUCH RAIN SAYS A TORONTO WEATHER PROPHET

Overshoes and fur coats will be out and rubber boots and raincoats in, if the weather man pays attention to Wm. Radley, 57 Elm Grove Ave., Toronto's weather seer, who to-day made his semi-annual forecast. He predicts very little winter weather, says the Toronto Star.

"Very open and exceptionally mild with much above the average rain," Mr. Radley prophesies. Mr. Radley has been pretty accurate in his half-yearly forecasts for the past two years. Month for month he predicted the weather of last winter, and in early spring he told you when and how bad the summer heat wave would be. He even calls the thunderstorms.

Christmas this year will be of the variety known as green and not until February will there be snow worthy of the name. Even then there will not be enough to bring the total for the whole winter over three feet. A total of five feet fell during the past two winters.

Heavy Rains Expected

The present month promises to be changeable with heavy rains and winds, but above normal temperature, says Mr. Radley. Two weeks ago he stated that Oct. 3 would be the most suitable time for a take-off by Capt. James and Amy Mollison. After Oct. 10th they would have no chance, he predicted.

"November will have many mild days," Mr. Radley told the Star. "Temperature records will be broken, but we can expect some snowfall. Snow will come between the 13th and 20th when it will be cool."

Gales will usher in December, the prophet predicts, but they will be followed by milder weather, tempering to spring-like conditions from the 20th to the 27th. Then we can expect a rainy, mild January, a snowy February and a mild March.

"I do not see any reason for believing that this will be a severe winter," said Mr. Radley. "There will be more rain than snow and at least six thunder-storms. Last year I said there would be one thunder-storm and there was one," he added. "Any severe weather we have will not last long."

Here is his weather forecast:

October—Very changeable with rain and heavy winds. Temperature above normal.

November—Early part mild. From 13th to 20th cool with snow.

December—Early part gales with snow storms. About 20th to 27th spring weather, which takes in a green Christmas.

1934—January—The warmest month of this period, but several days mostly rain.

February—I observe two bad blizzards of short stay.

March—A very open month, at least one-half of the first twenty days. Ending this forecast.

Summary

A very open and exceptionally mild winter, much above the average rain, much below in snow, heavy winds and gales above the average. About six thunder-storms. About 28 real winter days during the six months.

SYNOPSIS: Ruth Warren, who lived in the East, is willed three-fourth interest in the "Dead Lantern" ranch in Arizona by her only brother who is reported to have met his death while on business in Mexico. Arriving in Arizona with her husband who has ailing lungs and their small child, they learn that the ranch is located 85 miles from the nearest railroad. Old Charley Thane, rancher and rural mail carrier agrees to take them to the "Dead Lantern" gate, 5 miles from the ranch house. As they trudge wearily through a gulch approaching the ranch house, a voice whispers "Go back! . . . Go back!" At the ranch house they are greeted suspiciously by the gaunt rancher partner, Snavely, and Indian Ann, a herculean woman of mixed negro and indian blood. Snavely is difficult to understand but regardless, Ruth takes up the task of trying to adjust their three lives to the ranch and its development. Kenneth, Ruth's husband, caught in chilling rain contracts pneumonia and passes away before a doctor arrives. Ruth tries to carry on.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Ruth had backed to the door. As Snavely ceased speaking, he slowly settled into his chair; slowly the fingers of his right hand began to rub his forehead.

"I'll take the money," breathed Ruth, and ran out of the room.

She entered the adobe and stood for several minutes just inside the door, her hand on the crib against the wall. She trembled so that she could hardly stand. After a time, she stepped beyond to the bed beneath the window and seated herself, chin on palm, her eyes on the strip of far horizon seen through the doorway. Her face was white and the four fingers of the hand beneath her chin were pressed in a row against her lips. The sun had set; long shadows raced into the valley. Near the grindstone by the kitchen door David's small voice determinedly explained something to Sugarfoot. With her eyes still on the skyline, she went to the doorway. Part of that great expanse of land belonged to her. The rolling pasture lands to the east might extend forever, for any sign of boundary. Behind her, she knew, the ranch extended to the mountain tops—acres and acres, grass, trees, cañons, hills. . . . Old Charley had spoken as though the Dead Lantern was a wonderful ranch—feed enough for two thousand head—forty thousand dollars a year. But suppose he was wrong, suppose even, that the ranch could be made to earn only a quarter of that—the very amount she had just agreed to take for her entire interest. What would she and David do when that gave it money was gone? Then David would have to go to work. His inheritance could have been a fine cattle ranch, a wholesome life out of doors, a good education, and a reasonable number of opportunities afterward.

Suppose she fought down her pride. Ruth could imagine how her stepmother would smile over such a letter. Pride. . . . Ruth had always been proud; how high she had held her head that day she had left home to go to Kenneth. No, she could not beg to be taken back, but perhaps she could write a business letter to her father.

For a long time Ruth stood in the doorway, her eyes following David as he played with Sugarfoot. Yes, she would write the letter; what was pride compared with that pudgy-cheeked little being? But, oh, that terrible man in the ranch house! Where was the strength to fight her fear?

Ann left the ranch house on the path which led to the barn. The giantess eyed Ruth curiously.

"Hello, Ann." Ruth smiled undecidedly.

The huge woman paused. "Mr. Snavely says to git out the buckboard—I'm goin' to take you-all over to Thane's place so's you kin go in with him tomorrow."

Ruth put out her hand as though begging for time. The hand trembled. Slowly she stood up. "N-no, Ann." The girl walked swiftly past her and entered the living room. "Mr. Snavely," she called.

The door of Snavely's bedroom opened at once and he looked out.

"I'm sorry, but I've changed my mind"—Ruth chilled as she spoke—"I don't want to go back on my word—I can't help it. The money you offered me wouldn't be enough. I must have a steady income—something I can depend on for years. Don't you see? I've just got to stay here and make this ranch pay. I'm writing East for capital. I—if you'd help, I'm sure—" She paused, then straightened and said clearly, "Mr. Snavely, this is all I have; it's all my son can ever have from me or his father. I've got to make it a big ranch. I'm going to stay!"

Snavely did not move, nor did he make a sound; with pale eyes contracted to slits, he looked at the girl for a moment, then his head withdrew and the door closed softly.

Breakfast the next morning was a silent affair. Snavely seemed wholly absorbed with his food, but there was a tenseness about his every movement.

As she was leaving the room, Snavely looked up. "Any time you get enough of this here place an' want to take me up on that deal, jest say so."

She paused and tried to smile. "Thank you, I shall remember. But first I'm going to see what can be done with capital—I'm writing East this morning."

"What if you don't git it?"

"Well—perhaps then we can make some other arrangement. Mr. Snavely—if I am successful—I wonder—would you sell me your quarter interest? I'd like to know the value you set on it—"

"I'm sorry, but I've changed my mind."—Ruth chilled as she spoke.

Snavely took three slow steps to the girl's side. "I told you yesterday," he said tensely, "that I didn't want no money."

Again the girl forced herself to smile. "All right; the ranch will need you badly, of course. If we do obtain capital, it will have to be spent by some one who understands what improvements should be made."

The man nodded, then said easily, "You goin' down to the box? I'll be ridin' that way—I can take your letter for you. To-day's the day the mail goes in."

"Thank you—but I haven't had a ride for weeks. I think David and I will go."

"You won't get there in time—with the boy. Thane'll be goin' past inside of an hour. Better let me

Ruth hesitated. "Thank you," she smiled, "perhaps it would be best for you to take it—if it isn't out of your way. I'll get the letter. But please catch my horse for me; I think I'll take a ride anyway."

She hurried to the adobe, Snavely following. Her letter lay upon the table. For a moment she regarded it thoughtfully, but she picked it up and going to the door gave it to Snavely with another word of thanks.

Ten minutes after he had ridden along the southern bank of the gulch, Ruth mounted her horse and followed. Tucked in her blouse was another letter to the Dempster Greys. This letter, which she had just written, was a duplicate of the one she had given Snavely.

She left David with Ann. She hoped she wouldn't meet Snavely but, if so, she could say that she had forgotten something in the first letter. Perhaps he would take her letter to the mail box; but he had seemed too eager. . . . She knew that he would rather not secure capital for the ranch.

Ruth saw no sign of Snavely. Nor, when she reached the box, had Snavely been before her—there was nothing in the box but the tin can.

She determined to wait for Old Charley. She waited nervously, for she was worrying about David. She had never left him before. . . . She believed Ann would watch him carefully; but suppose she didn't? David could slip out of sight so easily. He might step on a snake; he might wonder what the fence around the old well concealed and find a way to crawl over.

Ruth tortured herself with such thoughts for half an hour more. Finally, after a long look around, she put the letter in the box, carefully placed the can on top as a signal to Old Charley to pick up the mail, and started back.

Five minutes after she had disappeared Snavely rode out of a ravine three hundred yards north of the ranch road and galloped toward the mail box. He had just reached a brush-bordered gully, still some distance from the box, when Old Charley's car swooped over a hill on the main road and disappeared at the bottom. The car would be at the box very soon.

Snavely brought his horse to a sliding stop, forced it into the gully and dismounted.

A forty-five barked from the gully and a splinter flew from the top of the mail box. At the next shot the can fell to the ground.

Shortly after, Old Charley drove past, glancing at the bare top of the mail box. When he was quite gone Snavely rode leisurely out of the gully.

For three consecutive Saturdays Ruth and her son were waiting at the mail box when Old Charley arrived. She was by this time expecting an answer to her letter. And though no letter came, Old Charley always managed to have a magazine or two, which, together with the newspaper for which Ruth had subscribed, made a welcome little bundle. The old man also saw that she received a small weekly devoted to Arizona cattle raisers.

But the most important part of these weekly meetings was the hour or so of conversation with the old man. For sixty years he had raised cattle in this part of the San Jorge Valley and he loved to "talk ranchin'."

Ruth progressed rapidly in her education from the aimless asking of questions to the brisk formation of plans. The talk often turned upon the building up of herds and ranch improvement. Old Charley seemed to know by instinct just what Ruth wanted to learn most. She learned that it is often possible to do much without capital; that one may even increase the quality and number of one's cattle without spending huge sums or becoming too artistic with a branding iron. Old Charley praised the "fine feed along the foothills there" with a gesture which included the whole Dead Lantern ranch.

These talks with the old man gave the girl new courage; she understood something of what she had to do; she saw her problem clearly. Old Charley had given her weapons with which to fight her battle; she was no longer quite so helpless.

She had avoided Snavely and had not yet given him a hint of what she was learning. Later, she told herself, she would have suggestions to make; now she waited for the capital which did not come.

On the fifth Saturday since she had placed her letter in the box, Ruth and David were again waiting for Old Charley.

It was a great day for David—had he not ridden the entire distance on a spirited horse of his own, old Sanchez? And he had a new pair of chaps which his mother had made from the brown canvas of an old army cot. And last week mother had ordered some things which Uncle Charley was to get in town. The most important of these things was a small cowboy hat.

The eyes of both mother and son were anxiously focused far to the northeast, where a strip of brown stood out on a small dun-colored hill. For Ruth, this was the last day of grace; a letter could have traveled twice to Philadelphia and back since that morning at the mail box.

Ten minutes after the car came over the hill, it appeared again a hundred yards down the road and the horn gave its customary wheeze of salutation.

A forty-five barked from the gully and a splinter flew from the top of the mail box.

Ruth saw that Old Charley had a passenger—it must be his son, Will; she remembered that he was expected this week. A single glance told her that Will Thane was the first civilized person she had seen since leaving the East. It seemed years since she had seen a man in a tailored business suit, white shirt, an actual collar and tie. As they were introduced, she saw that he smiled exactly like his father. The young man seemed a silent, observant sort—not so very young either—she put him down as being on the other side of thirty.

"Any mail for—the Dead Lantern?" she asked Old Charley in a casual tone.

"Nothing but the papers. But I got all the stuff you wanted." He smiled, beginning to take packages from the machine. One of these, a roundish box of cardboard, he gave to David. After one look inside, David carried the box reverently to a rock some distance away. There he seated himself, wrapped in a rosy nimbus of bliss, the hat covering his small knees. It even had a horsehair band!

Storing Tender Plants, Bulbs

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Central Press Canadian Garden Expert

At this time of year comes the problem of storing tender plants and bulbs, and the question arises as to whether or not cannas, dahlias, gladiolus and begonias may be stored together.

If one intends storing tender plants and bulbs, it is better to do the job right than to go to some trouble and be unsuccessful. The following ways are the recommended ones for the different kinds of plants. Tuberous begonias may be kept in dry earth or sand in the cellar until they start to grow, about March 1, when they must be immediately potted. Dahlia tubers should be dug as soon as the tops die down. They should be kept in a cool root cellar and stored upside down so as to drain out the stems. Coarse lake sand or peat moss is very suitable material to use for covering over dahlias, especially when the air is dry. Gladiolus corms may be stored in flats after a preliminary drying outdoors, and dry leaves, peat moss or coarse dry sand may be used about them.

Cannas may be dug and stored like other root crops, but should have a large amount of earth left on them or be buried in sand or peat moss in shallow layers. They should not be allowed to shrivel up in the winter. Caladiums and tuberoses are dug and stored in boxes of dry sand. Where salvia patens and tritomas are not hardy, they may be lifted in late autumn and stored in peat moss, over winter, in the cellar.

WHAT'S THE USE?

The schoolmistress carefully studied little Bobby's home-work.

"I don't think you have looked at your geography book at all," she said to the boy. "Not one of the questions has been answered."

"That's my dad's fault," replied Bobby abruptly.

"What has he got to do with it?" she sharply asked.

"Well, I heard him saying to mother that the world is not the same now, and that it was always changing, so I thought I'd wait a few years until things got a bit more settled," explained the boy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

PAUL IN ANTIOCH

Lesson for October 15th. Acts 11:19-30

Golden Text: Romans 1:16

The lesson introduces us to a new city, a new man, and a new word. The new city is Antioch, the capital of Syria, at that time the third metropolis of the world, with a population of half a million, and conspicuous for its wealth and magnificence. It was the first city in which Gentiles were converted in any large numbers, and thus naturally became the headquarters for the impressive missionary work among them carried on by Paul and his colleagues. All of the apostle's three missionary journeys began at Antioch.

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

The new man is Barnabas, one of the most attractive figures in the New Testament. We caught a brief glimpse of him in chapter 9, at Damascus. But here he occupies the center of the stage.

Now Barnabas was a beautiful incarnation of the generous spirit. There was nothing petty about him. Note that he championed Paul at a time when the genuineness of the apostle's conversion was under suspicion. Later he came to the defence of John Mark, whose conduct had angered Paul. His generosity was more than sentiment. It revealed itself in loving deeds, for the lesson tells us that relief, probably a caravan of provisions, was sent in a time of famine from Antioch to Jerusalem.

The new word is "Christians." "The disciples," we read, "were called Christians first in Antioch." Other names in the New Testament are friends, believers, apostles, brethren, saints, followers "of this way." But all these yielded to the term "Christians," now so honorable and universal, although when applied to that small company of primitive disciples in Antioch it was, a designation of contempt.

Today we all rejoice in the name. But do we take it seriously? To what extent is the title "Christian" a mere convention? Are we prepared to assume all the obligations it heralds?

FORM OF HABIT

Some young people are always looking forward to the good time they will have when they have finished a task. They study their lessons in school, or do their work at the office, thinking what a good time they will have when the work is completed. Often it goes even farther. Some students are thinging how much they will enjoy themselves when they have finished school.

Having a good time is more of a habit than anything else. Some people never enjoy themselves because they formed the habit of being discontented and gloomy when they were young. They growled over their school work, and when they left school, they growled about their jobs; even though the time has come when they neither have to study nor to work, they still growl and grumble.

If you want to have a good time, start now, right where you are. Learn the joy there is in washing dishes, mowing the lawn, wrestling with algebra problems. or hunting for errors that keep your books from balancing. The fact is, there are possibilities of enjoyment in almost everything.

If you have an item of news send it to the Press. We are always glad to receive local news.

BRUCE BARTON

...writes of "THE MASTER EXECUTIVE"

Supplying a week-to-week inspiration for the heavy-burdened who will find every human trial paralleled in the experiences of "The Man Nobody Knows."

BY HIS WORKS

WHEN later Jesus had his brief hour of triumph, when the crowds flung their garments into the streets before him and shouted their "hosannas," even then his heart must have been sore at the thouht that in all that multitude there was not one of the brothers for whom he had sacrificed so much of his youth. A warm hand-clasp from one of them would have meant more than all the high homage of the multitude. But they were far away, still ashamed of the relationship, still regarding him as well meaning but not quite sane.

Bruce Barton

His best friend died doubting him. To that friend, John the Baptist, he owed his initial success. John had introduced him to the people; his first disciples had come because John pointed him out as a greater prophet than himself. The two men were entirely unlike in character and method. John was austere, harsh, denunciatory—a lonely spirit, dwelling apart. Jesus was cheerful, friendly, never happier than when in a crowd. John laid down for his disciples a rigid program of ceremonies and fasts; Jesus disregarded forms and encouraged his disciples to disregard them. He recognized that he and John must do their work in different ways, but it had not occurred to him that their differences would ever loosen the bond of friendship. He was cut to the quick, therefore, when two messengers came from John with a wistful, doubting question:

"Are you really a prophet, as I told people that you are?" John asked. "Instead of fasting you banquet. Instead of calling on men to abjure pleasure, you share their pleasures. Are you the hope of the world, as I believed you to be, or must we look for another?"

Very tenderly, but sadly, Jesus sent back his reply: "Go tell John what you have seen and heard," he said, "how the blind see, lepers are cleansed and the poor have the good news preached to them."

It was a wonderful answer, but did it convince his friend? A few weeks later, in the dungeon of Herod's castle, John paid the last great penalty for his idealism and courage. Jesus, when he heard of it, "withdrew into the hills alone." In that heart-breaking event he saw an omen for himself. They who had been strong enough to murder John would one day destroy him also. It was a bitter blow to his visions of success. He saw at the end of his path the shadow of the cross. And his heart was heavy because the friend who ought to have understood him best, had misunderstood him and died in doubt.

BY YOUR CREDIT SHALL YOU BE KNOWN

"By your credit shall you be known—guard it carefully." That is the main theme of an unusally interesting co-operative advertisement inserted in a Saskatoon newspaper by merchants of that city. The advertisement is designed to impress upon the public that credit is a valuable asset and should be adequately protected, and that every effort should be made by those entrusted with the asset to pay bills promptly as they come due.

Credit is a privilege we may all enjoy. Steady income from bills that are promptly paid stimulates trade and industry. Money tied up in accrued accounts stagnates business. All may enjoy a good credit rating by paying bills as arranged. Promptness and reliability in this matter will serve as an encouragement for a trade revival.

Perhaps you are not able to pay the entire amount of your indebtedness as it becomes due, but because you can't pay all you are expected to pay, or all you intended to pay each week or month, don't let the account stand idle. Make a payment, however small and arrange for accommodation for the balance. Large accounts quickly dwindle when regular payments are made, even if the payments are small.

There is nothing injures one's credit like failure to discuss one's inability to meet payments as due. Merchants appreciate a customer's frank statement that he cannot meet his obligation at one time, and most merchants are quite willing to extend the time of payment. When the customer, however, fails to inform his creditor or make any arrangements about the matter, he is injuring his credit, and injury to such credit is much like injury to character. Your credit is one of your most valued assets. Keep it impaired.—Canadian Statesman.

FACE OF MADONNA FIGURE OF VENUS GETS THIS BIG JOB

Photographer Specifies the Measurements of Perfect Girl He Is Searching For

By HUGO SPECK
Central Press Canadian Writer

London, Oct. — If you have the face o' a Madonna and the figure of Venus, there is a job waiting for you in London.

John Everard, noted London society photographer, has been searching for such a girl for months but she can't be found.

"The perfect photographic model is hard to find," Everard said when interviewed at the Professional Photographers' Exhibition where he was looking for a model.

"I have seen many types here at the Exhibition but it is the perfect type t' at I personally wish to discover. She must have the face of a Madonna, be 5 feet 6 inches tall with bust of 34½ inches and a waist of 26½ inches.

"The truth is that there are scores of girls who are perfect in what is classified as the modern type, but these models do not always produce the best results from a photographic standpoint.

"It will be seen from the measurements I am looking for a figure that will be required, far from the usual one.

"In comparison with the slim svelte type of modern girl, it might appear that my ideal is too fully built in some parts, but it must be remembered that I am dealing purely with photographic art, and I have found that the modern type which looks so well in fashionable attire, does not show to advantage in the undraped figure, which, after all, displays the true and unequalled beauty of the feminine form.

"The girl I want must have the following measurements in addition to those given above:

"Hips, 35 to 36 inches.
"Knee, 13 inches.
"Calf, 13 inches.
"Ankle, 8 inches.

"The figure must be wellrounded. The bossom should be youthful and shapely.

"I may say that beauty contests in which the competitors wear bathing suits do not generally tend to display the ideal figure to advantage. The reason is simply that a bathing suit tends to flatten a good figure and often 'shapes up' a bad one.

"Beautiful hair, feet and hands are essential. It must not be forgotten that many flaws are accentuated by the camera."

BIRD-EATING SPIDERS

The London Zoo has been enriched by a large number of giant bird-eating and other "out-size" spiders. A constant supply is provided by the many lines of banana boats, but notably those that come from Jamaica. As one explores the tier upon tier of holds in these ships, containing in all some 1500 tons of fruit, these 6 to 8-inch-long spiders make weird spectacles as they skate over the walls or sit waiting for the small birds which never appear. Some of the species can give a very severe bite, and dozens perish at the hands of the crew for every single one that arrives at the Regent's park menagerie. Zoo specimens become very tame. allowing themselves to be handled by their keeper.

Visitor—Why is it the giraffe has such a long neck?

Zoo-keeper—Well, you see lady. his head is so far from his body that a long neck is absolutely necessary.

HOW A CAT FALLS

A cat which falls or springs from a height. great or small, always manages to fall on its feet. That we all know. This wonderful feat is made possible by the way the muscles of the cat are arranged, and the quickness of the cat's instinct to bring them into play.

No matter how a cat is dropped, it is able to turn over in the air; it can so twist itself that its feet shall come in contact with the ground. But the cat must be in health and vigour, or the feat cannot be performed.

Scientists say that if men could master the secret of the cat they also would be able to alight on their feet when falling. There is no reason why human muscles should not be as effective as the cat's.

Many have seen men dive head foremost from a trapez, turn somersaults in the air, and land safely. Others vault over backs of horses, whirling round in mid-air as they go, yet dropping safely on their feet.

The secret seems to be the quick working of the mind; at any rate, scientists state that the ordinary man would have power to do as the cat does if he made up his mind quickly enough. Cats are the superiors of ordinary men in this and one can only wonder at the unerring grace and accuracy with which they come safely to earth.

ON AN ELEVATOR

No one is requested to ring the bell before eight in the morning a feller has to get his sleep dont they and futhermore, this ilevator will not be run betwixt 12 and 1 o'clock a person must have their food now you can see the logik of that and on top of everything no one is requested to ring hard on the bell or more than once I am not deef I heerd you but unable to make it now have some sense I heerd you I am not deef.—Toronto Globe.

With President Roosevelt dictating a "new deal" policy for industry in the United States, a humble housewife from Texas has proposed the following code for consideration by the President. The code follows:

"Every housewife shall be taken out to dinner at least once a week.

Husband or some other member of the family shall dry all the supper dishes.

Every housewife is entitled to a minimum of two movies weekly.

Husband shall help children with at least half of home work.

Every housewife is entitled to 10 per cent. of family pay for personal expenditures on self for clothes, cosmetics, etc.

Every housewife (except where sickness on other emergency exists) is entitled to sleep late at least two mornings weekly."

If this plan were adopted it would revolutionize the country.

HUMANS AND JACKASSES

Two fool jackasses—now, get this dope
Were tied together with a piece of rope.
Said one to the other, "You come my way,
While I take a nibble at this new-mown hay.

"I won't," said the other. "You come with me,
For I, too, have some hay, you see."
So they got nowhere; just pawed up dirt,
And, believe me, how that rope did hurt.

Then they faced about, those stubborn mules,
And said, "We are just like human fools.
Let's pull together. I'll go your way.
Then come with me, and we'll both eat hay."

Well, they eat their hay, and liked it too,
And swore to be comrades, good and true.
As the sun went down, they were heard to say,
"Ah, this is the end of a perfect day."

+ HOUSEHOLD HINTS +

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINTS.

Broiled Porterhouse Steak.
Cauliflower au Gratin.
Baked Potatoes.
Cabbage—Apple Salad.
Pumpkin Pie. Coffee.

Cauliflower is at its best these bright days. Use it often in your menus.

To-day's Recipes.

Cauliflower au Gratin—One medium cauliflower, two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one and one-half cups milk, one-half cup grated American cheese, one-half cup buttered dry bread crumbs. Trim outer stalks and leaves from cauliflower and let head stand in cold salted water 15 minutes. Drain and drop into kettle of boiling salted water. Cook until tender. Drain carefully. Place cauliflower in casserole. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, and milk, add cheese, season with salt and pepper. Pour sauce over the cauliflower, sprinkle crumbs on top and brown lightly in the oven. Serve in baking dish.

Pumpkin Pie—Two cups pumpkin (canned or fresh cooked), two cups brown sugar, two teaspoons cinnamon, two teaspoons allspice, one teaspoon cloves, one-half teaspoon ginger, two cups milk, six eggs. Mix pumpkin, sugar, and spices thoroughly before adding milk. Separate the eggs and add the beaten egg yolks, then gently fold in the whites whipped stiff. Fill two pie pans with rich pastry and pour half of the above filling in each. Bake for 10 minutes at 450 degrees; then reduce heat to 325 degrees and bake 30 minutes.

FACTS AND FANCIES.

Children's Cake.

Children's Cake—One cup egg yolks, two cups sugar, one cup hot water, one teaspoon salt, three cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, two teaspoons lemon or orange extract. Beat the yolks until very light. Add sugar gradually, beating the while. Add hot water beating constantly. Have flour sifted, measured and sifted with baking powder and salt. Add to first mixture, beating constantly. Turn into three well-greased layer cake pans. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, about 30 minutes. Remove from the oven and remove cake from pans. Cool. Put together with jelly or jam between the layers and sprinkle powdered sugar over the top. Or an egg meringue made of part of the whites may be made, spread over the cake and browned in a slow oven, 300 degrees Fahrenheit.

CLEANING STOVEPIPE.

To clean stovepipes without making a mess and with less trouble, spread newspapers on the floor.

Take a large-sized paper bag, place one end of the pipe in the bag and snap a rubber band around the bag.

Then take a plunger with a bag, covering the bottom, and snap a rubber band around this.

Take the plunger and go through the stovepipe, moving the plunger up and down. All the dirt goes into the paper bag.

This is a good plan for cleaning stovepipes upstairs, as it saves time and makes less dirt.

Wife Preservers

Panned oysters are made by first cleaning the oysters, then having ready a hot, dry saucepan or frying pan and pouring oysters in. Cook, stirring constantly, until edges begin to curl. Add butter, pepper and salt, and serve on toast.

Electricity!

No tale of wonders and enchantments has ever been written that excelled the actual reality which is today at mankind's fingertips in the wonders and magic of electricity. Step by step the intelligence of man leads him on through the ages of civilization until to-day our most common utility is in fact far beyond the mere comprehension of even the dreams of our forefathers. The Hydro System brings all of this to the citizens of Winchester. There is no new development or equipment in the fields that is not available to the life and business of local citizens. The drudgery can be taken out of housework if you let electric energy be the slave.

Possibly your home needs re-wiring or the present wiring a little overhauling. If so let us know about it. We are here to see that you get the best possible results from Hydro Light and Power.

Mrs. (Rev.) D. W. Summers conducted the devotions at the monthly meeting held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. N. W. Beach. After reading a portion of Psalm 119, she spoke on Verse 18, making a strong appeal for prayerful and diligent study of God's word.

After the Secretary read the minutes, different items of business were discussed, among them being the parlor meeting which it was decided to hold on Nov. 1st, and to secure speakers from Ottawa to give a report of the Provincial Convention recently held at Peterboro.

Reference was made to the Sunday School Temperance Educational campaign and plans made for that.

An excellent clip-sheet program entitled "The Battle with the Brewers," was taken up. Different systems of Government sale of liquor are now carried on by every province except Prince Edward Island.

The campaign against prohibition was waged by the manufacturing liquor trade itself, which is more strongly entrenched than ever before with the prestige of government partnership and the profits secured through purchased political support. The capital invested in the manufacture of liquor if invested in the production of other Canadian goods would give employment to five or six times as many people as are now employed producing and distributing liquor, and would pay more wages. Liquor manufacture employs fewer workers and pays lower wages than other industries and hence there is a much greater percentage of profit in the Liquor Traffic than in the product of other commodities of general use. The brewer's biggest profit is derived from beer parlors.

But Temperance workers still have faith in the final triumph of good in the struggle against evil, though we are in the ebb-tide of temperance reform, the battle is not over. Let us remember the words of the Master Himself: "I will build my Church and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it."

SUPPRESSION OR EXPRESSION?

Believing you to be conversant with matters municipal, I would very much appreciate an answer to the following questions through the medium of your valued paper, for my own and others' information.

About mid-summer I called at the office of the county treasurer, Brockville, and asked to see a list of names of those in arrears for taxes in Augusta township. As the names for the east side, only, had been handed in, I was courteously allowed a copy, and on leaving said I would call later and get those for the west side when available. Calling recently, I asked if the list was in and receiving an answer in the affirmative, I requested to know the number of names in the west half and the total amount in arrears. To this inquiry, I was surprised by being bluntly asked: "Is there any money in this for you?" To this I replied: "None that I know of." This corpulant gentleman then proceeded to bemoan the fancied impropriety for giving the first list and withheld the object of my quest. In Which occasion, Mr. Editor, did this officer do his duty?

Proceeding to the office of the County Clerk I inquired (for a neighbour's information) what the cost was to the municipality per pupil for secondary education. The answer, cheerfully given, was to the effect that the cost varied in different schools by reason of debenture indebtedness and other reasons, and the amount per school day, per pupil, ranged from 48 to 90 cents.

Any additional information in connection with the high cost of secondary education would be of intense interest to all rate-payers.

My humble opinion is, that, the all too-prevalent practice of secrecy in higher public life is finding apt scholars in local affairs.

W. H. R., Augusta.

Editor's Note—The clerk is not required, or in any way obligated, to give any person the details of an assessment roll, but any rate-payer has a right to examine in the clerk's office the roll asked for. With reference to the high cost of secondary education, we have no doubt the matter will be seriously dealt with at the next meeting of the Ontario Legislature.
