Morrisburg Lions Engaged in Many Worthwhile Projects

As can be seen by an advertisement elsewhere in this issue, the Morrisburg Lions Club is holding an Easter Bingo this coming Monday, April 3. With the thought in mind that our readers would wish to know where the money raised from such events was distributed this reporter interviewed Club President Denis Hill.

He explained that funds raised from any project sponsored or operated by a Lions Club are strictly controlled as to use, by Lions International rules. All funds must be spent on local projects for community or indivdual betterment. He gave as examples the Lions annual donation to the swimming instruction program at our local beach. The club has for the past several years donated $600.00 for use by the Recreation Committee of the Village in this program.

The Club locally and through the International organization is great ly involved in Sight Conservation and the Blind. The Morrisburg Club has paid for eye examinations and glasses for persons otherwise unable to afford them. Each year at Christmas, baskets of groceries are distributed to needy persons throughout the area served by the Club.

During the recent Winter Carnival, Lions members built the toboggan slide and rink on High School grounds and sponsored races for children on these facilities. — Prize money for this even came from funds raised at Bingos.

About one years ago, the local Boy Scouts and Cubs required sponsorship. The Lions together with the Royal Canadian Legion took up the challenge, and as is eveidenced by the activity of these groups, have succeeded in bringing interest back to Scouting in the area.

The Morrisburg Club also acts as local agent for the Ontario Crippled Children's Society, whose campaign for funds is now in full swing. Mr. Hill explained that each year the club collects these funds and deposits them. One half is forwarded to the Ontario group at the close of the campaign. The balance remains on deposit for use by the club in Crippled Children projects during the year. The amount remaining before the start of the next campaign is then forwarded to the Society, for province wide use. In this area, with few children so affected, the club has always forwarded a ballance. However, if more funds are needed in any area, these are available through the main organization. Local children h a v e benefited by the generosity of donors to the campaign through the purchase of wheel chairs, braces, medical and surgical treatment and a week at summer camp for those who could not otherwise afford to attend.

When asked to outline plans for this coming year, Mr. Hill stated that the Club would again be operating the Friday night Bingo in the Mall. Participation is planned in the July 1st celebrations. Lion Gord McGregor is now reforming the band which was formerly sponsored by the Legion, and with their co-operation has been taken on by the Lions. A Giant Summer Bingo in the Arena is being discussed with prizes going as high as $1000. The Dunking Tank, which was the hit of the Trade and Home Show, will make brief appearances in the Village. Mr. Hill also said that with over thirty active members, the club is always interested in accepting new projects for the betterment of our community.

The Loyalist Hotel, Morrisburg, recently came under new ownership, when it was purchased from Parker A. Locke Ltd. by Rogard Inns Inc. The new owners took over the hotel business on March 14th.

The 13-year old hotel at the intersection of highways 2 and 31 in Morrisburg has 21 rental rooms, a large lounge and a dining room.

No major changes are planned in the immediate future for this popular hotel, and the new owners plan to retain most of the staff.

Interviewed by The Leader, the new owners extended a cordial invitation to Morrisburg and area citizens to come in and get acquainted.

Rogard Inns Inc. has Mrs. Klaudia Gardner as president; her son Bill Gardner is vice president, and Bill Robson is secretary-treasurer. The Stars after allowing Jack Duncan to get 5 goals and 2 assists in the first game, managed to hold him to 3 goals in the last 2 games. In the 6-1 game, Loyalists scorers were: John Hutton 2; and singles by Duncan, Mel Tomalty and Big Doug Casselmna. Wayne Ellis scored the Stars only goal.

In the final game of the series; Big Doug Casselman scored the opening goal and assisted on 2 others as the Loyalists led 3-0 after the first period and 3-1 after 40 minutes of play. Other scorers were Duncan, John Hutton, and Dave Willard with 2, one on a power play and 1 when the Loyalists were short handed. Lyle Ellis scored the lone goal for the Stars, on a powerplay. Penalties were the predominate factor in this rough game with 17 minors being handed out — 10 to the Loyalists. Metcalfe turned aside 36 shots (including one with his head); while Rick Droppo had 28 saves.

In the first game of the best of 7 finals, the Loyalists, shorthanded traveled to Buckingham Sunday night and with the super goal tending by Droppo managed to get a 4-3 win. At 14:20 Gilles Chauret made it 4-2 and Bert Aube made it 4-3 at 18:10. The third period was scoreless as each team held on Droppo and Lacelle each had 35 saves during the game which saw 9 minors handed out, 4 to the Flyers. Loyalists were playing without the services of Rushford, Tomalty, McCabe, Hay and S. Casselman.

The second and third g a m e s of the series will be in Morrisburg Tuesday, March 28th, and Thursday, March 30th, 8:30 p.m.

In the second game of the series the Buckingham team scored two quick goals at 1:42 and 2:04 of the first period, but then they were shot down by 4 Loyalist goals to end the first period with the locals on top of a 4-2 count. Gaining momentum, the Loyalists racked up 8 unanswered goals in the 2nd to lead 12-2. The Flyers managed 3 goals in the final stanza to the Loyalists' 1, but the Morrisburg team had a 13-5 win and a 2-0 lead in the series. The winner will take the new Pat Smith trophy.

Scoring for the visitors were: B. Aube with a pair, singles by Philip Fong, Gilles Chauret and Peter Lacelle. The Loyalists' scorers were: Jack Duncan, 3 and 2; Big Doug. Casselman 3 and 2; Mel Tomalty 2 and 2; John Hutton 2; Fred Harper 2; Bill Dillabough 1. Allie Cameron and Dave Willard had 4 assists each, and Little Doug Casselman had 3.

Rick Droppo occupied the Loyalists' net for the first two periods and Doug Hay took over in the 3rd. Referee McAllister of Prescott, handed out 9 minor penalties, 4 to the low-flying Flyers.

Third game of the series is in Morrisburg on Thursday, March 30 at 8:30 p.m. Harry Street was the lucky winner of the half and half draw.

This week end the Loyalists are playing in the Gatineau Dow Intermediate Tournament. They take on Pepsi, of Ottawa at 7 p.m. Friday night in the double knock-out event.

CHANGE METHOD OF REPRESENTATION

A visit from Mrs. B. K. Wasson of Valois, Que., the first lay woman to be president of the Montreal & Ottawa Conference of the United Church of Canada, and announcement of a change in the method of representation were highlights of the March meeting of Seaway Valley Presbytery of the United Church held in St. James Church at Avonmore.

From July 1 this year, the representation of the different pastoral charges to Presbytery will be increased to correspond to the size of the congregation.

Mrs. Wasson, who was introduced by Rev. Clare Kellogg of Knox United Church, Cornwall, reported on her visits to various presbyteries. She complimented the Seaway Valley Presbytery on "a great feeling of fellowship" and stressed the necessity for mutual trust within presbyteries and congregations. She mentioned her concern for support of the stewardship and the decline in contributions to mission and service fund enterprises.

At diner grace was pronounced by George Tomita of St. Paul's United Church, Cornwall, a prospective candidate for the ministry. Afterward, communion service was conducted by Rev. Harry Funge of Avonmore, assisted by Mrs. Wasson. Rev. Robbert Pentinga of Iroquois, chairman of presbytery conducted the business meeting.

Reminder To Milk Producers In Dundas County

According to records available, it is possible that milk producers will produce less than 75 percent of their original Market Sharing Quota during the 1971-72 Dairy Year. This may also apply to Federal Subsidy Quota. As a result producers could lose a part of their Quotas.

The present policy states that producers who either buy or sell a minimum of 12,000 lbs. of Market Sharing Quota with 420 lbs. of Butterfat Subsidy Quota will be exempt from the penalty. This necessary transaction must take place immediately to result in the exemption from loss.

Dundas Producers may wish to contact the local Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food Office (774-2313) and make appointment to see the O.M.M.B. Fieldman on April 6th, 1972.

Please bring the following with you:

1. April 1971 and February 1972 Milk Statements.

Good Friday Customs

"And it was the third hour and they crucified Him."— Mark 15:25. This Friday, the Christian world marks the anniversary of the crucifixion of Jesus. In the two thousand years since that momentous day, in different areas and at different times, many customs have been observed by pious folk in its observance.

A century ago, craftsmen would not use hammer or nails on Good Friday, because of the use to which they were put when Jesus was nailed to the cross.

Among Christians in the Middle East, the traditional greeting "peace be with you" was not spoken on Good Friday or Holy Saturday because these were the words of salutation used by Judas Iscariot when he betrayed Christ.

At one time women would do no washing on this day. It was believed that anyone who washed would find the laundry spotted with blood — just as Christ's blood stained His linen on that day. If this should happen to a woman's laundry, bad luck would follow her throughout the year.

Among farmers, the day was considered lucky for planting crops, since they considered Jesus had blessed and sanctified the soil by His death and burial.

Those who died on Good Friday were considered fortunate because it was believed they shared the privilege of the Good Thief and quickly entered Heaven.

Eggs laid during the Lenten season were once assigned special significance and any laid on Good Friday were said to posseses qualities which kept all misfortunes away. Some believed chills and colds could be forestalled by eating on Easter Sunday two eggs laid on Good Friday.

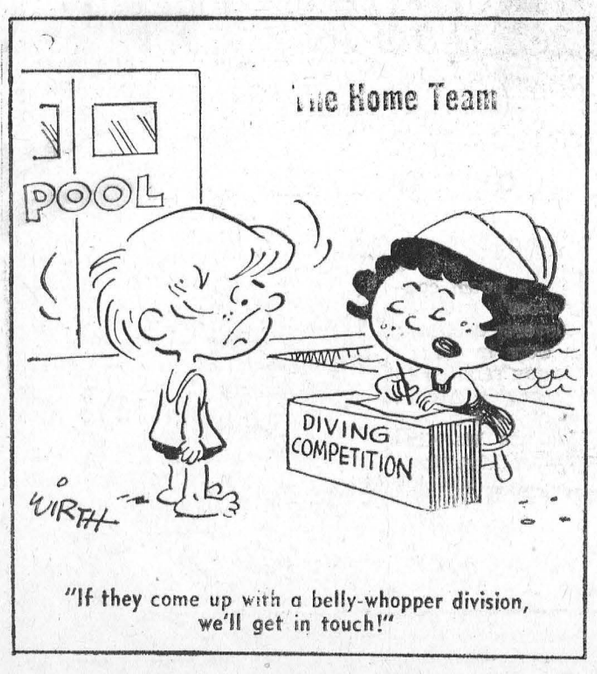
"Hot Cross Buns" are now associated with the Lenten season and it was once believed that those baked on Good Friday had special curative powers. The little buns are said to have evolved fro man ancient Roman custom in which the vestal virgins offered cakes marked with crosses to Vesta, the Roman goddess of the hearth. The early Anglo-Saxons featured such cakes in the celebration of the coming of spring. Records show that in the sixth century, Pope Gregory decreed that only bread, salt, and vegetables could be eaten on Good Friday. Loaves of bread were marked with a cross before baking, to indicate they could be eaten on this day. And it is believed by most that these marked loaves are the actual forerunners of our present-day "hot cross buns".

These are but a few of the many old customs of the day, originally called "God's Friday". Most have fallen into disuse through the years, although they once formed a colorful, if not central, part of the observance of the season.

In most countries the day is observed in solemn ways. In parts of Greece, villagers — from high officials to lowly peasants — line up for an evening processional led to the local church on Good Friday. Each carries a lighted candle, while a solemn drumbeat marks homage to the death of Christ. The procession is led by men carrying the symbolic bier of Christ suffering on the cross. Once at the chuch, the evening is spent in prayer and meditation.

In some countries clocks are wreathed in black, and stopped for the "Three Hours". All forms of personal enjoyment are banned for the entire day, even children are forbidden playtime activities. Radio and TV sets are silenced until Easter Sunday. Those unable to attend services in the church gather together in homes, praying and meditating for the three-hour period.

On Tuesday afternoon we swept up a dustpan full of crushed glass behind our car parked at the rear of the shopping centre. We hope that the owners of the truck which is creating this nuisance will soon have it "summerized" — i.e. the holes for spreading salt covered up for the summer months. — That crushed-up glass is hard on the tires.



"If they come up with a belly-whopper division, we'll get in touch!"

Yours Sincerely . . .

BY MRS. WELLWOOD ADAM

One thing we all appear to have in common is, that we look forward to things happening. Like a wedding in the family, especially if that wedding is pleasing to both sides of the families concerned. The bride dreams of it for months, the groom thinks a great deal more about it than he is perhaps willing to admit, and both families work for weeks to prepare for it.

We look forward to summer or winter vacations, and this is relatively a small thing to compare the passing of Grade 13, getting a diploma, an academic degree, or being launched into a career. As we anticipate the thing we want, so we strive towards it with all our might and main.

I believe we do the same thing in the wider area of our public life. We enjoy living in a city or smaller community that is well - managed, with clean streets and sidewalks etc., and with respected men and women running its affairs with equally clean hands and minds So we work hard at bringing all this to happen with all our might and main. We like to think our country is secure, not because of what we have, but what we as a people stand for. We look forward to having a world in which the tensions existing between the nations won't blow up in a fatal and final explosion. In common again, I think I could say we all look forward to a better city or community, a better country, and a better world.

It so happens, though, when we get what we have hoped for, it can turn out not exactly what we had expected it to be. Sometimes, not always, of course. Take marriage... perhaps when we were very young and equally romantic, we thought it was going to be a time of unbroken rapture. But we have found it to be a life of perpetual give and take where two entirely different persons live a lifetime, more or less, learning how to amicably live together. I am not implying, mind you, that there is no rapture in it, but that it is rapture with a small "r", in which we have quite a lot of routine discipline and downright hard work, with a certain amount of worry and suffering thrown in. And when the highlights and the joys come their way, the delight of it all is very truly earned.

Take the good government, even to the leaders of a community, that we may have worked so hard to get and hoping that things will run smoothly . . . we sometimes find the new reforms etc., brought in have their own difficulties and awkward decisions have been made quite often much is displeasing to the people generally. The star we aim for, sometimes, does not shine so brightly as it does in the sky . . . and in the cold light of day, it is missed by so many of us.

Everyone will be looking forward to the coming Eastertide, and the feeling of the resurrected Saviour. I say everyone, perhaps mistakenly. Everyone needs a saviour, I am sure of that, but not everyone knows that he or she needs one! So, I could correct myself by saying, not everyone is looking for the real and meaningful Eastertide.

The only saviour we will ever find, if we are honestly looking, is the One who has already come! Added to that, the One who has already come, will come again! This was told to those who watched the first Ascension!

Those of us, who have faith, plenty of it, to believe this and to accept it without hesitation, then we have, very certainly, a great deal in common to look forward to! I am sure of it. Are you?

GORDON BLAIR'S OTTAWA REPORT

Parliamentary Progress

The present Session commenced on February 17th. After allowing for opening formalities, the House had completed on Friday of last week 27 sitting days. Nine of these were taken up with the Speech from the Throne debate, seven more by opposition days when the Opposition can raise any problem it wants for debate. These debates have included old age pensions, pollution, regional economic development, urbanization and the monetary theories of the Social Credit party.

Limited Time for Government Business

Only 11 days, thus far, that is less than half, have been reserved for government business. The pace has been slow. The main acts passed so far authorize equalization payments to the provinces and confirm the tax reductions announced in the mini-budget of last Fall. Even these 11 days could not be considered to have been devoted wholly to government business because financial bills and the annual bill for the financing of the C.N.R. and Air Canada provided important opportunities for members to raise grievances and comment generally on finance and transportation.

Few people realize how parliamentary time is spent and how it is divided between the main purposes of parliament. One purpose of parliament is obviously to pass laws and to provide for good administration. An equally important purpose is to provide a sounding board for the ideas of the people in general. Government members always complain that there is not enough time to deal with the legislative business. Opposition parties on the other hand, continually claim that time is insufficient to hear their grievances and they accuse the government of trying to close off debate. The real problem of parliament is to strike the right balance between necessary action and equally necessary talk and to find the time for both.

House Committees At Work

Other important work is of course going ahead in Committees which are now studying the Estimates of expenditures for the coming year. Some specially controversial matters have also been referred to Committee including the problems of the Auditor General and the case of Miss Booth, whose application for a leave of absence to seek a political nomination was refused. Appropriately enough for an election year, one of the measures now under discussion is an amendment to the Explosives Act.

Constitution Committee Report

The Report of the Constitution Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons did not produce any important reaction. The reason is that Canadians by and large have little confidence in the process of the total constitutional reform. We are a pragmatic people and the idea of writing a completely new constitution is foreign to the instincts of most of us. Most people realize also that any such effort is likely to stir up controversy and even create disunity — the comments of this report on the Monarchy are evidence of this.

This report will fall upon barren ground. To me, it signifies the end of the grandiose program of overall constitutional reform which had its beginning with Ontario's Confederation for Tomorrow Conference called by John Robarts in 1967. We should concentrate on much more modest constitutional objectives. The first priority should be the development of a reasonable amending procedure like that agreed to at the Victoria Conference of the Federal and Provincial Governments in June 1971. This now appears closer to attainment as a result of an agreement between the Federal and Quebec Governments on the administration of family allowances. With a proper amending procedure we can be confident that our constitution can continue to develop, as it has for the past 100 years and move to meet the challenges of new practical problems as they arise.

National Capital Area

One amusing result of the Constitution Committee's Report arose after its recommendation of an autonomous National Capital Area, a new phrase for the well-worn proposal of a Federal District. As first printed, the chapter on the National Capital Area seems to recommend that the whole area in both Ontario and Quebec should be put completely under the Government of a Board appointed by the Federal, Ontario and Quebec Governments When the furor created by this proposal was at its height, the Committee found that some important words had been left out of its recommendation, namely that this tripartite Board was intended only to study the future best way to govern the capiatl region. As the dust settled, many people shared the Honourable George McIlraith's view that the recommendation on the capital area had been a constructive contribution to the discussion of a problem that everybody recognizes — the necessity of rationalizing all the governmental structures in the capital region. It probably will provide an important foundation for further study by a Parliamentary Committee as suggested by the Minister of Urban Affairs, Mr. Basford.

The New Ethnic Revolution

By RALPH NOVAK

NEW YORK (CEF)

Sound the alarm! Man the barricades! Rewrite the civics books! America's ethnic minorities are finally floating to the surface of the melting pot, still in clumps after all.

Whether this phenomenon gets us into the soup or out of it is a matter of some debate but the fact of it isn't. Inspired, ironically enough, by the self-assertive civil rights drive of America's blacks, the Poles, the Irish, the Italians and everybody else save perhaps the Herzegovinians are raising up to proclam their pride in their ethnic heritage, to dare to be different.

Make that "dare to admit they are different," since the Kowalskis and O'Briens and Martinellis have been around all the time, in discreet ethnic communities, doing their polkas and jigs and tarantellas.

Now, however, they are exerting themselves as political forces—count those votes, wield that pressure, influence those policies. If the NAACP and CORE can do it, so can the Italian-American Civil Rights League and the Polish National Alliance.

Saturday Review editor-at-large Peter Schrag, in his recent book, "The Decline of the WASP," argues that the White Anglo-Saxon Protestants who have for the most part controlled this country are being replaced by the various elements of the erstwhile silent majority.

"America is not on the verge of becoming two separate societies, one rich and white, the other poor and black," he writes. "It is becoming, in all its dreams and anxieties, a nation of outsiders for whom no single style or ethic remains possible."

John Wayne (he may never lose to the Indians but he always takes a terrible beating in sociopolitical essays) is out and Dustin Hoffman is in. America the Smooth is out and America the Unpredictable is in.

All this has happened because we no longer need to live in total agreement to survive. Insecure as we are, we are still secure enough to tolerate diversity.

Now the problem is to find a happy medium between segregation and integration, a happy medium which the country's blacks have still not located. Once you start proclaiming that Italian is beautiful or that you are a Polish-American, not just a plain American, you have started a process that is difficult to stop.

REPORT FROM QUEEN'S PARK

BY DON IRVINE
M.P.P. for Grenville - Dundas

After having been subjected to evening House hours to conclude the debate on the Speech from the Throne, I can strongly recommend the necessity of revising some of the rules of the House in conjunction with the present changes being implemented as a result of the recommendations of the Committee on Government Productivity. It is my opinion that there should be a definite limitation to the number and length of speeches made during this debate with more time for the question and answer period each day, and more time to process in an orderly manner the tremendous amount of proposed legislation. The lack of attendance in the House at various times was no doubt due to the poor calibre of some of the speeches, which in many instances were made only because it is considered important by some members to be in Hansard regardless of the fact that, they have not contributed at all by meaningful suggestions to improving our government's legislation. The House adjourned for the week of March 20th and will resume the following week with the budget being introduced by the Honourable Darcy McKeough on Tuesday evening, March 28th at 8:00 p.m.

Education has been very much in the forefront with the following announcements by the Minister, The Honourable Thomas Wells.

(1) Restructuring of responsibilities to be in three functional areas (a) the Education Development function, (b) the Education Administration function, (c) the Support Services function.

There will be an assistant deputy minister in charge of each area.

(2) A permanent Council on French Language Schools established with special emphasis on Government legislation to provide for the continuing development of the French language in our secondary education.

(3) A Task Force established to assist school boards in the development of more effective management of our school board resources.

(4) The extra costs incurred through community use of school facilities in non-school hours to be excluded in the ordinary expenditures which are subject to the ceiling formula. This will alleviate to some extent the budget problems of our school boards.

(5) The increased Provincial grant combined with the per pupil expenditure ceilings should result in either a decrease in the mill rate or a mill rate equal to 1971. After this year, all boards must adhere to the announced ceilings in preparing their budgets.

Although the nursing home regulation will come into effect April 1st, it is quite evident that it will not be possible to fully implement this plan immediately insofar as it concerns the nursing home operators. This again, is a case where the government failed to give sufficient consideration prior to the date for implementation.

Discussions related to the Workmen's Compensation Board, the Department of Labour, and the Budget will no doubt be most interesting when the House resumes this week.

What Makes A Woman A Woman

"It's not true that once you're over 40 or 50 — whether you're male or female — that your interest in, and capacity for sexual relationships will automatically go down." This is the view of Mary S. Calderone, M.D. She points out, however, that men and women do differ in reaching their sexual maturity and that there's more to marriage than just the physical. Dr. Calderone is the executive director of SIECUS, the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States.

Men, Dr. Calderone explains, usually attain their highest capacity for sexual activity in their late teens or early 20's, while women tend to mature more slowly, and may not reach their peak until their mid-40's.

In aging, Dr. Calderone notes, there's still another difference: women are less apt to undergo certain physical changes than men. This is because most gynecologists give women "supportive therapy" involving estrogens during and after the menopause. These hormones keep women "on an even keel," she observes, and help them maintain better health well into their later years. "Unfortunately," she adds, "we haven't developed a similar therapy for men."

Differing Capacities

Such development differences may have considerable impact on a marriage, both in its early and later stages, the physician believes. Later in a marriage, for example, the wife's capacity might be at its height, while the husband's is diminishing. "However, with good interpretation by marriage counselors," Dr. Calderone asserts, "a man can be helped to understand that this is part of the normal course of events. His wife meanwhile can be helped to see that his seeming lack of interest needn't mean he cares for her less. And they can still continue to meet each other's needs.'

Although the physical aspect is vital, Dr. Calderone says, "it should n't be required to carry the entire burden of satisfaction." Equally important, she maintains, is the development of true intimacy in marriage based on trust. This happens gradually "until the two people are no longer afraid to be vulnerable with each other." In turn, this leads to a "real sense of delight in the relationship.'

Emotionally Bankrupt

Distorting the physical aspects, to Dr. Calderone, can result in serious complications. "If a man's idea of a woman comes from "Playboy" magazine, his wife obviously cannot fulfill that image. So real trust, intimacy and delight will not develop in their relationship. And if you don't have those deeper values, she warns, "you're going to be emotionally bankrupt later on." Men seem to forget this, she concludes, "but women know that as one grows older, intimacy and trust are important in a marriage." ..

The 7-Year Itch Is Back Again

An international survey, recently reported in the American Medical Association Journal, indicated that the age-old skin infection, scabies, is on the rise again. The study was conducted by Dr. Milton Orkin of the University of Minnesota. To the questionnaire he distributed worldwide, responses were received from a total of 159 dermatologists, representing 35 countries in all.

Dr. Orkin states that Britain, France, Poland, West Germany, Italy, Portugal, the Soviet Union, Morocco, Argentina, Brazil and Mexico appear to have a "high frequency" of scabies. In contrast, the condition (commonly called "the itch" or "the seven-year itch") is rare in Venezuela, Unguay, Hungary, Rumania, Japan and Australia. To date, Canada and the U.S. have not been affected by epidemic proportions, however, outbreaks appear in many communities and institutions. For instance, a little mill town in Main suffered an invasion not long ago, with more than 200 cases at its peak, mostly among school children.

Scabies is caused by an itch mite (Sarcoptes Scabiei) which burrows under the host's skin. The infection can be highly contagious and is usually cyclical in nature. During the early 1950's, extensive investigations disclosed scabies to be "progressively uncommon" in North America, western Europe and eastern Asia. But, since 1963-64, a steady increase has been noted.

In reporting on Dr. Orkin's scabies research, the New York Times also cited findings of a mid-August University of Washington medical school conference: that scabies causes are up in the states of California, Oregon and Washington, as well as the Vancouver area. Often, it's a family infection, that begins with one child." Certainly the outbreak in Maine crossed socio-economic lines, not jibing with the traditional idea that the disease is primarily a problem of the poor. Nor does that area have any significant number of migratory workers, who have been blamed elsewhere for bringing the mite with them.

Usually scabies is found between the fingers, on soles of feet and wrists, on the palms, in the elbow crease and armpits, on the buttocks and genitalia. It can affect the faces of children but, mysteriously, is seldom seen on adult faces. Dermatologists diagnose scabies by opening the blind end of a suspected burrow and removing a mite for examination under a hand lens. Only the female mite burrows in order to lay eggs under the skin. When this happens, a redness and itching develops around the site. Itching is particularly intense at night and can cause sleep loss. Scratching leads to secondary bacterial infection in the immediate location and, possibly, to other body areas. Scabies is contagious and can spread with person-to-person contact through contaminated clothes and bed linen.

Scabies is historically the first disease of man for which the cause was accurately determined, when the mite was identified in 1687. The New York Times pointed out that the Romans were said to have treated the infection by bathing in hot sulphur springs. Today, it reports, sulphur ointments are not nearly as effective as a mild solution of Gamma Benzene Hexachloride which is available in Canada as Kwellada. Most physicians prescribe Kwellada in the treatment of scabies or pediculosis.

Exchanging Letters

(Note: A recent column included a letter from A.B., who asked about corresponding with someone who might share her interests. This suggestion for her came in the mail and might be of interest to other readers too.)

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

Please tell A.B. about the Letter Exchange Program that the People-to-People organization sponsors. All one has to do is write them and request a "pen friend", while providing them with a few details such as one's age group, special interests, hobbies, etc. The letters then go through some sort of computer, which helps you become "acquainted" with someone you'll be compatible with. Since I joined that organization in 1963, I've had the most delightful correspondence with a "pen friend" in England. She and I have so many of the same interests. We "talk" in our letters and never seem to run out of things to say. And they're not about the weather or the price of meat either. The address is: Letter Exchange Program, People to People, 2401 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Another Person's Prescription

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I'm 51 years old and have not had a period for some time. I've been feeling so terrible, that I some times think I'll go out of my mind. (My problems are all menopausal, which I'm sure I don't have to spell out word-for-word.) I've been going to a doctor regularly, but last summer, when he was on vacation, I couldn't reach him. I have a close friend, however, who has b e e n through the situation herself, and she gave me some of her estrogen. I know it isn't right to take someone else's prescription, but I had no choice. I felt so wonderful for those two weeks; I was a new woman. I told my doctor about this when he came back and was sure he'd put me on estrogen. But he claimed it wouldn't be suitable. So now I don't know what to think. I'd appreciate any advice you could give me. C.F.

Dear C.F.:

Your doctor was certainly a gentleman in not reading you the riot act. It's extremely dangerous to take a medicine without a doctor's supervision. (Prescriptions, by their nature, are a ways written for the specific health problems of specific indivduals and if you're not that specific individual — hands off.) It's true that many doctors do prescribe estrogen for their patients both during and after the menopause, but that's still the doctor's decision. Should you wish another medical opinion, however, you might seek out another phycician in your community. Then he can take it from there.

FACTS FAVOUR FLUORIDATION

Residents in many communities have been asked to vote on the issue of adding fluorides to the water supply. Comments are often heard from people who are, or should be, in the know. Most of the time factual information is made available. Occasionally, however, false information may sway a community against adding fluorides to its water supply. The loser in this case is the community.

Since 1874 fluorides have been recommended they give "hardness and lasting quality to the enamel of the teeth and so protect against decay".

In 1937 the U.S. Public Health Service began large-scale studies which have shown that when the water supply contains fluoride there is much less tooth decay. Countless subsequent studies confirmed the truth of these findings time and again. In 1945 Canada's Brantford and some American cities pioneered by supplementing the Fluoride content of their water supply. Today in Canada more than seven million people in 400 communities drink fluoridated water. In the U.S. the figure is 83 million people in 5,000 communities.

The cost of adding fluorides to a community's drinking water is negligible — about eight to twelve cents per person per year depending on the compound used.

If you are interested in receiving a sample copy of the up-to-date factual pamphlet entitled: "Facts Favour Fluoridation" write enclosing your name and address to:

Early Civilizations

When European explorers first arrived in Central and South America, the established Indian civilizations were the Incas in the highlands of Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador and northern Chile; the Chibchas in the highlands of Colombia; the Mayas of Guatemala and Yucatan; and the Aztecs of Mexico.

Migrators

The best known migrators besides birds are probably the lemmings of Scandinavia, which, at intervals, travel toward the Atlantic Ocean, sometimes even plunging into the sea. Several of the common bats, also, undertake a true migration in the autumn.

Custom's Origin

To the ancients, holly was thought to be endowed with unusual powers. In legend, Christ's crown of thorns was made of holly leaves and from this emerged the custom of making Christmas wreaths of holly.

Buying A Used CAR

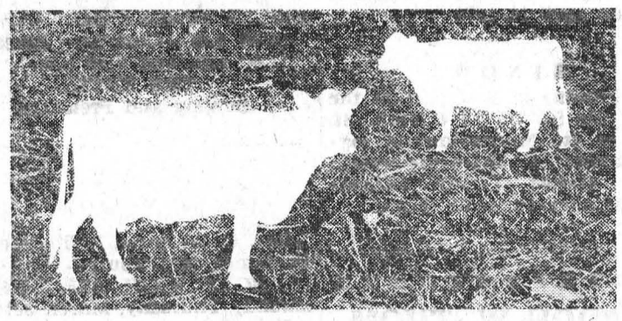
When contemplating the purchase of a used car the prospective owner can do much by way of ascertaining the condition of the vehicle.

When you have the vehicle off the used car dealer's lot take a few quiet minutes to carefully go over the interior of the automobile.—Check to see that all doors open and shut easily and stay open on the hold-open spring, if there is one. Check the locks to be certain that you can lock and unlock the vehicle. Pull back the trim or shiny metal from the door edgings to see if there has been a repaint job on the vehicle.

Lift up the carpeting to check for rust or corrosion. Even a few paint blisters or freckles of rust can indicate that water seeps in or soon will. Check for a leaking trunk — water in the trunk can rust through the rear floor and in severe cases can cause the trunk compartment to be useless.

Look at the wear on carpets, seats, upholstery and pedals. Then look at the odometer reading. — Check to see that it is a reasonable mileage bearing in mind that you have seen the outside and perhaps already viewed the underside og the car. The odometer could have been replaced, tampered with, or turned back to zero by your dealer, by a previous owner, or a previous dealer. A rough guide is about 10,000 miles per year and that is approximately what you should expect to find.

A thorough inspection by your garage operator or his mechanic will sometimes reveal that the vehicle you intended to purchase had been involved in a very serious accident. Perhaps it was a total write off and had been reconstructed, repainted, and offered for sale to you. There are many ways in which a skilled automotive repairer can determine what has happened to an automobile and whether its history warrants your purchasing that particular vehicle.



How many pounds of milk do you leave in the field

...because you don't have a HARVESTORE® system?

A sobering thought, but true. Field losses can rob you of feed value that could produce thousands of pounds of milk.

College and on-the-farm tests show field losses can be up to 50% with pasture, 25% with baled hay (40% if rained on), 25% with dry grain. Storage and feeding losses can waste still more feed value. Conventional harvesting, storing and feeding can claim 33% or more of feed value before it's fed.

Not so with a HARVESTORE system. Its combination of "sealed storage" and bottom unloading lets you harvest early when feed value is highest, field losses are lowest. You practically eliminate storage losses and feed mechanically with minimum feed waste. So it's possible to cut total losses to below 12%. That's a HARVESTORE advantage of 21% over conventional methods. For more information, return the coupon.

Fix-It Tip

In making a spring inspection of the roof of your home, if shingles are slightly torn, nail down with roofing nails after using roof coating on the underside. Then put a dab of the coating on the nail heads. Broken shingles should be carefully removed by gently lifting the shingle above and lifting out the exposed nails. Slide out the old, slip in a new shingle and nail in place.

TAX TIPS QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Q. What receipts or certificates must I enclose with my income tax form when claiming my tuition fees?

A. You should ask the educational institution for the special receipt or certificate approved for income tax purposes. If, because you are claiming tuition expenses for the calendar year rather than for the academic year, your claim does not equal the amount shown on this certificate, specify the portion of the amount on the certificate that you are claiming for the calendar year, and the amount covered by the certificate for the immediately preceding period.

Q. I find that my dividend tax credit on Canadian dividends wipes out my income tax. Does this mean I file a so-called "nil" return.

A. No. While your tax credit eliminates all your income tax, nevertheless you must pay the Old Age Security Tax and the Social Development Tax up to a maximum of $360. The dividend tax credit cannot reduce these two taxes.

Q. Is a farmer required to make Canada Pension Plan deductions from the wages paid to farm help?

A. Deductions for the Canada Pension Plan must be made from all wages paid for farm labour, provided the employee has reached the age of 18 and has not reached the age of 70, and has received cash wages of $250 or more and has also worked for 25 days or more during the year for this employer.

Q. I am a married man with wholly dependent parents living overseas. What exemption can I claim for my parents?

A. You may claim the actual amounts spent in support of your parents up to a maximum of $550 each. Form TIE-NR, which you can obtain from your District Taxation Office, must be completed and attached to your income tax return.

Q. I am a fisherman and I have to get my wife to drive me to the various ports. Can I claim any deductions for my car expenses? I am not the owner of the boat but a crew member.

A. No. The boat would be taken as your place of employment and if you were not picking up any supplies, nor carrying out any transportation of other crew members at the request of the owner, your trips to and from the boat would be considered as personal, and you would not be able to make any claim on your income tax.

ADELAIDE DANIELS SAYS

TIPS FOR THE IMPULSIVE EATER

There is so much said about the compulsive eater — the person who finds any and every occasion to indulge in excesses. But there is another type of eater that I call the "impulsive eater".

This speed demon wolfs down food indiscriminately while doing battle with his own built-in safety device, the time factor.

If you are an "implusive eater", slowing down is the first step to slimness. Think first, eat later. If you plan your meals and adhere to the plan there is no room for errors.

Do yourself a favor by having all the food on the table at mealtime; you will not be tempted to return to the kitchen for extras.

Outwit morning snack-sneaking at the office. A too little, too early breakfast invites mid-morning pitfalls when the coffee wagon comes around. Take time to eat a balanced breakfast.

Another tip — avoid afternoon letdown with a pick-me-up of bouillon, salad, a gelatin dessert, hot beverage or fruit.

Solve the boob-tube dilemma! If television is making you appetite-addictive, be ready with a heaping bowl of munchables such as celery, rosy radishes, cauliflowerettes or diced green pepper.

Living with a "skinny" family can present a problem. Don't feed your family what you would like to eat because you wind up eating it — after all skinny people are just born weight watchers and haven't the temptations you have.

Sleep walking may have headed you in the wrong direction. Try loosening the light bulb in your refrigerator before bedtime. By the time you stop to wonder what's wrong, you may be happily headed back to dreamland, still on your weight watching programme. If hunger persists, have a tall glass of diet pop and back to bed.

Taking time to think helps to remove impulsive eating urges. And remember there may be a reason but never an excuse, so weight a minute!

(Adelaide Daniels is Founder & Director of Weight Watchers of Ontario Limited.)
