Flawed voting list blamed for growing electoral snafu

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

More concerns regarding election fraud surfaced in Glengarry last week as residents received their electronic vote packages.

A North Glengarry woman, who requested anonymity, told The News she received a letter to addressed to her husband who died in the spring.

"It's quite the mess," she said. "I've talked to friends who have letters addressed to tenants, some who have left 15 years ago. I have a real fear that there is going to be electoral fraud."

The lead hand at the Alexandria branch of Canada Post, Marc Pelland described the electronic vote package as "a bad mailing."

"The addresses are unbelievably wrong," Mr. Pelland said. "One (rural mail) contractor, her father's been dead 14 years and he still received one. Some people who moved away 5 or 6 years ago are still getting them."

The post office employee said the problem is not confined to North Glengarry and that his counterpart in the Lancaster office is seeing similar problems.

See Pages 12 Through 15 For More Election Coverage

South Glengarry clerk/treasurer, Mike Samson explained the voting list comes from the province through the property assessment office, and their records of property owners and tenants.

The trouble begins, Mr. Samson says, when residents don't pay attention to the enumeration list sent out by the assessment office.

"We run into problems if you don't fill it out," Mr. Samson said, "and send it back, to say your uncle passed away or your niece moved away."

A representative of the Municipal Property Assessment Corporation, Randy McDonald said they used their spring pre-election mail-out to gather their information. When somebody moves away the corporation relies on the new property owners to update them.

Another tricky issue is dealing with people who have died. "We don't receive copies of death certificates under the current legislation," Mr. McDonald said. "Municipalities receive death notices, but don't give them to us. If they did we wouldn't have dead people on the list, and that would go a long way to improving the list."

Landlords of tenants in multi-residential buildings are required to provide yearly updates. It's the assessment office's job to forward enumeration lists in late summer to the municipality. A supplementary list follows, with changes that occur up to Sept. 10.

SG to reconsider 'app' from Summerstown firm for severance request

By Sue Harrington
News Correspondent

South Glengarry Council will reconsider a consent application from Shaver-Kudell Manufacturing Inc., provided that the Summerstown based company provides more data to the township.

Council had turned down Shaver-Kudell's initial application request at its Oct. 6 meeting, after hearing from Planning Advisory Committee members that the severance request was made to circumvent environmental regulations.

The owner of the property, Neil Shaver, had applied to sever a 10.5 acre parcel of land which is home to several small manufacturing businesses.

But at the Oct. 27 council meeting, environmental technologist Pierre Savard said he had recommended the severance to Mr. Shaver and at the time he did not think it was necessary to have an environmental impact study done.

Under the Ontario Building Code, if the combined flows of all the buildings on a parcel of land exceed 10,000 litres per day, then it is subject to an environmental assessment.

"My opinion was that the septic systems would not have an impact on wells," he said, producing well records and other information.

But he agreed that a "unit of concern" was a building on the site which employs 30 people, and which, when added to the flows of the other buildings, could bring the total to over 10,000 litres.

According to Mr. Savard, one reason for recommending the severance was for liability concerns.

"If something were to happen, it wouldn't affect both parties," he said.

Councillor Ian McLeod said that at over 10,000 litres, a use analysis study would be necessary before council would even entertain the possibility of a severance.

Bill Madden, PAC chair, said that the decision to recommend turning down the application request, was based on a letter written by Mr. Savard.

"It's interesting that after this rejection, all this information is coming forward," said Mr. Madden.

He intimated that had PAC received more information initially, its recommendation might have been different.

"I understand the concerns of the PAC," said Mr. Savard, who agreed to get more data and re-submit it.

South Glengarry will ask the Committee of Adjustment to defer all decisions on Shaver-Kudell until additional environmental data has been received.

'Electricity' flows after rate-cap announced

By Steven Warburton
News Editor

A Glengarry businessman says he's very disillusioned with Ontario's newly elected Liberal government after it announced it would remove the cap on electricity rates.

Mike Major, who along with wife Kim owns and operates Alexandria's Dairy Queen, met with a CBC television crew at his restaurant on Friday afternoon. He even went so far as to suggest that the Liberals are liars.

"The Liberals promised us that if they got elected, they would keep the electricity rates capped," Mr. Major told The News. "Then they announced that they would uncap it because of the deficit. But the Liberals knew about the deficit all along. It was just another campaign lie."

Mr. Major is part of a group of eastern Ontario businesspeople who want to keep electricity rates low in the interest of viable businesses. Many of them were partially responsible for persuading Ontario's former PC government to cap electricity rates at 4.3 cents per kilowatt on May 1, 2002.

Last Friday, the Liberals announced that removing the cap is necessary in order to pay off a $5.6 billion deficit they inherited from the Progressive Conservatives. According to some Liberal sources, the 4.3 rate is a full one-third below the actual cost of electricity generation.

New well in works for Apple Hill to solve centre's water problems

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

Drilling a new well for Apple Hill's community centre is the first upgrade North Glengarry must make in what could amount to a $35,000 effort to meet provincial water regulations.

When the waterworks department started testing six publicly used facilities in July, five failed provincially mandated tests which came into place as a result of the Walkerton crisis.

Water testing took place at the Dunvegan Recreation facility, Glen Robertson Social Centre, Dalkeith Community Centre, Maxville Recreation Centre, the McDonald Memorial Medical Centre and the Apple Hill Community Centre, as a result of regulation 170-03.

All failed except the facility in Glen Robertson. The water tests in Apple Hill showed traces of E.Coli.

Apple Hill's McDonald Memorial Medical Centre and the facilities in Dunvegan and Dalkeith showed traces of coliform and bacteria. The Maxville Recreation Centre tested positively for bacteria.

By July 31, all facilities were in compliance with the regulation, except the community centre in Apple Hill, according to waterworks manager André Bachand, who said they no longer test the medical facility as it does not fall under the municipality's jurisdiction.

To achieve the positive test results, "we have been shocking the wells with chlorine and flushing the systems pretty much every week," Mr. Bachand said, but added, "Don't drink the water" signs remain up in all of the facilities, except the one in Glen Robertson.

North Glengarry council recently set aside $35,000 in funding to make water improvements in the community centres. The facility in Apple Hill is the number one priority.

Presently the Apple Hill facility is served by a privately owned dug well, that is getting a lot of "surface water influence,"according to Mr. Bachand.

The drilled well the township plans to start within the next couple of weeks , "will be sealed off and won't allow any surface water in," Mr . Bachand said, "so we are just dealing with the what is in the ground at that point."

After the well is up and running, the waterworks department plans to run water quality tests. "For sure it will need an Ultra Violet system, but also possibly a chlorinator, and a softener."

Upgrades in Apple Hill alone could amount to $15,000 when all the work is done. Officials are not sure what results to expect, because a lot of the ground water is unfit in Apple Hill.

Besides the work in Apple Hill, UV systems will be added to all the other facilities, except Maxville, whose rec centre is presently equipped with one. The cost of each UV system is estimated at $4,000. UV systems disinfect the water by killing bacteria with ultraviolet light.

Council budgeted $3,500 to add a chlorinator to the Maxville Rec Centre, to reinforce its present system against bacteria.

Mr. Bachand concluded, "We'll get some samples (after the well is drilled in Apple Hill), then determine what we have to do there. We have the funding to go the full mile if we have to."

Electricity

Berkshire Securities Inc. and the Priest's Mill Restaurant, says that while he understands the Liberals' decision from a political standpoint, it's still not very good for small businesses.

"I understand that the Liberals want to get rid of the deficit," he said. "But the capped rate, right now, is very good for small businesses. We've done our forecasting and planning around the 4.3 rate and if the Liberals increase that rate, we have no opportunity to plan around it."

Mr. MacDonald added that unlike other businesses, he cannot just pass his increases along to his customers.

"In the airline industry, they can charge a fuel tax because of the increasing fuel costs," he says. "But at Priest's Mill, I can't say to someone 'here's your club sandwich and here's a dollar surcharge for our rising hydro bill.'"

Mr. MacDonald says he'd rather see the new electricity rates phased in over time instead of simply increasing the rates all at once.

Notwithstanding local objections, Ontario's new energy minister Dwight Duncan has 30 days to come up with a new price for electricity. Mr. MacDonald says that if the rates were to rise by 20 per cent, it would cost him an extra $1,000 per month to operate Priest's Mill.

Mr. Major says Dairy Queen would be faced with an extra $8,000 a year.

"This is going to have ramifications for all businesses," he said. "Companies like Consoltex were fighting to stay here but now that the electricity is going up, that's just another nail in their coffin."

Mr. Major added that several businesses donate a lot of their disposable income to local sports teams and charities.

"Now it will make things difficult when people seeking sponsorship come to see us," he said.

For his part, Glengarry-Prescott-Russell MPP Jean-Marc Lalonde says he's also disappointed the freeze is being lifted, but denies that the Liberals lied about the issue.

"We were expecting the deficit to be between two and 4.5 billion dollars," Mr. Lalonde told The News.

It wasn't until Oct. 29, the date that former provincial auditor Erik Peters filed an independent report on the 2003-2004 fical outlook, that the $5.6 billion figure came to light, he said.

Mr. Lalonde added that he will table a recommendation of his own to the provincial government this week.

The veteran MPP would not provide any details of the recommendation, but did say he'd spoken with several people in the electricity business before drafting it.

SG off hook for water repairs

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

While North Glengarry is upgrading publicly used facilities with water treatment systems to meet provincial standards, so far the South hasn't needed to make changes.

South Glengarry regularly tests its water at the Martintown Community Centre and at the arena in Williamstown, according to public works director, Ewen MacDonald.

"Touch wood, so far we have been pretty much unscathed," Mr. MacDonald said, adding: "in the spring and then the fall, on any given year we may have our coilform come up to the warning level."

Working with Eastern Ontario Health Unit, the South uses weekly chlorine shock treatments, similar to those used by the North, to combat coliform and rectify the problems.

North Glengarry samples water at its facilities on a weekly basis, while the South does monthly testing.

"We work with the health unit in ensuring we comply with their requirements," Mr. MacDonald said. "If there is a greater frequency of testing required, we'd certainly be looking at complying. As of yet they haven't requested any higher frequency from us."

Voting

It is a scramble over a short period of time to verify the list, according to North Glengarry clerk Leo Porier, who estimates that more than 200 letters have been returned.

"We try to do our best to pick off people but we don't know everybody," Mr. Poirier said. "You don't want to be knocking off people who are still alive."

The clerk blamed the Harris government's cost-cutting moves for the poor mailing lists of late, saying it was more accurate when representatives went door to door.

While South Glengarry clerk/treasurer Mike Samson admitted to seeing the name of man who died 30 years ago on the list, and to receiving numerous returns from tenants, he said it is no different than the past.

"It is nothing new and it's never going to stop," Mr. Samson said. "In the past when people came into the polls to vote, there were a lot of names in there that didn't belong. But they didn't show up, so it really wasn't talked about."

He believes what is unusual this year is people's attitudes toward the new system.

"I think this time around people are out there to criticize, " Mr. Samson said. "Every little glitch that shows up, people are making a big deal out of it."

Minister's visit renews hope for Consoltex

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

Local efforts to save Alexandria's Consoltex plant received a boost last week when the newly appointed minister of economic development and trade used his first official trip to visit the Alexandria plant on Thursday.

The minister's showing added momentum and positive feeling to the Consoltex Recovery Committee, which held its initial meeting the day before, and is working to keep the textile company in the area.

"It is always an honour to have a brand new minister make his first trip to this area," said North Glengarry Mayor Bill Franklin, who attended an hour-long meeting and then toured the operation with Minister Joe Cordiano and company officials.

Consoltex president Marcel Thibault came in from his Montreal head office and talked at length with the minister, according to recovery committee chairperson, Pierre Aubry.

"It was crucial to have him meet with Consoltex brass," Mr. Aubry said. "Mr. Thibault knows the minister himself is interested in this situation."

Mr. Cordiano recognized the difficulty of the task at hand and didn't want to make any promises, but said he was cautiously optimistic.

"We are here to assess what is going on," he said. "To say to Mr. Thibault and Consoltex that we'd like to work with them.

"We want to encourage them to continue their operations. (It's a time) to learn how we may help."

The minister took time to express compassion to the employees, adding he understands, "the town is affected in a great way."

Mayor Franklin said the minister's approach pleased him. "One of the things I liked, is he didn't come saying I have a bag of goodies....He said I want to look at the situation and make a reasonable long-term decision.

"I appreciate the honesty. The direction of the whole meeting was, what positive things can we do here to make this operation viable in this community."

While the Consoltex president reaffirmed the company's stance that the Alexandria plant will close in June, his comments suggested that there may still be a crack open in what appears to be a closed door.

One is the appreciation he expressed for, "the community and the employees (who) united together to try to have us change our idea. It gives us a warmed heart to see the interest...When there is life there is hope."

Another is that he extended the deadline for the recovery committee, who were to present him with a proposal by Nov. 7. They now have until Nov. 14.

MPP Jean-Marc Lalonde, who orchestrated the minister's trip, was very pleased with this news, and added, "it wasn't that easy to have it accepted."

The extra time buys the MPP and the minister an opportunity to go back to Queen's Park and discuss initiatives with their colleagues.

On the local front, the recovery committee has two tasks ahead of them, according to Mr. Aubry.

"One is to understand the challenges facing Consoltex, the second is to show them why we think it is better to keep the plant in Alexandria."

Mr. Aubry said the whole point of water usage is critical to whatever decision is made.

The plant in Cowansville, Alexandria's competition, has its own lagoon system.

To level the playing field the recovery team is getting help from environmental experts at the National Research Council.

Plans for water recycling and sewage systems for the local plant could dramatically reduce costs.

"It is not possible for the minister to say, 'we will put in place a way to recycle effluent in a short time,' " Mr. Aubry said. "It is important for Consoltex to see whether it is possible to receive some assistance with some of these things."

The recovery team is prepared to play a human resource card in its dealings with the company.

"Most of the research Consoltex does is done here in Alexandria," Mr. Aubry said. "We have raised the serious issue of whether the people would relocate to Cowansville."

Mr. Aubry said not only are their key people in Alexandria, but he hinted that the work done in Alexandria is more complex than that completed at the Quebec-based plant.

"The product they make in Cowansville is 50 cents a square metre, certain stuff they produce (in Alexandria) for certain applications is $75 a square metre."

There was a lot of good input at the first meeting of the committee according to Mr. Aubry, who added, "the more we meet, the more we can put on the table that Alexandria can offer to Consoltex.

"We know the odds aren't tremendously in our favour, but that doesn't mean you can't turn the tide."

Addition tenders a jolt to council

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

North Glengarry council members got quite a jolt Friday when tenders for a new ambulance building came in costing about $115,000 more than expected.

"They were quite surprised by the high numbers," said township clerk Leo Poirier, who was joined by council when he opened the estimates for the project. The two posted tenders were for $258,726 and $255,730.

To speed along the construction process for the new facility, which will be attached to the Alexandria Firehall, council granted the clerk and his assistants power to approve the final tender. They did so, to avoid a slow-down created by a possible lame-duck council.

But the high numbers put everything on hold until there is a lease agreement with the City of Cornwall, which provides the ambulance service in conjunction with the counties.

"I am not approving any tender until I have a lease with the City of Cornwall," Mr.Poirier said. Adding if he does negotiate a lease, "then I can award a tender, and it will probably go to the lowest bidder."

At the Oct. 27 council meeting, Mayor Bill Franklin estimated the cost of the project at $100,000 to $140,000.

Service providers, Cornwall and SDG EMS, encouraged all SDG municipalities to construct their own buildings to house the Ambulance Service.

The providers inherit costs of constructing the facilities, the mayor said. The service is presently rents a privately owned facility for $18,240 a year.

The clerk hopes to start discussions with the City of Cornwall later this week.

Retiring minister to study scrolls

By Steven Warburton
News Editor

After serving 38 years in the ministry, Rev. Gary Stokes says the best part about being a clergyman is the closeness he has enjoyed with people.

"There is no other profession that has that closeness," says Rev. Stokes, who lives beside Chateau Gardens in Lancaster.

"Not even a doctor has that closeness. A doctor knows you physically, but he does not know what's spiritually inside."

For the past five years, Rev. Stokes has served the United church throughout South Glengarry.

Now, at 65, he is ready for retirement.

That doesn't mean he intends to put aside the holy life. Quite the contrary, in fact.

In addition to being an ordained minister, Rev. Stokes is something of a scholar.

He holds a B.A. and an M.A. in near-eastern studies and he has studied ancient Hebrew for nine years.

In fact, he's even got a copy of portions of the Dead Sea Scrolls, which he has translated.

"The study of ancient languages is a hobby of mine," he says.

He says that his translation work was more a matter of personal interest than it was a scholarly pursuit.

"Without a doubt, those scrolls are authentic," he says.

"They really confirmed our traditional Judeo-Christian beliefs and they illuminated the transition from Judaism to Christianity."

Rev. Stokes also enjoyed a one-year fellowship to study at the University of Jerusalem. But despite his scholarly mind, he says that the opportunity to work with people is what led him into the ministry.

"I'd like to be able to say there was a calling to proclaim the word of God but that just wasn't the main thing," he says.

"That was just the sidebar."

Working with people in a manner that brings about a positive societal change was more important to him.

Rev. Stokes knows that he'll still be in contact with people even though he's no longer an "official" man of the cloth.

He'll still be an active member of his community, particularly as a singer with the gospelaires.

He also intends to do a lot of reading and to refresh his knowledge of ancient Hebrew.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER: Bird lovers who find themselves in the vicinity of Mill Pond in Alexandria could be in for a pleasant surprise. This week, the pond proved to be a home to four snow white swans, including these two. Older Glengarrians may recall that at one time, the former town of Alexandria's council actually paid for the upkeep of two swans.

The Top 10 Glengarry municipal election questions

OBSERVATIONS

JT GROSSMITH

Keeping with last week's showbiz reference to the South Glengarry Election Road Show, here are the Top 10 questions or issues that might be raised if Late Show host David Letterman focused on Glengarry's upcoming municipal elections.

Number 1: Will the participation rate in South and North Glengarry go up as forecasted in this year's municipal election due to the switch to electronic voting?

Also, how much more will this process end up costing the taxpayers?

At this writing, with the election still days a way, the turmoil that the change is causing for many may well not be worth the results.

Number 2: How much of a factor will the hog-barn issue play in determining the North Glengarry mayoralty race?

There is no doubt that those opposing hog barns are vocal and determined. They have dominated the Letters to the Editor columns of this newspaper in recent months and they have been active at the All Candidates Meetings. But are the active few just the tip of the iceberg or are they the whole 'berg?

Number 3: Will the same issue be a factor in the NG deputy-mayor's contest?

William Hagen is on the same page as Bill Franklin on this issue but it's Mr. Franklin who has been the lightning rod for the opponents of hog barns. The fact that Mr. Hagen's opponent, Maryanne Kampouris, also is on-side with the hog issue may make it somewhat of a moot point.

Number 4: The dominant themes in the South Glengarry all-candidates meetings to date have been high taxes and bad roads. That's usually a recipe for disaster for incumbents, but in SG's mayoralty contest both candidates are members of the current council and normally would be considered equally accountable.

The deputy-mayor's contest is somewhat different. Frank Prevost is the incumbent but Charles Sangster is just one term removed from being reeve and hence there is still a recognition that he also may be responsible for the condition of the roads and the tax level. Mr. Sangster has been attempting to play the tax card to his advantage, claiming taxes were lower when he was in charge.

Number 5: As a adjunct to number 4, will South Glengarry voters distinguish between the fact that more of those high taxes are being levied by the Counties and that the local municipality is stuck in the role of collecting the dough?

The same, of course, holds true in North Glengarry.

Number 6: How will the east-west dichotomy in South Glengarry play out this time around?

Potentially, the lines are most clearly drawn in the deputy-mayor's contest but it could also play a factor in the mayor's race and, more particularly in the councillor vote. Of the nine council contestants, five are from the west and four, including the two incumbents, are from the east. If the 2000 mayoralty race is any indicator, it could be a significant factor. In that election, Charlie Sangster captured 62.5 per cent of the east vote while Dave MacDonald did slightly better on his home turf getting 63 per cent of the vote in the former township of Charlottenburgh. However, it's the distribution of votes in the east and the west that told the tale as there were substantially more votes, 3,200, cast in the west compared to just under 2,000 in the east.

Number 7: Kenyon Ward candidate Bob Linney plans to operate several voter-help centres where individuals who desire assistance in navigating the electronic voting process can go for help. He is also offering rides to the centres or will send members of his "team" to people's homes to help voters "through the process."

Others may be contemplating the same idea but have not announced it as formally as Mr. Linney who described the centres in his campaign literature. There's no reason to believe at this point that the Dunvegan resident had anything but the best of intentions when he came up with the idea, but how it will play come election day is not certain, having all ready generated a good deal of contentious discussion at last week's township council meeting?

Number 8: Will Lochiel voters attach any importance to the issue of whether municipal councillors live in the area they represent as opposed to just owning property in determining who they cast their votes for on election day?

This item was raised at All Candidates Meetings in Lochiel with incumbent Ron MacDonell being questioned because he sold his farm in the area and moved outside the township to another property he owns in Bainsville. His wife, Monique, remains on title for a parcel of land in Lochiel, which Mr. MacDonell had transferred to her.

Interestingly, the issue didn't prompt anyone to challenge Chris McDonell for NG councillor-at-large. Mr. McDonell, who owns property in North Glengarry but lives in the South, was returned by acclamation.

Number 9: Can Bill Franklin improve his Alexandria support this election?

In 2000, Mr. Franklin garnered little more than 18 per cent of the votes cast in the town while Mike Depratto and Grant Crack split the vast majority of the ballots almost evenly. The final tally had Mr. Crack ahead with 780 votes to 762 for Mr. Depratto and Mr. Franklin trailing with 347 votes. If Mr. Franklin can't improve his Alexandria share it may not matter how well he does in the other three wards, even though they have almost twice as many voters.

Number 10: Which of the nine South Glengarry councillor candidates will suffer the indignity of finishing last in the race?

This is one of those instances where there are so many good candidates and so few seats that some worthy individuals are going to be disappointed come election day.

Unlike David Letterman's Top Ten, the answers to these questions and others in the municipal election won't be coming from Dave's so-called Home Office in Wahoo, Nebraska but, rather, from offices and homes across Glengarry.

Thorns & Thistles

THISTLE – Efforts grow to save plant.

It's amazing how quickly a community can mobilize when it's in danger of losing a major employer or other significant local institution. Such is the case with the Consoltex plant. Even before the announcement, local and provincial political representatives were actively trying to work out some form of accommodation.

Since the bad news was made public, members of the business community have joined the fray led by local lawyer Pierre Aubrey who is chairing a committee including representation from plant workers, the local business community, local municipal officials and regional economic leaders. As well, plant union members are prepared to offer wage concessions, the township has a plan to cut water rates and the province is looking at possible efficiencies by recycling water in the plant.

But if there's one individual worthy of receiving special recognition at this point, it's MPP Jean-Marc Lalonde. We haven't always been supportive of Mr. Lalonde in this space, but there's no denying that when he zeroes in on an issue, there's no limit to the amount of energy he will expend to accomplish his goal.

By his own estimation, the MPP has visited the plant and talked with officials some 10 times to try and get a handle on the situation. This past week he managed to convince the province's newly appointed Minister of Economic Development and Trade to visit the plant as his first official trip and meet with company head office officials. Not a bad coup when you consider that all the new ministers have bigger issues on their agendas as the new government prepares to assume power.

While there's no guarantee at this point that all of the efforts being put into saving the Consoltex plant will win the day, at least there will be the satisfaction of knowing that everything that could be done, was done.

THORN – Election producing confusion, fear.

It all seemed so straightforward when the six municipalities in SDG decided to switch to electronic voting for the 2003 municipal election. Most everyone, including this space, seemed to think it was a good idea that would encourage more people, particularly younger citizens, to vote. Now, with voting starting today, and running until election day on Nov. 10, the process appears to be in a shambles.

Although local officials are not yet prepared to concede that it's become "The Election from Hell," many voters are shaking their heads in disbelief. Most notable are seniors who are uneasy with the entire process – be it telephone voting or the Internet. Making matters worse is the growing number of reports of improperly addressed mailings containing voter ID numbers and passwords. Some individuals have received duplicate letters while others have been mailed to deceased individuals or residents who have since moved. In all, it's a shambles.

THISTLE – Long-distance calling.

It's not too often that a newspaper is credited with prompting politicians to act on an issue – even though we're always full of free advice.

So it was nice to learn that South Glengarry is started the process of eliminating the long-standing anomaly that callers between Martintown and Alexandria are charged long distance, yet calls between Alexandria and Cornwall, which are further apart, are within the local calling area.

The story this past summer pointed out what action needed to be taken to eliminate the long-distance charges.

Support new system

I am writing in support of the electronic voting system to be used for this year's municipal elections.

Of all the articles in last week's News, not one mentioned the possible positive effects that electronic voting can offer. Firstly, the potential for a massive increase in voter turnout is a very real possibility with this new system that allows people to vote over a five- day period.

Secondly, as a 25 year old, I can say that most of my peers did not vote in the past Provincial elections, but with a new system allowing voting 24 hours a day over 5 days, these same peers, along with many other voters, would not find any excuses to forgo their voting responsibilities.

Understandably, the concerns of seniors who do not have access to the Internet or touch-tone phones are issues that have to be addressed. But I do not believe that the potential for substantially increasing voter turnout through the new voting system should be thrown away so quickly without exploring potential solutions to the problem of inaccessibility for certain voters.

Important issues

I am glad I took the opportunity to go to the "Meet the Candidates" meeting organized by Wendy MacPherson recently in Laggan.

I was shocked to learn that one candidate does not even live in North Glengarry, let alone Lochiel.

But since his wife owns a vacant lot here he is eligible to run for office. I was also surprised that with 30 years experience in municipal politics he could not (or would not) answer a simple question: If elected, would you vote yourself a raise?

Wendy MacPherson's answer was easy to understand – no. Maybe, it is time for a change.

Ready to listen

After reading Dave MacDonald's letter (Oct. 29), I felt that it was important to clarify the chain of events surrounding the Martintown Community Centre.

On May 26, a resolution was passed requesting that a consultant review the building and come back with a cost proposal for developing plans for the centre.

On July 14, Staff Report 94-03 was included in our agenda, proposing the issuance of a $38,100 consultant contract to proceed with the design and engineering of upgrades to the centre, including the removal of the back end of the building.

The same night, a delegation from the Martintown Goodtimers appeared before council, requesting input to any plans, especially to the removal of any parts of the building.

To avoid the embarrassment of voting on a resolution that had not involved this community, Mr. MacDonald pulled the resolution and it was not voted upon.

On August 6, 2003, a public meeting was held at the Martintown Community Centre, seeking input from the community.

On September 8, 2003, Mr. MacDonald directed that Staff Report 113-03 be proposed to obtain pricing for the rehabilitation or replacement of this centre. A spirited discussion took place and the resolution was defeated. I did not support this resolution because I was concerned that we were again embarking on an expensive study without adequate input from Council and the user groups. If we don't involve the community, how can we expect their financial and moral support?

As far as the Lancaster Centre is concerned, Mr. MacDonald quoted the original bill, but failed to include bills from the other consultants on the project and projected final bills still to come.

He also failed to say that the SuperBuild fund would be covering $320,000 of that project. He also neglected to say that without this project, the existing library requires $200,000 of unfunded work to remain viable. While these are important points, there is no question that the people at the public meeting made their wishes known and the project is dead.

I have also been criticized by Mr. MacDonald for agreeing to listen to a future delegation concerning the project. Contrary to my opponent, I will always listen to concerned ratepayers.

Lest we forget

This fall at Glengarry District High School our Grade 10 Canadian History class began the Lest We Forget Project. It is a study of local war heroes and is an excellent component to the classroom.

These students have chosen a name either from the local cenotaph, the school piano (a plaque on the piano contains the names of the students of the high school who died in WWI or WWII), or a relative, and are now conducting research on the military history of the person they have selected.

From this, and with the help of the National Archives of Canada, they will research and compile information for a display about these particular soldiers. The students have immersed themselves in this project. They have dedicated themselves to learning as much as possible about the wars and the hardships that the men and women had to endure."

Proud student Jamie McGillis said "I think this project is a good idea because Remembrance Day is coming up. It would be cool to know what actually happened in the war. It has given us respect for war veterans." With dedicated students like this it is hard not to feel an immense amount of pride and respect for the work they are doing. It is our hope that the community will also come on board and assist with photos, information, and personal accounts.

Our final displays will be open to the public. As well, we hope to update the community of our progress along the way. I cannot convey the feeling of pride and amazement I have for these students. From picking up garbage around the cenotaph to researching documents on the Internet, they are often speechless and very overwhelmed at what they are accomplishing with this project.

I hope that you will allow us to become part of the community and share the good things that these students are capable of.

Assembly line

I write to support the admirable, long and accurate statement in your issue of October 29 by Pamela Leonard, epitomizing the disadvantages and dangers to humans and the natural order in general - not to mention the effect on the aesthetic character and livability on a community of an intensive livestock operation of 3,000 hogs in its vicinity.

She is squarely on the mark. Like her, I commend the actions of Ms. Henderson and Mr. Kerr on behalf of their fellow citizens and their shared environment. Aside from a lively interest in the subject, I write from the experience of making five farms in 58 years in four counties: Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ontario. Coming from a farm family in Quebec, I have also had the privilege of breeding cattle, hogs and horses, and of tending a variety of other barnyard animals. It would be well, indeed, if we gave the greatest attention to Pamela Leonard's alert.

There is but one other matter that I would add. The sows on my first farm in the Virginia Piedmont had the freedom of the orchard, sentient creatures, the most intelligent of farm animals, they would convince you of this quickly if you ventured to pick up one of the piglets who followed them. There is nothing more protective than a nursing sow toward her own. Do you dub me sentimental? I prefer the word compassionate. Who would lock up 3,000 puppies in an enclosure where they never in their lifetimes saw the outdoors or sniffed the clover?

During my years at Cambridge in the 1950s, I often had the occasion to take the A1 to London. One of the most vivid and bucolic pictures I recall was the sight of a herd of pigs grazing on a lovely English hillside. Where would you prefer to see them? Have we misjudged the Industrial Revolution? Do we mistake animal husbandry for an assembly line of inanimate Ford cars?

Let's vote

Voters choice for Mayor: either mature, proven, elegant, solid leadership that is our present Mayor, or a younger, unproven, politically, big, jolly, fully-rounded ambitious guy.

Whether we vote by telephone or Internet, it is of great importance to take time to think, to vote, to exercise our right to vote.

We must remember that too many citizens of too many countries on this planet where dictatorships or military juntas exist as the form of so-called People's Government, they strangle their eligible voters by destroying and totally denying, taking away their "Right to Vote."

Historically it took the courage and outspokenness of great social activists to acquire the right to vote. Was it not only in the early 1940's that women got the vote? Here in Canada!

Here we are soon to vote in November's North Glengarry municipal election to get the "Government we deserve" as the old saying goes. Do we absolutely, very, very much need or want change?

Let's vote!

Ho-hum, election signs drive one batty!

Suzanne Blackburn / Alexandria

Our choice

As many of your readers are already aware, in August North Glengarry's mayor, deputy mayor, and councillors did nothing to prevent the construction of a barn for 3,000 pigs only 1.5 km. from Dalkeith. According to estimates by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, such a population of pigs would produce the same amount of excreta as 10,000 humans. Thus, accommodating these ones will be like building a town three times the size of Alexandria next to Dalkeith while ignoring standard sewage treatment precautions.

No responsible municipal administration on this continent would allow a similiar-sized town to keep its raw effluent in a tank, to be dumped twice a year on the surrounding landscape; it's little improvement on what was done during the Middle Ages. Even the owner of a single-family rural dwelling is obliged to go to an agonizing amount of trouble and expense to ensure that its waste disposal system will be safe for both its occupants and neighbours.

"Oh," you say, "but this is farming, so it's okay". It might be farming but certainly not in the traditional sense, and the argument could be made that, since it's using mass production methods it should be recognized as industry and dealt with accordingly. In any case, manure – or whatever you want to call it – is manure regardless the source, and storing it then spreading it in large quantities, in its raw state, laced with antibiotics, close to human habitation and its water supply, is asking for trouble, no matter how well cloaked the procedure is in jargon like "Nutrient Management". This has already been amply demonstrated in Manitoba, Western Ontario, Quebec, and North Carolina.

Our municipal representatives claimed they had no choice but go along with the pig barn, that they were "just following the rules". They had a choice. They could have shown courage and leadership by declining to put the interests of the multinational pork industry before the health and quality of life of their constituents. At the very least, they could have followed the advice of the Medical Officer of Health for Eastern Ontario to delay construction until a thorough study was done of possible health hazards. They could have paid attention to the petition given them by more than 150 residents of the Dalkeith area requesting an environmental assessment.

They chose not to. And you can rest assured, given the chance, they would do the same again anywhere in the township.

In November when we vote we're the ones with choice. We can use it to deny them that chance.

Gavin Scott / Dalkeith

Act now

Since early spring, the Concerned Citizens of North Glengarry have lobbied our municipal council asking that they slow their fast-paced approval process for intensive hog operation permits. We asked that before granting building permits for industrial operations they consider the rights of neighbouring farms, businesses and homes and to consider the negative impact industrial hog operations would have on the economic growth of North Glengarry. Council and hog factory advocates, regrettably, have perceived our efforts as attacks on farming. As of September 30, our provincial government, through Clause 61 of the Nutrient Management Act removed the pre-existing right for municipalities to govern their own destiny concerning industrial-sized farming operations and by doing so, gave rights to industrial hog operators superseding those of their neighbours.

"Rural Ontario: Industrial Hog Barns, Industrial Waste" an article by the Canadian Environmental Law Association intervenor (http://www.cela.ca/Intervenor/25_1/25_1pigs/htm) states, "legislative changes intended to assist farmers have benefited these industrial facilities while leaving small scale farmers and other rural residents with no tools with which to combat the significant environmental risk to their communities.

For a number of years, this tactic has worked, despite the fact that more and more genuine farmers have joined the chorus demanding regulation." Prior to the provincial election, the Water Source Protection Act (WSPA), although still in its infancy, was being worked on at the provincial level and when finalized will provide tough provincial water source protection regulations and include a framework for individual farm water protection plans. This act will have all the 'teeth'. Furthermore, the currently incomplete Nutrient Management Act (NMA) will be modified to harmonize with the Water Source Protection Act and 'together' they will provide more comprehensive and powerful environmental protection.

It is highly probable, therefore, that some existing industrial hog operations would not have been granted permits if they had to qualify under the WSPA and the revised and completed version of the NMA. In November 1998 the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs put out a "Community Relations in the Rural Area" tact sheet. The document refers to the "Farming and Food Production Protection Act" and states, "This so-called 'right-to-farm legislation' attempts to ensure that farmers are generally free to conduct normal farm practices, to the extent that it is reasonable to do so, even though they may cause or create a disturbance to nearby residents. It is conditional upon balancing the needs of the farm community with provincial health, safety, and environmental concerns."

Our council has totally neglected the health, safety, and environmental concerns of nearby residents of a 3000 hog operation in Dalkeith. Several weeks ago, our MPP, Jean Marc Lalonde issued a letter to all the mayors in Glengarry Prescott Russell stating that he "believed it was appropriate for the municipalities to pass a resolution with the following specifications and also to delay any approval for construction permits on mega hog farms:

- until OMAF or any other reliable source completes serious scientific-studies on their potential long-term impact;
- requiring that the applicants have an environmental study done by a MOE or Environment Canada recognized firm who specializes on the impact on aquifer."

As a result of this letter, East Hawkesbury has already passed a resolution as advised by Mr. Lalonde. Yet, our mayor and councillors will not support such a resolution. They think they know better than Mr. Lalonde, the Canadian Medical Association, the Environmental Law Association, and over 70 hogwatch groups in Canada who have actually researched the subject. They still deny there are any problems and are relying totally on a yet unproven and incomplete Nutrient Management Act.

We are all at risk if more intensive hog operations are allowed in North Glengarry, and there are more planned. There are no guarantees for safe drinking water, clean air, that our quality of life won't be affected or that our property values won't nose-dive.

Act now.

North Glen recreation association proposing new skateboard parks

By Todd Anderson
News staff

The North Glengarry Municipal Recreation Association (MRA) has developed a plan which could see the arrival of several skateboard parks in the township.

At a meeting held on Oct. 29 in the Glengarry Sports Palace board room, MRA representatives discussed options for funding those parks.

NG Recreation Director Bob Bowles illustrated what guidelines have been set after a vote from representatives.

"Communities will raise one-third of the project costs and then bring that to the MRA. The MRA will deal with it from there."

Municipal Recreation Association president Bob Linney said the MRA would contribute another one-third of the costs and then ask council for a special one-time fund for the other one-third.

Mr. Bowles said that the more a community contributes to the construction and upkeep of a skateboard park, the more likely it is that the park will be a viable facility.

"(If a park were to cost $30,000), we (the recreation department) would pay the $30,000 and the park is used for a year and then no longer used because they're tired of it. By getting commitment from the communities, it puts more responsibility in the projects to them."

Mr. Linney said the one-third of the project costs doesn't have to be strictly monetary.

"It could be done in work as well. We're saying one-third of the costs in goods, services or cash."

Also during the meeting the MRA outlined what it thinks is a good template for building parks.

The template includes a minimum of two rails, two ramps and one jump box. The park would have a surface of 100 feet by 100 feet paved. All equipment must be CSA approved and the parks themselves should be supervisable, not tucked away somewhere.

Mr. Linney said council asked the MRA to come up with a plan for building parks.

"It all started when a group of skateboarders in Alexandria approached council about building a park. Council gave it to the MRA. We've come up with a template after viewing five different installations. Now we want to go back to council with the template."

Mr. Linney added the MRA talked to organizers of parks in Lancaster and Martintown while formulating its template.

Mr. Linney said the template will be outlined at the next council meeting.

Four communities in North Glengarry have expressed interest in bringing a skateboard park to their area. They are Apple Hill, Maxville, Alexandria and Glen Robertson. In fact, Apple Hill has already started its efforts to secure a park.

Mr. Bowles added that since there seems to be a demand for several parks, projects will be started on a first come, first serve basis.

"We'll do what we can with what we have."

Mr. Linney hopes the new plan will finally help in bringing parks to North Glengarry.

"We're going to present this to council to meet the growing demand. I am optimistic this will go through. It would certainly solve everything except for the debate over location. That's especially an issue in Alexandria but the rec communitee is working with the skaters to find out what's best."

Indoor soccer decision expected by December

By Todd Anderson
News staff

Organizers of a proposed indoor soccer facility in Alexandria are expecting to find out in early December if they'll receive financial aid from a charitable organization.

According to North Glengarry Recreation Director Bob Bowles and NG Municipal Recreation Association (MRA) president Bob Linney, a response from the Trillium Fund committee should come in the first week of December.

"I haven't heard anything yet," said Mr. Bowles. "I guess we'll have to wait and see."

Mr. Linney said an application for $75,000 has been sent to Trillium.

For their part the MRA has announced they will supply the project with $15,000 capital in each of the next two years if the application is approved.

"If it is approved, work will start right away," said Mr. Linney.

"The project will get the $15,000 from the MRA capital budget of 2004 and whatever has not been allocated to other projects in 2003."

According to Mr. Linney the goal is to have the facility ready by the end of the summer in 2004.

Mr. Linney said the 10 MRA representatives plus council members George Currier and Gary Shepherd will meet in December to see what other recreation projects need to be completed for 2003. Some

War medal to be dedicated in Williamstown

By Sue Harrington
News Correspondent

A medal is coming home to Williamstown this Sunday at a special Remembrance Day service held at St. Andrew's United Church.

After more than 85 years, The British War Medal, awarded to Lt. Walter Govan, who died of wounds suffered in World War I, will be dedicated on Sunday.

Lt. Govan's connection to St. Andrew's Church is stronger than most. His father was the Rev. Arpad Govan, who served as minister of the congregation for more than 42 years, until his death in 1930. Rev. Govan was extremely well respected by the members of his flock, according to The Kirk in Glengarry, guiding them through the controversial church union in 1925.

So how is it that the medal has found its way to Williamstown after all these years? It's an interesting tale, and one that began several years back when Michel Gravel and his wife Diane (nee Aubin, of Martintown), rented the hired man's house located on the Bethune-Thompson property.

Mr. Gravel, who is one of the men responsible for the medal's return, liked to spend time in the picturesque St. Andrew's Church graveyard. He says he has always liked to linger in cemeteries because they often contain a large compendium of stories that have never been investigated.

It was during one of Mr. Gravel's walks in St. Andrew's churchyard in 1995 that he noticed the Govan family gravestone located to the left of the front entrance. Mr. Gravel also noticed something else which stayed with him: Lt. Govan, like several other war-time victims, was not buried in Williamstown, but in far-off France.

Mr. Gravel, an amateur historian who has subsequently moved to Cornwall, got interested in military history in a big way while doing research on a family member who had also served during the Great War. Like most people today, he turned to the Internet for information. It was there, on the site of a military collector and dealer in Kingston, that he noticed a medal being offered for sale. The medal was inscribed to Lt. W. Govan of the 21st Battalion.

"I was understandably excited to have found one of the service medals awarded to my Lt. Govan, whose path I had crossed seven years prior," says Mr. Gravel.

MEDAL FOUND: Michel Gravel stands next to the Govan tombstone in St. Andrew's Church cemetery in Williamstown. Mr. Gravel will be speaking at St. Andrew's on Sunday about finding a medal belonging to Lt. Walter Govan, who was killed in World War I. SUE HARRINGTON PHOTO

The silver medal is the British War Medal, awarded to British Empire soldiers who served overseas during the Great War. Although these medals were widely issued, Mr. Gravel said they are in short supply today, as many were melted down when the price of silver rose. Lt. Govan's other medal, the Victory Medal, is still missing.

When he discovered the medal, Mr. Gravel contacted Ron Kubelka, whose son Adam, is married to Mr. Gravel's wife's sister, the former Shannon Aubin. Mr. Kubelka is a member of St. Andrew's Church.

He immediately, and generously offered to acquire the medal and donate it to his congregation, said Mr. Gravel.

Members of the Govan family expressed surprise when told of the medal's reappearance. Dr. Walter Waddell of Perth, who is a nephew of the late Lt. Govan and was named after him, said he had a nice photo of the soldier, but did not know much about him.

Dr. Waddell's twin sister, Joan Beavis, however, remembers hearing her mother (Jean Govan) talking about her brother, the only boy in the family to survive to adulthood.

"My mother and her two sisters just adored him," she said. "He was supposed to have been a bit of a tease."

Mrs. Beavis also said that she remembers seeing a letter which was written by the nurse who tended him following his being wounded by shrapnel at Hill 70 in Aug. 1917.

"She wrote to my grandparents saying she was sure he would be fine ... but then something went wrong and he had to have another operation.

"The sad thing is, he was already dead when my grandparents received her letter.

"There was also a lovely letter sent to Rev. and Mrs. Govan by their son's commanding officer, commending him as being a fine and unusual young man."

When Mr. Gravel, who has been making a name for himself through his military history research, especially at Cagnicourt, France, heard that the medal was to be dedicated at the Remembrance Day service, he decided to do some sleuthing into Lt. Govan's military contributions He discovered Lt. Govan, who had enlisted on Nov. 17, 1915, arrived at the front in June of 1917, and was posted to ''C'' company, 21st Canadian infantry. The soldier's family believes that he did not have time to aspire to higher education, but enlisted as a private and rose through the ranks.

If he had attended university, it likely would have been Queen's, said Dr. Waddell. (Rev. Arpad Govan had been a gold medallist from Queen's.)

On Aug. 15, the 21st Battalion's assigned objective was the capture of two sets of German trenches in the rubble of the suburbs of Lens Hill, just south of 70. Although the 21st was not a Highland Battalion, it 'went over the top' at 4h25 to the sound of its pipe band, reports Mr. Gravel.

The Battle of Hill 70 is one of the least known of all WWI battles, but it was uniquely Canadians versus Germans. Despite heavy casualties, the Canadians were able to hang on, and Hill 70 became known as a turning point in the development of the Canadian fighting force on the Western Front.

Out of four officers, Lt. Govan was the only one left to lead the men, before he himself was dangerously wounded on Aug. 17. He died on Aug. 28.

Lt. Govan's medal will be on permanent display at St. Andrew's Church. In addition to the medal, the church has received copies of Rev. Govan's correspondence with the Department of Defence after his son's death. The papers will be kept in the church archives.

Mr. Bowles said that according to township records, the recreation department has spent $20,800 of its $50,000 budget as of Oct. 27.

$15,000 has been allocated to the indoor soccer facility project leaving about $15,000 to be spent on other projects and outstanding invoices.

"If the Trillium Fund application is not accepted, that December meeting will decide where the money will be re-allocated," said Mr. Bowles.

The 12 member group will vote on where the money would be re-allocated.

Quilt of Belonging funds allow 2 new employees

By Steven Warburton
News Editor

Stormont-Dundas-Charlottenburgh MP Bob Kilger was in Williamstown last Monday to present a cheque for $192,809 to Invitation, the Quilt of Belonging, on behalf of the Ministry of Human Resources Development.

These funds have allowed the Quilt to hire six people to help realize its final goal of creating a collaborative work of art that "symbolizes Canada's multicultural family."

Esther Bryan, project coordinator for the Quilt, says that when the project began in April, it only had four employees. But as the project's needs grew, Mrs. Bryan says it became apparent that two more employees were needed. They applied for the extra funding and they received it.

According to a Human Resources Development Canada media release, the six employees will work as website developers, communications specialists, marketing officers, and publication coordinators.

The new employees are all employment insurance recipients.

The goal is to provide them with work experience to develop their potential for future employment.

Williamstown residents prepare for election

WILLIAMSTOWN
SUE HARRINGTON
347-2279
sharring@
glen-net.ca

Well, they're off! By the time you read this, some people will already have voted in the municipal election, which kicks off today and goes until Monday. Remember, you can vote either by telephone, or by Internet, 24 hours a day, until 8 p.m. on Monday.

A reminder, too, that the Williamstown Library will be open from 10-6 p.m. on Monday, for your convenience in voting. (You may also do library business, as well.)

At the conclusion of the election, the Char-Lan Recreation Centre will be open, as in elections past, for the announcement of the results. Everyone is invited to come out as soon as possible after 8 p.m. to see who won. With the new voting method, it is expected all results will be known by 8:15 p.m.

Invitation

If you think the new method of reporting results will seem a bit of a let-down, you are all invited to head over to St. Mary's Centre for the bit of socializing that used to accompany elections. Garry O'Connell sent in this invitation on behalf of the Centre:

"Some people have expressed concern that with this modern method of voting, some of the customs and traditions of past elections may be lost.

St. Mary's Centre is offering an opportunity to capture some of that nostalgia.

When the results of the campaign are released shortly after 8 p.m. on Nov. 10, the Centre will be open with blackboard and chalk ready. There will be a chance for all the pundits to boast, or eat crow, depending on the results.

Also the winners who were elected and the other winners who gave it such a good try will have the opportunity to wish each other well until the next round.

Together we can raise a toast to the fact that we in South Glengarry live in such a wonderful democratic community."

Phantom Ringer

I found out the secret of the phantom bell ringer of St. Mary's in front of the green beans bin in a Cornwall supermarket on Friday.

One of the bell ringers of St. Mary's – there are, in fact, four – 'fessed up to her rope pulling activity, but swore me to secrecy.

Apparently to reveal the name of any one of the Secret Society of Ringers would be embarrassing beyond belief to these stalwart souls.

And since I love to hear the bells ringing, I think I'll keep my lips zipped.

Like most round-the-clock operations, St. Mary's ringers work shifts. Not exactly on the scale of a Kraft plant worker, but more of the "whoever's around, does it," model.

The bell rope is tugged by both males and females, perhaps accounting for the variation in peals.

"Doesn't it hurt?' I asked my source, thinking of aching upper arm muscles.

She admitted it did, a little, on the hands.

Worse than the physical hurt, however, appears to be humility suffered when getting the Angelus not quite as it should be.

"After all," she said, "It's not as though it's something you can practise."

I guess not! Can't you just imagine it – bell-pulling practice night in Williamstown? 'Snuff to make the cats all leave town, not to mention what it would do to that choir of sled-dogs!

Computer lessons

This next item may seem inappropriately timed, however, given the apparent election method path of the future, there may be those among you who would now like to learn how to use a computer and the Internet, or learn the basics of designing your own web-site.

Free computer lessons will be offered at the Williamstown Library on Saturday, Nov. 15, from 10-noon, by Jennifer Atkinson, who has been hired under the Community Access Program (CAP).

In fact, if demand warrants, Jennifer will be in Williamstown one Saturday per month to share her skills with you.

Please book your free lesson by calling the Williamstown Library (347-3397) during opening hours: Tues. 2-9 p.m.; Wed. 10 a.m.- 2 p.m.; Thurs. 6-9 p.m. and Sat. 10 a.m.-noon.

Old mills

Members of the Sir John Johnson Manor House Committee are looking for photos of the old mills that used to exist on the Raisin in Williamstown.

One was located near Albert Lefebvre's new garage, and the other was directly across the river on the Manor House property.

Parks Canada and the committee are working together to create an interpretive site overlooking the spot where the mills stood and where the old road used to run. (That is the reason for those little wooden markers on the Manor House lawn.)

The hope is that by offering a tour of the grounds that is interesting and informative, more tourists will come our way.

If you have any photos of the mills which you would allow the committee to copy, please call Mac Edwards at 347-3675. All photos will be returned to you promptly.

Happy birthday

Usually when we think #99, we think of Wayne Gretsky. But not today.

Today we are thinking of our very own Emily MacDonald, as she celebrates her 99th birthday.

Happy Birthday, Emily, from all your friends and admirers in Williamstown. And there are many!

New baby

Usually when we think of the number nine, we think of a baseball team.

But not any more. Now when we think of nine, we think of the Krol family.

Yes, baby Gregory was born on Nov. 1 to Heidi and Michael Krol, making it "six of them; three of those," as Daddy so eloquently put it.

Gregory is off to a good start in life, weighing nine pounds, 13 ounces, measuring a long 22 and a half inches, and arriving home when he was only a couple of hours old.

The new baby is a brother for Sarah, Matthew, Elizabeth, Peter, Maria, Christopher, Daniel, and Timothy.

Congratulations to you all!

Candy for the kiddies

It's true. The early bird does get the worm, or in this case the Halloween candy. (Same thing, he he).

Don't know when I've seen so many kids out trick or treating here in town.

They were tumbling out of vans like circus performers from clown cars. Neverending, or so it seemed.

Here at Harrington Hall, the lights snapped off at 7:15 – all out of the sweet stuff, despite a three figure order.

The head goblin hung a sign: Sorry. All gone. Tout finis. Kaput. Cleaned out. See you next year.

The big numbers were the result of a combination of fantastic weather and it being a Friday night. Costumes, probably because of the weather, were wonderful this year – innovative, creative, crazy and, in some cases, creepy.

Hope everyone (and his dog, especially the one dressed up in the cow costume), had a good time!

Eggy

One downer to Halloween in Williamstown was the egging of a local property.

Two dozen eggs were hurled at the Paradis' house and vehicles, where hours earlier the occupants had gone out of their way to make Halloween extra special for the little ones.

This is not fair.

Al and Diane say they have had enough. After spending time and money to create their display, they are very discouraged by the actions of a few who spoil things for everyone else.

On a positive note, however, four young lads – who were not the culprits in question – felt badly enough about the egging by their peers to come forward on Saturday and help the Paradis to clean up.

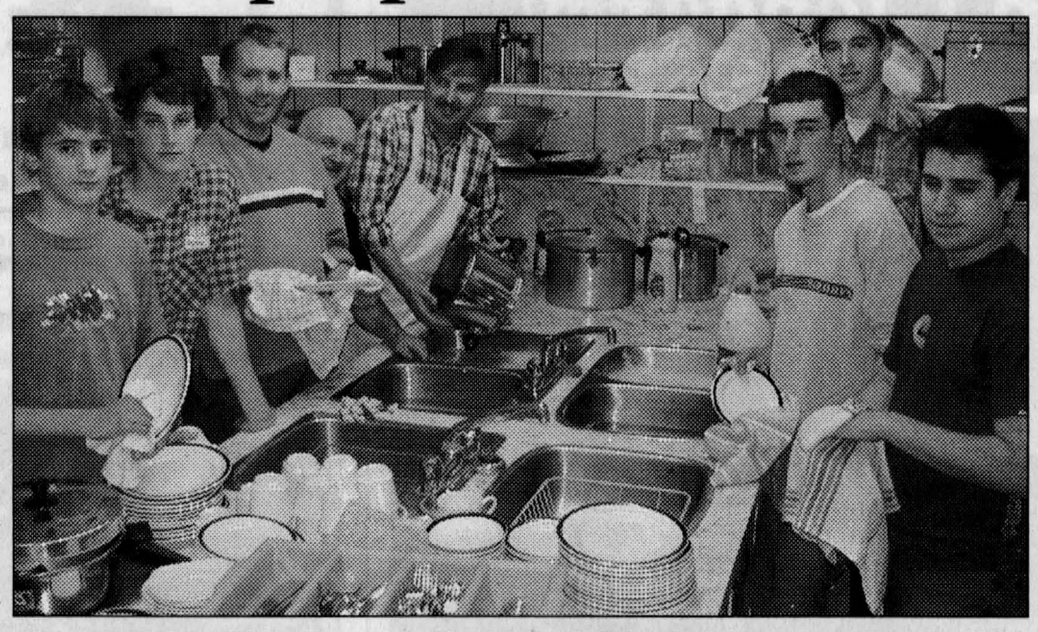
Glengarry Historical Society

The Glengarry Historical Society will hold its next meeting tomorrow evening (Thursday) at the Nor'Westers and Loyalist Museum in Williamstown, beginning at 8 p.m.

Dr. Kathleen Toomey will be in town to speak about "Long Sandy and The Great Lady," aka Bishop Alexander Macdonell and Mary Macdonell Fraser. The latter was the grandmother of Simon Fraser, the explorer.

Dr. Toomey wrote her MA thesis on "Big Sandy – The Scottish Years" and her PhD on the Catholic clergy who emigrated with their people between 1773 and 1815, especially to Glengarry.

Those of you who are interested in history, especially of the local kind, and/or those of you who are just interested in a different kind of a night out, are invited to attend.



DISHING IT OUT: Williamstown's St. Andrew's United Church held a turkey dinner in the Irvine Hall Saturday night. A group of men helped clean up the dishes after the meal. Pictured on the left side of the table from front to back are: Daniel Bougie, Andrew Cattanach, Robert Moncrieff, Stanley Swerdfeger and Pat Larkin. Turkey supper

A steady crowd filed into the turkey supper held at St. Andrew's United on Saturday night. I heard the figure "450" mentioned, but don't know if that is an official result verified by our resident accountant, or not.

Anyway, the mood was good, the thanks profuse, and the helpers plenty.

Even South Glengarry Mayor Dave MacDonald was a United Churcher for the night, pouring coffee for several hours.

The mayor has apparently had some practice at this skilled art – rumours have it he was a Presbyterian coffee-pourer a couple of weeks ago!

Carol Edwards, guardian of the pies, did her best to identify the many different kinds so that the serving wenches could fill the orders from the customers at their tables.

And when one server asked for "bumbleberry," the creative Mrs. Edwards proved she didn't earn her role through experience alone.

"No, we don't have any bumbleberry, but we could make one," I heard her say.

"There's a raspberry, and there's a blueberry, and there's a…."

She was joking, of course, but the thought of such a covert operation – scooping out the innards of a couple of pieces of pie, mixing them together and stuffing them back into their shells, had me giggling for the rest of the night.

Ah, church suppers. Long may they remain!

Reunion meeting

The first organizational meeting for the Char-Lan High School reunion is being held on Wed. Nov. 12 at 6:30 p.m. in the Char-Lan library.

The reunion is being held on the Victoria Day weekend, May 21-22.

Everyone is welcome to help with the reunion, whether a Char-Lan grad or not.

Those of you wishing to get integrated into the community may be interested in this opportunity.

St. Mary's sale

A reminder that St. Mary's Tea, Bake and Craft sale is being held from 2-4 p.m. this Saturday, Nov. 8 in the small hall (attached to St. Mary's Church).

Get some friends together and come out and enjoy this annual event that unofficially launches Christmas do's in Williamstown.

Bridge results

The results from the Williamstown Bridge Club for Wednesday, Oct. 29, are: N/S –1. Jean Campbell and Isobel Quail, 2. Audrey Blair and Joyce Madden , 3. Jim Campbell and Elizabeth Marjerrison.

E /W – 1. John Roulston and Jacquie Thibert, 2: Gerrie Tibbals and Ron Allison tied with Hanz Schulz and Garry O'Connell.

Remembrance Day

Remembrance Day services will be held this Sunday, Nov. 9 at the cenotaph in Williamstown at 11 a.m.

You are all urged to attend.

Also, Michel Gravel will be speaking this Sunday at St. Andrew's United Church, at 9:30 a.m. about some historical research he has done into some lesser known battles during WWI, involving local men. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Firefighters serve treats on Halloween

LANCASTER
MARG MILLETT

FAX 347-1297

"Halloween is a wonderful time to see a witch or fairy. I know it's only make believe, but just the same, it's scary! "

This little ditty, that I taught my grade one classes many years ago, often comes to mind at Halloween. Indeed the little witches, fairies, princesses, unicorns, Harry Potters, and more scary creatures, roamed the streets of our community on Friday evening. The weather was kind on this spooky night and many of the 'trick or treaters' visited our Fire Station, at one point in their travels, for a hot dog, drink and a bag of treats. I was told that at least six hundred hot dogs were given out by the time the evening was done. Actually, Barry and I dropped by the fire hall on the way home from Redwood and probably had the last two 'dogs'. They were good! This has been a long time tradition for the Lancaster Volunteer Fire Department and is just one of the many events that they hold in our community.

The Lancaster Fire Department is very grateful to their sponsors for this Halloween Party. Thank you Schneider's, Giant Tiger and Weston's Bread for their generosity.

Churches say goodbye

On Sunday, Oct. 26 the morning service was a goodbye to Rev. Gary Stokes.

There wasn't a dry eye in the church as a hundred friends and parishioners gathered at Knox United in Lancaster to bid a sad goodbye to Rev. Gary Stokes and his wife, Shirley. They gave many thanks to the couple for five years of a very active ministry.

During his response Gary admitted that when he came to the triple charge of Salems' Church in Summerstown, Knox in Lancaster, and St. Andrew's in Bainsville "I thought I'd just coast through gracefully to retirement! But he soon got involved. Two congregations were merged into one, and Gary and Shirley were lured into the musical life of the community, which will continue to be an important activity for the Stokes.

In farewell, Gary sang a version of the popular Bob Dylan refrain, "The Times, They Are a' Changing. " Organist Joe Hehir sang the lyrics that he wrote himself to an old hymn, as a tribute to Gary. Robert Halfyard sang a solo. Mackie Robertson, Lois Shaver, and Elizabeth Legge said 'goodbyes' on behalf of the congregations and the choir.

A time of fellowship with more good wishes for the Stokes followed the morning service as everyone enjoyed a delicious luncheon.

Lay preacher for Nov. 9, 16, 23 and 30 at St. Andrew's/Knox and Salem United churches in Bainsville, Lancaster and Summerstown is Barbara Rediker.

Lois Gaudet will lead services for Dec. 7, 14, 21 and Christmas Eve.

Community Projects

Too much rain, yes! But this fall has been colourful and I'm not necessarily referring to the beautiful foliage that greets our eyes each day. This is the time of harvest suppers and fall craft shows. This very weekend, on Nov. 8, Chateau Gardens will hold their Christmas Craft and Bake Sale from 9-1 p.m. Park at the rear for easy access to the activity room. Lovely crafts, the best of baked goods and light refreshments await. Everyone is invited!

On to St. Andrews

For the next event the theme is "Catch the Spirit " and that can certainly 'catch' your imagination. On Saturday, Nov. 15 St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of South Lancaster will hold its annual Christmas Luncheon and Bake Sale. Lunch for only $5 will be served from 11:30-1:30. While there, many crafts and baked goods can be yours at a reasonable price. As for the theme, and the decorations that are planned: I'll leave that to your imagination, or better still, come and find out, and enjoy a warm friendly group for lunch.

Lan-Char Seniors Centre

Not too late and certainly in time for the Christmas season, is the next Bake and Craft Sale. It will be at the Lan-Char Seniors' Centre, on Saturday, Nov. 29. Come from 10-3 p.m. More news on that later.

Mexico Mission

Susan David, a North Lancaster mom, helped her son fundraise and also accompanied a group of local teens this summer on mission work in Mexico. Susan described the trip to the congregations last Sunday, Nov. 2, at Salem Church in Summerstown and St. Andrew's United Church in Bainsville.

Ms. David thanked the congregations for their contributions for the Mexican trip. She described how this mission changed "every one of us who had the good fortune to go. "

The depth of poverty in many Mexican towns moved "many of our teenagers to tears," Susan told everyone.

The group originally joined with a larger group in Texas. There, they were coached in a play for presentation in Mexico. Often, after the play ended, many Mexican people from the audiences came up and discussed their lives and hopes. "Our message was that God loves us all if we will let Him," Susan said.

News from St. Andrew's

On Sunday morning the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in South Lancaster welcomed into the church, by the Sacrament of Holy Baptism, Hannah Catherine Suddard, infant daughter of John and Kelly Suddard. Hannah was surrounded by a large number of family and friends who came to bear witness to this significant occasion in her life. Following the service a family luncheon was held at the home of Doug and Keitha Fraser.

Sunday morning was also a special day for the children of St. Andrew's Sunday School. Instead of the regular morning lesson, the children were treated to a 'Craft Event'. Over 30 children enjoyed making three different Christian crafts that had been organized by Jane MacMillan. Next Sunday, Nov. 9, the congregation of St. Andrew's will welcome the Beaver, Cub and Scout Troup at their annual church parade and Remembrance Day church service. Don't forget St. Andrew's annual Christmas Luncheon and Bake Sale on Nov. 15 (see above.)

Outdoor Club Activities

If your family is interested in any of these activities, please call Rose Marie at 347-3677. This club, with members from all over our area, seems to me to have a nice sense of adventure and allows for all ages, different levels of physical activity and includes many interests. Don't be shy if you would like to participate in one or many events. As you can see it's not all outdoors. On Friday, Nov. 7 enjoy a Moonlight Hike at the Bird Sanctuary. On Sunday, Nov. 9 Hike a Mountain in the Adirondacks. On Sat. Nov. 15 Go to Imax and then go shopping in Ottawa. Tues. Nov. 18 is Movie Night. On Friday, Nov. 21 it's off to the Vagabond Theatre. On Sunday, Nov. 23 come and enjoy Indoor Rock Climbing in Ottawa. No couch potatoes here!

Harvest Supper

Getting back to our fall and the "warmth " of the activities that slide by in a kaleidoscopes sort of way. Barry and I went to the Harvest Supper at St. Andrew's United Church in Williamstown. A lively group of church members was serving and working in the kitchen as another lively group of people enjoyed a delicious meal amid happy chatter and greetings as others came and went. The numbers called by Jay Woolven reached the 500's so it sounds as though it was not only most enjoyable but a very successful event.

Later that evening we joined some friends and spent a lovely evening at the Annual Glen Walter Firemen's Dance. There was a huge crowd as we arrived. The music, by AM/FM., was fine for listening and dancing and there were lots of prizes throughout the evening. It was pretty obvious that there is a great support for the Glen Walter Fire Department and also that they organized this event very well.

During a break the Fire Chief asked the volunteer firemen to come up, with their spouses, and introduce themselves. This was a very nice touch, as was an added speaker who expressed his sincere thanks to those guys who helped him when his house was razed five years ago. It has been a difficult time for him but he now can talk about it and was happy to share his sincere and emotional thanks for their help.

The music was great and I had a hard time dragging myself away. Outside the air was still pretty warm, filled with the smell of crunchy leaves on the ground. The short drive home was particularly beautiful as lights dotted the bays and inlets and moonlight lit soft yellow rays on the dark water. Quite a nice place that is our home!

Last Story Time

Thursday, Nov. 6 is the final Preschool Story Time at the Lancaster Library. Come with your little readers at 10:30 a.m. for stories, songs and rhymes.

Computer Cat

Well, this is a better Monday than last. But, my Siamese cat, Mariah Ming is in my face lately. There is still a mouse in the house, a wee one, I might add. So Mariah stays up through the night doing the "catch the creature thing ". Unsuccessfully it seems.

Now, normally, on Mondays, Mariah is my computer cat. She sits up high on the console and follows the cursor with her blue eyes until she gets bored. Then it's a warm nap on the heat of the machine. This morning, exhausted from her night of hunting, she immediately fell into a deep sleep and shortly after slid down, down, and fell behind the computer. With a lusty meeoow and a haughty stalking walk, she took off for a nicer place.

Vote!

Well, this week is the time to vote. It's your right and privilege. There's lots of help out there, as you already know.

I like the attitude of Peg Ferguson of Lancaster. It hasn't been that long since she started using the Internet. "It's a wonderful way to keep in touch with my family in New Zealand," says Peg. She and Doug do browse around for information as well. Have a super week everyone!

We are lucky to live in disaster-free Glengarry

GLEN SANDFIELD
LORNA CHAPMAN
874-2408

We have all been stunned by the devastation we have seen on the evening news. Wild forest fires have beaten the west for weeks, in BC, in Seattle and now in California. Thousands of homes have been destroyed and people have been killed. Unheard of floods have washed away villages, homes and businesses. Two huge earthquakes have hit rural regions in China. The last two hurricanes did tremendous damage to people's lives and homes. It's certain that I needn't mention the terrible toll taken during a war. I have said it before and I'll say it again, we are fortunate indeed to be living here in Canada and especially Glengarry. Do you appreciate how well off we are? None of the terrors mentioned affect us directly.

Yes, some of our sons and husbands, fathers and brothers and sisters are fighting overseas, but we have a no natural disasters, no one is bombing our homes, we are favoured ones. We should be thanking God every day to be where we are and we should be ready to help those who are not as fortunate.

Sunday Services

Morning worship services are held each week at 10 a.m. in Glen Sandfield United Church and at 11:15 a.m. in East Hawkesbury United Church.

Relocated

The members of the Glen Sandfield congregation and area friends attended the Open House afternoon last Sunday, when Della MacDonald and her son Erwin welcomed everyone into their delightful new residence on Jacques Street in Alexandria.

Stories

The Glengarry Toastmasters held their fall Story Night at the Priest's Mill on Oct. 29. President Helena McCuaig welcomed the members, who then introduced their guests. She then introduced Toastmaster Barry MacDonald. The keynote speaker was Betty Healy who spoke on road signs and also read a chapter from her new book, *road*Signs. She had copies for sale and there was a book-signing afterward.

There were three speakers that evening. Helena McCuaig spoke on the Right of Way, Abel Ferriera spoke on Under Construction and Lorna Chapman spoke on the Hidden Intersection; all of which dealt with events that had made significant changes in their lives. The evaluators were Tess Senecal, Betty Healey and Mary MacDonald. Sandra McCuaig invited the guests to take part in the one minute impromptu Table Topics, and they did very well.

Noella Picard Claude, acting as Quiz Master, really had a great time stretching everyone's listening skills with her questions at the end of the meeting. The club meets every second and fourth Wednesday at 6 p.m., at the same venue. We have been told that the Glengarry Toastmasters have become known as the "Fun Club" on the Toastmasters circuit. You may just sit and listen if you wish to do so, why not come out and see for yourselves what the "fun" is all about?

Maxville Manor busy with services fair

MAXVILLE

GORDON WINTER
527-2888

Space was at a premium in the parking lot at Maxville Manor last Monday afternoon. Phyllis Burtenshaw-Lalonde, co-ordinator of Seniors' Outreach Services as well as of Volunteers, had organized a fair to publicize all the services offered by her department. At the same time, staff from the Eastern Ontario Health Unit had set up a clinic and 320 people, including children, received their flu shots. And this number did not include Manor staff members and volunteers assisting at the clinic.

This immunization is considered very important for all volunteers and Phyllis wishes to be notified by volunteers when they have received their inoculations. She has the list of them from the clinic.

That afternoon, Town Square held many tables with displays promoting the day program for those living at home, transportation, the Diners' Club, meals-on-wheels, health promotion with a blood pressure clinic and an information desk for prospective volunteers.

Later in the afternoon, an illusionist entertained the residents and later outsiders, including a number of children. The Old Tyme Fiddlers were there too, and afterwards, the members held their regular practice.

There was a free draw, too, compliments of the S.O.S. department and the winners of the three $10 gift certificates were Carol Newby, Moose Creek (Debbie's Country Corner), Peggy Brown (Maxville Home Hardware) and Gordon Winter (Muir's Bakery).

Now, there is something brand new planned. It is a voting clinic for seniors on Nov. 5, 6, 7, and 10 at the Manor from 10-noon and 1-3 p.m. Volunteers will be there to assist seniors in the voting procedure by telephone or by computer, if they prefer. All those coming for assistance are reminded to bring their letters with the two identification numbers and a family member or friend, if possible.

Waterloo ceremony

Elaine and Howard Pollock have been to Waterloo to attend the graduation of their son, Stuart, from that University. At the services, Stuart was granted the degree of Master in Computer Science.

This young man has two other degrees. Two years ago he received his B.A. in Oriental Studies and became fairly fluent in Chinese and Japanese. Before that, he had received a B.A. in Computer Science.

We congratulate Stuart and wish him well in his future endeavours.

Visitors

Bruce and Ellen McIntosh from Winnipeg were recent visitors with his parents, Ruth and Gordon, as well as with other family members in the area,

Home for a visit

Helen Hunter had her son, Ted, and Glenda home from Peterborough for a week and for another week, her daughter Margaret from Toronto.

On another occasion, Carleton Place residents, Pat and Doug Schouler, called on their long-time friend.

Farewell to Isabel

A well known and highly respected resident at the Manor died on Oct. 26 after a very short illness. She was 104 year-old Isabel Cameron who had retained her keen alertness until the very end.

With her death, the three century club at the Manor has come to an end. As well, there are now no links to the Baptist Church that was once here. Mrs. Cameron's father was Archibald Dewar and his family was a staunch Baptist one.

Our condolences go to Mrs. Cameron's one surviving child, Ruth Moffatt of Navan, and her family. The mother had lived to experience the deaths of three children, Marion Cumming, Roy and Edwin. Locally, her son-in-law, Donald Cumming and his wife, Christena, were regular visitors with her.

The funeral was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Campbell Cameron Laker, a long time friend from the U. S. A. He was assisted by the local Presbyterian student minister, Richard Cleaver.

Main Street

The Main St. business community is picking up. The windows of the empty facility at the corner of Catherine St. are now displaying some fine pieces of pine furniture that have been crafted by Gary Smith and Larry Harrison. They are for sale and have their prices clearly displayed. We wish these two gentlemen well in this new endeavour.

A sign at the Chieftain Restaurant annoucnes a grand opening on Nov. 15. As well, the restaurant is now open every day of the week over the noon hour and all day over the weekend. We wish Linda Maxwell success in her new business.

The former Highland Toyota establishment is going to be occupied by Ron Ouimet's Maxville Motors. This business has operated successfully for some years in a facility south of the village. We wish Ron well and remind readers that he is a son of Archie and Mary and that Archie is well remembered as a respected mechanic.

Coming events

Here are reminders of two events coming soon. The bazaar and lunch in the Anglican Church hall is this Saturday and the Remembrance Day parade and service is next Tuesday starting a short time before 11 a.m. with the parade lining up at the Curling Club.

Diners' Club

Margaret Fraser had all the tables filled with 48 at the Diners' Club meal last Thursday at the Manor and still had names on a waiting list. The menu listed some very gross sounding items which tasted much better than their names indicated.

This was the Halloween dinner so the menu was in keeping with the decorations and the black and orange colours of the clothing of some.

Two volunteers, Lena Michaud and Sylvia Tehro assisted Margaret with serving the meal.

For entertainment, there was a Halloween quiz and a pumpkin carving contest. Each table had a nice large pumpkin to empty and then to decorate with a carved face. The winning team consisted of Ann Stewart, Sally Andre, Theresa and Gregory Ryan along with Claire Besner who had joined them. The two volunteer waitresses served as judges.

Lorna Blair was awarded a Halloween sun catcher as the winner of the free draw.

Trick or treat

Last Friday evening there were many, many children out on Peter St. and calling at the doors for treats. By 6:45 p.m. we had 110 and our supply was gone. Our front lights were turned off, and while the doorbell rang a few times, no one was persistent.

The weather was ideal and Lorna sat on the verandah to hand out the bags of sweets. The children were polite and respectful. It does concern us somewhat that there are many children from other communities coming here and we do not have the opportunities of greeting some of the local children that come after our lights have to be turned off. However, I don't know the answer to that one unless it is a community party that we all participate in.

YouthUNLTD

YouthUNLTD has two events planned for November. On Nov. 8 there is to be a quiz game called Who Wants to be a Junk Food Fanatic? There will be teams of two or three members answering all different sorts of questions. There won't be prizes of money but there will be a whole bunch of goodies.

The fun starts at 7 and runs until 9.30 p.m. All those attending are asked to phone Phil to enter a team right away.

Then a trip is planned for Ocean City on Nov. 20-23. The group will be going to the ALIVE Middle School Mega-Conference. There will be 2,000 other middle-schoolers there for concerts, speakers and games on the beach.

The group will depart on Thursday at 5 p.m. and arrive back on Sunday at 8 p.m. The cost is $60 plus money for four fast food meals and spending money.

You are asked to phone Phil Benjamin right away if you would like more information or if you wish to go.

Bridge scores

At the Saturday afternoon bridge party at the Manor last week, resident Myrtle MacMillan topped the list followed by Ed Ukrainetz and Barbara Surtees.

Squirrel problem

I received advice to solve my squirrel problem. One lady told me about Squirrel Away at Canadian Tire. It is mixed with the bird feed, the squirrels don't eat it and the birds do. Others told me about spreading generously either vaseline or grease on the pole for about two feet and the squirrels won't climb the pole to get at the feeders.

We decided that we needed a longer pole so we got one at Dunvegan's Bird-on-a-Wire store and along with it came two long arms, a large baffle that wobbles and a base that is well anchored in the ground. As of now, I have no way of feeding the ground feeders but maybe the squirrels will not be around in the cold weather.

Since my last column, two more species have moved in for feed – a nuthatch and a junco. The latter one is considered a ground feeder but it is feeding at one of the hanging feeders.

The weather has been unseasonably mild and I saw a Monarch butterfly on Oct 31. I wonder what its chances of getting to Mexico are.

A week ago, a small flock of robins was still hanging around a Dunvegan residence. And a caller on Sunday told me about four swans way out on the water of the Mill Pond at Alexandria since Thursday. They are much larger that Canada geese, white and are most likely whistling swans. This is a first for these birds.

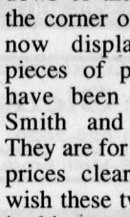
Lovely fall wedding unites Beauclair-Larocque



GLEN ROBERTSON

COLETTE SAUVÉ
874-2076

Last Saturday afternoon was the scene of a lovely fall wedding at St.Martin-of-Tours with summer-like weather. Sylvie Beauclair dressed in a lovely, fitted long white dress with a train and Luc Larocque dressed in a tuxedo exchanged wedding vows. Sylvie was marched down the aisle by her two children, Mathieu, who also wore a black tuxedo and Angèle, who had a replica of the maid of honour dress. Preceding Sylvie was Isabelle Larocque who was flower girl dressed in a long, white and dainty gown and who did her part perfectly well. Heather Beauclair, a friend of Sylvie dressed in a lovely burgundy gown, was maid of honour accompanied by André, Luc's brother, who served as best man. Father Gabriel Legault, a good friend of Luc, presided over the ceremony accompanied by Father Eric Robichaud. A delicious supper was served at the Bonnie Glen followed by a reception. Three-year-old Isabelle Larocque entertained the guests with a few songs at suppertime. The honeymooners flew out west for one week. We wish them much happiness and congratulations.

Bingo

Jackpot winner of last Sunday's bingo was Carmen Carrière while the mystery went to Gaetanne Piette and the bonanza was shared between Teresa Sabourin, Nathalie Jeaurond and Jean M.Chenier. $1000. Optimist draw went to Richard Sabourin of Alexandria with ticket no. 380 and vendor was Jean-Pierre Lavigne. Next bingo will be on Dec. 7 with a $700 jackpot.

Christmas sing

The annual Christmas sing will be held this year in St. Martin-of-Tours church in the Glen on Dec. 14 at 7:30p.m. The choirs from 10 small Protestant and Catholic churches of this part of Glengarry will sing old and new Christmas carols. Everyone joins in for the best loved songs in English and French. A choir from Laurier-Carrière will also sing this year. This will be followed by a light lunch and refreshments. Admission is free and the church has a huge sitting capacity; so, everyone is more than welcome. It's also a prelude to put your hearts in the happy spirit of Christmas.

Christmas bazaar and tea

Circle this date on your calendar where the annual Christmas bazaar and tea will be held on Nov. 29 at the parish hall. More details later.

Baptism

Father Eric Robichaud baptized Joshua Doré, son of André Doré and Réjeanne Vachon last Sunday afternoon. Congratulations to the parents and welcome Joshua.

Race against drugs

Grades 5 and 6 at Laurier-Carrière participated in "the race against drugs" in partnership with the Optimist clubs, OPP and the Health Bureau today at the Manège Militaire of Cornwall. We have to sensitize the young people to say no to all forms of drugs. Transportation of the bus was paid by the Optimist Clubs.

On Nov. 11, a special celebration on Remembrance Day will be held at the school for all those who contributed to peace in the world. A special prayer will be prayed that this peace lasts forever in Canada and spreads throughout the world.

Have a very nice week.

Some NG hopefuls up the ante at last all-candidates' meeting

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

After sticking to set speeches in two earlier All-Candidates Meetings (ACMs) in Maxville and Apple Hill, three of the four candidates for the two top positions in North Glengarry increased the stakes for the last meeting held in Alexandria Monday night.

Only mayoralty candidate Mike Depratto stayed with the same themes he had presented in meetings on Tuesday and Thursday night of the previous week. He did, however, put more emphasis on delivering elements of his speech in French as did deputy-mayor candidates William Hagen and Maryanne Kampouris.

The most notable switch in opening presentations came from Mayor Bill Franklin who took a new tack by emphasizing what he sees as the key differences between his and Mr. Depratto's campaign.

"Since the last two candidates' meetings, I have begun to wonder if my opponent and I aren't campaigning in two different municipalities," he told the audience of about 220 people. "The one he is campaigning in is pretty grim. It apparently has been badly neglected...has no businesses, no water, and no hope unless he (Mr. Depratto) can lobby for millions of dollars worth of funding..."

By comparison, Mr. Franklin said, his municipality has the largest industrial base in SDG, Canada's second- largest moulding plant and some of the best agriculture in Ontario.

"We have had water problems but they are being brought under control."

For his part, Mr. Depratto advocated a return to a proactive council, which promotes industrial growth and development.

"The chairman of a local bank told me ... councils need to get out to the business leaders," Mr. Depratto said. "Get out and sell the municipality, let them know how much we have to offer."

Using the recent $1.7 million Internet grant to South Dundas as an example, he said council needs to be more assertive in its lobbying efforts with the federal and provincial governments.

A 2002 Queen's jubilee medal winner for years of community service, Mr.Depratto said he became proficient at obtaining government grants through his work with volunteer organizations and his employment at the Glengarry Sports Palace.

In earlier meetings, Ms. Kampouris, a businesswoman and former president of the Maxville Chamber of Commerce, talked about the importance of teamwork at the council table, adding with the complexities facing the township today, study done outside chambers is essential.

Council members "have to do our own research," she said. "They have to bring independent thought and then discuss (the issues) at the table."

While vague about her work background in previous meetings, Ms. Kampouris brought her business savvy to the forefront in Alexandria.

"I have had over 30 years experience making projects happen from inside government and as a community representative," Ms. Kampouris said. "As a management consultant, I have worked on projects to bring hydroelectric power to the southern Africa region.

"I have designed community water and small cash crop farm projects in developing countries. I have managed or monitored projects that ranged from a couple of thousand dollars to several million dollars in size..."

While previously focusing in general terms on the connections he established as SDG warden, and as the chairperson of the Eastern Ontario Wardens Caucus, in Alexandria, Deputy-Mayor Hagen mentioned specific results coming from his strong committee work.

He referred to meetings at a spring conference with then-Environment Minister Chris Stockwell to make "sure he knew where North Glengarry was and what our concerns are."

The deputy-mayor said the results of this work laid a foundation for a verbal agreement for a new lagoon sewage system for Alexandria.

Taxation is a concern the deputy-mayor focussed on at each meeting.

Rates are too high, he argued, because of downloading, adding that the municipality can't go it alone to change the taxation system.

"To get support we have to get together as a larger group," Deputy-Mayor Hagen said. "We have to work with the federal and provincial government to rearrange our taxation agendas."

He said the federal government can't continue to download healthcare to the municipalities, and that road improvements need to come from the gas and tire taxes.

"We must all work together for that one tax dollar, because everything comes out of the same tax pocket."

Four key issues surface at North Glen meetings

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

As the hopefuls for North Glengarry's two top posts travelled from Maxville to Apple Hill to Alexandria, four issues followed them throughout the All Candidates Meetings.

Residents repeatedly brought up the issues of water, hog farms, increased visibility for agriculture, and high property assessment rates.

When Apple Hill resident Fred Leroux voiced the concern that 75 per cent of his town's wells are polluted, and wondered why there is a standstill on the issue, he received his most detailed answer from Mayor Bill Franklin.

"My understanding is we have spent a million dollars to this point," Mayor Franklin said. He added a well was drilled outside the town, "not a very fruitful well, but enough water there to bring a low pressure system into the village.

"The problem.. was the price tag three years ago was $3 million...an awful lot of money, when it is going to be paid for by the users.

The mayor said the township has pursued funding, "but the last government basically said they were going to let communities pay for themselves, and funding was very, very scarce.

The mayor said the issue is still a priority,and that the environmental assessment is completed. "We are ready to go the minute funding becomes available," he concluded.

Mayoral hopeful Mike Depratto seemed to distance himself from the three other speakers when it came to addressing those concerned with large hog farms.

Addressing a contingent from Dalkeith in Maxville, Mr. Depratto said, "I'm not quite in agreement with our Mayor Bill.

"He is guaranteeing there will be no problem, because all kinds of studies have been done. Thirty -five years ago ...people put septic systems in Maxville and now all the wells are polluted.... maybe we have to be very careful with these new types of agriculture...I'm personally not guaranteed it is 100 per cent safe.

"We can't make it more restrictive at this time... (but) there is a new (provincial) government with promises of studying this. Right now we have to put our faith in the government that they will come through with what they promised."

Dalkeith resident Frances Fraser revisited the subject in Alexandria and was more impressed with the approaches of Mr. Depratto and Ms. Kampouris. "They at least leaned slightly towards being able to listen and explore the subject."

Ms. Kampouris also impressed Alexandria-area farmer Robert Massie when he questioned candidates on their willingness to have a council committee on agriculture.

In an interview after the Alexandria meeting, he said agriculture isn't the way it used to be.

"People don't understand how far it is changing," Mr. Massie said. "They are concerned with sizes of farms, but technology today allows us to do a better job than in the past. Maryanne Kampouris showed some interest, seemed enthusiastic about a separate committee to educate people about farming. People are scared about changes, and this might be a way to unite people."

Deputy-Mayor William Hagen had the most to say about taxation issues, drawing on his stint at the the counties, including serving as Eastern Ontario Warden's Caucus chairperson.

When Apple Hill resident Rudolf Mertl expressed concerns about the Municipal Property Assessment Corporation and how his assessment jumped by 30 to 40 per cent, Mr. Hagen explained the reason for the fluctuations.

"Some properties were assessed five years ago, some two years ago, some 10 years ago," Mr. Hagen said. "The time will come where MPAC will assess on a yearly basis, or at least every two years, so there will be no huge fluctuations from year to year."

Still, Dalkeith resident Louis Loczy, who experienced a similar assessment hike, said he hopes for more from council.

"I'd like to see them lobby the provincial government, through MPP Jean-Marc Lalonde," Mr. Loczy said, "to review the priorities of the organization. So they make a more equitable or fair solution."

JULIE AKKERMANS
KENYON COUNCILLOR
I think we need to continue on the present path we are following. We need to forge ahead with improvements to Alexandria's water and sewage systems. We need to continue to upgrade roads from gravel to hard surface. We must consider hiring an Economic Development Officer to nurture existing business and seek out new. One who will work with the Counties Economic Development Officer and Council to guide and direct future growth and expansion.
We need to follow and maintain our current Official Plan to ensure only suitable development occurs. We need to continue to ensure our agricultural land base is protected from non-agricultural uses to minimize conflicts. We need to educate and inform the residents on the standards and practices that our farmers adhere to.
We need to encourage and promote diversity in our recreation programs to attract and involve our youth so they remain active and participatory in our community. We must maintain strictly regulated budgets and continue to seek other sources of funding. Kenyon residents deserve fair, accountable and transparent representation. We need a strong, passionate voice to represent us . The same representation we've had for the last three years. Remember re-elect

South Glengarry Councillor Candidates

Janette Abbey
South Glengarry Councillor

If you're looking for experience, then Janette Abbey is definitely the candidate for you.

With 23 years service on municipal councils in South Glengarry, Mrs. Abbey says that a good council is reliable and accountable.

This term, she hopes to implement a road-repair policy for residents of private roads, stimulate economic growth along the 401, and lobby the Ontario government to change its house assessment formulas.

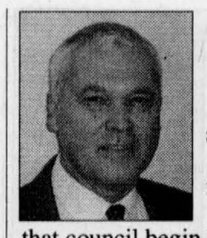
"It has to be changed so there is a fair and equitable rural formula," she says. "The present formula has too much of an urban base."

Joyce Gravelle
South Glengarry Councillor

As one of the first women in Ontario to be designated an economic development officer, Joyce Gravelle knows that a healthy economy will work wonders for any municipality. One of the ways to accomplish this, she says, is to focus on the tourism industry.

As such, Mrs. Gravelle has two ideas to bring more people into South Glengarry. One is to increase the renown of the Williamstown Fair. The other is to develop potential tours of heritage sites like St. Raphael's Ruins.

All in all, Mrs. Gravelle says a vote for her is a vote for fiscal responsibility.



George M. Johann
South Glengarry Councillor

George Johann says that there's a spending problem in South Glengarry.

"Our taxes are high and our roads are in bad condition," he says.

As such, Mr. Johann recommends that council begin hard surfacing its gravel roads.

"South Glengarry is still dumping gravel and calcium," he says.

"There could be a savings of between 600 and 1,100 kilometres a year if we started the hard surfacing."

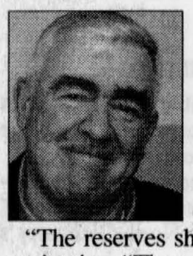
John Lounsberry
South Glengarry Councillor

John Lounsberry says the most important issue in South Glengarry is changing how property assessments are being handled.

"There are lots of improper assessments here," he says. "The mill rate is tied together with assessments and so taxes are going up. The township needs to know about this problem."

As well, Mr. Lounsberry says the township will save a lot of money if it upgrades its gravel roads to hardtop surfaces.

"With hardtop roads, we wouldn't have to re-spread gravel in the spring or spray for dust in the summer," he said.



Bill Madden
South Glengarry Councillor

Bill Madden says that a portion of South Glengarry's surplus should be used on capital projects such as road repairs, bridges, and building renovations.

"The reserves should be used for planned projects," he maintains. "They should not be used for overages or (to accommodate) poor planning."

Although Mr. Madden says that the township has a surplus of about $3.9 million, he's not advocating neutralizing the surplus altogether. He says maintaining some sort of surplus is necessary for a healthy budget.

He also says South Glengarry needs an official plan to replace those developed prior to amalgamation.

Ian McLeod
South Glengarry Councillor

No one has to convince Ian McLeod of the cultural richness of Glengarry. He's so enamoured of it that he wants to strike a committee that will work on promoting our culture.

"On the east coast they do nothing but promote," he says. "But they don't have more talented people than we have. It's just the promotion."

Mr. McLeod says that the treasure, talent, and attractions of South Glengarry is one of our best-kept secrets.

As a civil engineer, Mr. McLeod adds that his profession gives him an edge as a councillor. "As an engineer, I'm working with virtually every form of infrastructure that we deal with in South Glengarry," he says.

Carol-Ann Ross
South Glengarry Councillor

Carol-Ann Ross is convinced that South Glengarry has to do some spending control.

"We have to review every aspect of the township's spending," she says. "In some areas, the money has to be better controlled."

Even so, Ms. Ross doesn't fault the various departments. She faults the present council.

"You're only as good as your leader," she says. "And that's council."

A former reeve of Charlottenburgh, Ms. Ross says she knows that South Glengarry can get by for years without a tax increase. She says that the municipality has $2.3 million in outstanding taxes.

Victoria Stewart
South Glengarry Councillor

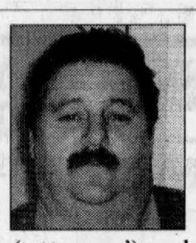
When it comes to taxes, Victoria Stewart says South Glengarry has two options: Freeze them or reduce them.

"Our costs can be cut without sacrificing our services," she says.

As someone in the private sector, Ms. Stewart says that she's saved the municipality tens of thousands of dollars. As an example, she says that as chairperson of Community Policing, she initiated a bylaw that regulated false alarms.

"This law helps make our roads safer and saves tax dollars from being spent needlessly," she says.

Ms. Stewart is a founding member of the South Lancaster Association of Property-holders.



John Warden
South Glengarry Councillor

John Warden says that taxes must be stabilized to ensure the future growth of the municipality.

"I am tired of reckless spending," he says. "I want to put money back in the (ratepayers') pocket, not council's."

Mr. Warden says that if seniors cannot afford to pay their taxes, they will have to move.

An avid sponsor of local sports teams, Mr. Warden says council has to be more open and accessible to residents.

"Council has to encourage input over the next three years, not once every three years during elections," he says.

South Glengarry Mayoralty Candidates

Dave MacDonald
South Glengarry Mayor

Mayor Dave MacDonald says that the provincial government needs to be lobbied for a fairer property assessment system.

As mayor, Mr. MacDonald was a driving force behind the establishment of an economic development committee, established in January of 2001. He also introduced a bylaw prohibiting the spray of pesticides along municipal rights-of-way.

Although he's quick to trumpet that South Glengarry has the second-lowest-tax base in SDG, he adds that municipalities have a lot more responsibilities these days. "We're responsible for police, ambulances, the homes for the aged, and hospital restructuring too."

Jim McDonell
South Glengarry Mayor

Jim McDonell says he'll provide the strong leadership that it takes to ensure council makes the tough decisions necessary to improve the quality of life in South Glengarry, while holding the line on taxes.

"My farming and business background have provided the experience necessary for me to appreciate the challenges that face our small businesses and I will work at providing the affordable infrastructure they require, while having due regard for our environment," he says.

Mr. McDonell is a nine-year veteran of South Glengarry council. He's also served as president of Char-Lan Minor Hockey Association for 14 years.

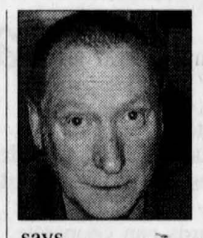
South Glengarry Deputy-Mayor Candidates

Frank Prevost
South Glengarry Deputy Mayor

Frank Prevost says that council has to lobby the provincial government for fairer property assessment.

"The way the government does assessing now isn't fair," he says. "They do an area average. If your house is worth $100,000 and your neighbours' houses sell at $180,000, your house shouldn't be assessed at $130,000."

Mr. Prevost, the current deputy mayor, points out that South Glengarry has the second lowest taxes throughout SDG. He's also a advocate of Glengarry's agricultural community, saying that the municipality has to work closely with farmers in order for the area to prosper.



Charles Sangster
South Glengarry Deputy Mayor

Charles Sangster says South Glengarry's major need is to get taxes under control.

"Taxes have gone up by 55 per cent and that's really quite obnoxious," he says.

Mr. Sangster dismisses the excuse that rising insurance rates have caused the increase.

"Those increases would be infinitesimal," he said. "The solution is to go through the books, see where the money has been going, and plug the holes."

Mr. Sangster doesn't anticipate sacrificing any services. "Taxes won't go up if I have anything to say about it," he says.

North Glengarry Council Candidates

Julie Akkermans
Kenyon Ward Councillor

Incumbent Kenyon Ward Councillor Julie Akkermans wants to finish the work she's started on the past council.

"We need to move ahead with what we're doing," she says. "I think this council has done a pretty good job."

Running on a platform of fair and responsible government, Mrs. Akkermans says that once the building freeze in North Glengarry is lifted, council should explore the possibility of hiring an economic development officer.

"We need someone to work for us and attract more businesses to the area," she says.

Mike Depratto
North Glengarry Mayor

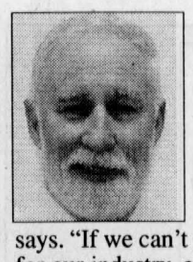
Mike Depratto believes that there are many issues in North Glengarry that are still outstanding.

"We need a better water supply, a proactive council that will attract businesses, and a broad-band Internet base," he says.

He says he raised these issues three years ago when running for mayor and they have not been dealt with.

Mr. Depratto, who is also president of the Alexandria and District Chamber of Commerce, says that drinking water is crucial, and that Alexandria's sanitary system is already running at capacity.

He believes council must take more initiative in seeking grants in order to improve the quality of life.



Bill Franklin
North Glengarry Mayor

Bill Franklin says water and sewage are the crucial issues in North Glengarry.

"It is the major determinant of economic development in the area," he says. "If we can't provide housing, and water and sewage for our industry, everything else will be Mickey Mouse."

Mr. Franklin believes decisions should be made publically, not behind closed doors, adding that he strives to conduct township business in an ethical manner.

He says that the current council has made solid investments in the future, including a new ambulance shelter and upgrades to fire-fighting equipment.

William Hagen
North Glengarry Deputy-Mayor

As the current warden of the United Counties, William Hagen says that downloading from the provincial government is taking a big financial toll on small municipalities.

"Our property tax base can't handle it anymore," he says. "Alternate means must be found to fund affected programs like policing, land ambulance, and social services."

Mr. Hagen added that council has to be more active in ensuring that local businesses thrive. He says North Glengarry must continue to work at upgrading its water facilities so that the building freeze can be removed and allow for more businesses.

Maryanne Kampouris
North Glengarry Deputy-Mayor

Maryanne Kampouris stresses her 30 years of working with municipal, provincial and federal levels of government.

"I have a passion for good government," says Ms. Kampouris, who is a member of council's environment committee and has attended Ontario East Municipal Conferences at her own expense.

An 18-year North Glengarry resident, Ms. Kampouris says she's running for Deputy Mayor because she wants to represent all of North Glengarry, not just a portion.

"I want to represent the interest of all North Glengarry residents and taxpayers at the council table and at the United Counties," she says.

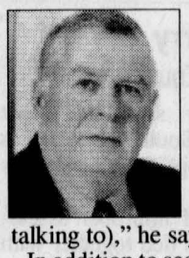
Bob Linney
Kenyon Ward Councillor

Bob Linney says that council has cut its recreation budget even though the demand for recreation is growing.

"Someone who knows the recreational needs should be at the council table," says Mr. Linney, who is chairperson of North Glengarry's Municipal Recreation Association.

He also stresses the importance of increasing economic development across the township.

"I don't want a municipality where all the growth is in Alexandria," he says, adding that NG is "not getting close" to the fair share of the grants it can get. "We must explore every possibility for original source financing before even considering an increase in the mill rate."



Ron MacDonell
Lochiel Ward Councillor

Experience counts, says Ron MacDonell, incumbent councillor for Lochiel Ward.

"When you're seeking provincial grants, it helps (to know who you're talking to)," he says.

In addition to securing grants, Mr. MacDonell pledges to improve roads, get better road equipment, and improve North Glengarry's lagoon system.

He describes himself as "very community oriented", serving as director of the Heart and Stroke board and provincial director of the Glengarry Cattlemen's Association. He has also served on the SDG Police Services Board.

Wendy MacPherson
Lochiel Ward Councillor

Wendy MacPherson has two key ideas she would like to see incorporated at North Glengarry council. She wants to record every council meeting and she wants greater accountability among councillors when it comes to expense accounts.

Although she's a newcomer to the political game, Mrs. MacPherson contends that you could hardly accuse her of not being up to date on the issues. She's attended every council meeting over the past two years, even the ones immediately before and after giving birth to her daughter.

Mrs. MacPherson also helped organize Community Pride Day in Glen Robertson.

Three vie for RC board

BY STEVEN WARBURTON
News Editor

In Glengarry, there are three candidates vying for two seats on the Catholic District School Board of Eastern Ontario.

Following are brief summaries of the candidates' views.

Ronald Eamer

Ronald Eamer says the school board has to lobby the provincial government to update its funding allocation formula.

"The formula is out of date," Mr. Eamer says. "It's six years behind because the government hasn't kept pace with inflation."

Mr. Eamer, 62, added that there are two major building projects slated for Glengarry. They include a new school on Tyotown Road and an addition on to the St. Finnan's gymnasium in Alexandria.

He also wants to restore the school board's full-day kindergarten program.

"We were forced to drop that program because of the government's funding formula," he says. "It's been proven that early education is best."

He added that the board must also ensure that its students learn in up-to-date facilities.

Mr. Eamer, who lives near Williamstown, is the current chairperson of the school board. He has been a trustee for 22 years.

Kevin Lydon

Kevin Lydon, 59, served as superintendent of the Catholic District School Board of Eastern Ontario for 15 years. Now that he's retired, he's hoping for a seat on the board itself.

"The school board has given me a lot," he says. "I thought this would be an opportunity to serve the community."

Mr. Lydon defines himself as a fierce advocate of many philosophies including adequate funding and the exclusivity of the Catholic board.

"I am truly and utterly committed to a separate Catholic system," he says.

Having said that, Mr. Lydon stresses that there are still areas in which different school boards can cooperate, such as busing,

Mr. Lydon is also a strong supporter of the Ontario Youth Apprenticeship Program, which enters Grades 11 and 12 students into various trades. He supports St. Matthew's alternative school in Cornwall, which provides schooling for students who have difficulty with traditional educational programs.

Gerald E. Samson

Gerald Samson, 58, is convinced that the church, the school, and the family must all work together in order to maintain healthy and educated students.

"Education and the Roman Catholic faith must be a priority in the classroom," says the Summerstown resident, a Senior Constable and 28 year veteran of the Cornwall Police Department.

He says that the school board must maintain a platform of fiscal responsibility.

"There is a lot of money that is being wasted on the new school board," he says. "Travelling expenses are skyrocketing because teachers, principals, and superintendents all have to travel to Kemptville to have their meetings."

Mr. Samson recommends rotating the meeting sites to minimize travel expenses.

Like Mr. Eamer and Mr. Lydon, Mr. Samson hopes to restore the board's full-day kindergarten program. He also hopes to provide the necessary busing for these students.

Other components of his platform include: lobbying the government to decrease educational cutbacks, teacher development, and special education programs.

Mr. Samson was a trustee for 18 years. Now, after a six-year hiatus, he's hoping to regain a seat again.

Questioners turn attention at meeting away from taxes, roads

By Sue Harrington
News Correspondent

Questions from the floor at last Tuesday's South Glengarry all-candidates meeting in Williamstown prompted some discussion on issues besides the often-raised ones of taxation and assessment.

The meeting was held at St. Mary's Centre, and was attended by an estimated 175 people.

The notion that the mayor does too many things on his own without consulting council was flatly denied by Councillor Janette Abbey. Mrs. Abbey and Councillor Ian McLeod, both incumbents, were asked what they had done about the "one man show" allegation, if indeed it were true.

"I totally disagree with that statement," said Mrs. Abbey, who appeared upset by the suggestion.

The veteran politician and only woman to serve on South Glengarry Council since amalgamation, said she had been on many councils, and that this past council has been the best.

"The last three years I have been treated as an equal," she said.

Councillor McLeod, however, said that there were several issues that had not come before council, and when they did, "some had gone too far."

"Yes we were there; yes we did raise facts, but sometimes there's very little you can do about it," he said.

Councillor McLeod pointed out the need to have meetings that run longer than one or one and a half hours and said that things should be discussed more thoroughly by all council members before decisions are made.

Deputy-Mayor Frank Prevost faced a similar question later in the evening.

"It takes a minimum of three council members to pass decisions," said Mr. Prevost. "I think I've been part of that team."

The teamwork talk, which has surfaced at the other all candidates meeting, and which most challengers have pounced upon and have now included in their campaign speeches, prompted a query from resident Mark Marshall.

"I have a growing feeling that there are factions, alliances, and pacts. Is this true?"

Each of the candidates running for the office of councillor denied there were alliances.

"I'm on my own," said Mrs. Abbey, while Mr. McLeod said that while some of the candidates had common ideas, no one was running as a team.

Victoria Stewart was quickly on her feet when the question was asked.

"The only pocket I am in is the people's," she said, to applause.

John Warden also expressed strongly that he is running as an individual.

Carol-Ann Ross said that while she, too, was running as an individual, she would work as a team member if elected.

"We can't have that division," she said, further fuelling the speculation that prompted the question.

The issue of employment for expatriate South Glengarrians had council hopefuls proposing different ideas.

Bill Madden, who sits on the SDG Community Development Corporation, (CDC), said that this group would work together with anyone wanting to develop small business. Unfortunately, according to Mr. Madden, not enough people know about the CDC's ability to assist people who have business plans and want to set up in the area.

Economic Development Committee member, Joyce Gravelle, said that she was excited about the township's economic development strategic plan which is coming out in the new year, and which looks at all sectors of the township.

And while John Lounsberry said he felt there were opportunities for cutting edge technology, both he and George Johann played down the idea of large industries.

"We like being residential," said Mr. Lounsberry, a thought echoed by Mr. Johann.

There was also a question about what the contenders for deputy-mayor were planning to do to keep the elderly in the community.

"We're fortunate to have Glen-Stor-Dun Lodge," said Charles Sangster, who said he thought that keeping people at home as long as possible is a great idea.

Mr. Prevost pointed out the many activities that are available in South Glengarry that make seniors productive members of their communities. He also said he supports the idea of anyone wanting to open a home for seniors in South Glengarry.

Ghosts from the past appeared in a question about the SDG mega-dump project hurled at Mr. Sangster.

"Back then you didn't listen. What makes me think you would listen now?" asked Martintown resident, Jim Pratt.

"Municipalities are only creatures of the province," responded Mr. Sangster, who said that the whole mega-dump issue was done through the public process. "There was nobody happier than I was when the government changed and the thing was dropped."

The mayoralty candidates also had to battle ghosts. Mayor Dave MacDonald was asked again about expansion of services to Purcell Road residents where work was begun without the knowledge of the whole council

"This project was paid 100 per cent by the users and resulted in six new homes being built," Mr. MacDonald said.

His opponent, Councillor Jim McDonell shot back that extra testing was required at an expense to taxpayers, as was the cost for road reconstruction work.

Mr. McDonell was questioned again about reports that he would revisit the Smithfield SuperBuild project if he were returned to council.

"What I said was that if there were a substantial group of people in favour of looking at it again, I would listen to them, just as I would listen to any group," he said.

The mayoralty candidates were the only ones quizzed on tax increases. Ellin O'Connell asked Mayor MacDonald how he defended the increases and the mayor replied with facts and figures.

"If you're going to cut taxes you're going to cut services," said the mayor. "We've got businesses coming to South Glengarry because taxes are low here compared with the rest of SDG and Cornwall."

Resident John Roulston asked Mr. McDonell if he had also supported the budget that caused the increase in taxes.

"Members now seem to be denying personal responsibility," said Mr. Roulston.

Candidates for trustee spots on the Catholic District School Board of Eastern Ontario got off lightly at the meeting. There were no questions for incumbent Ron Eamer and challengers Kevin Lydon and Gerald E. Samson, following their campaign speeches.

Kenyon-Ward candidates face voters at Apple Hill

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

Two strong candidates for the Kenyon ward seat faced off in front of 75 people at the Apple Hill Community Centre last Thursday night.

Incumbent Julie Akkermans and hopeful Bob Linney shared their strengths and desires with area voters during the all-candidates meeting sponsored by both the Maxville and District, and Alexandria and District chambers of commerce.

Mrs Akkermans emphasized her experience as a councillor with knowledge from working on the roads and waterworks committees. Fiscal responsibility seems to be at the forefront of her agenda, and she expressed it in a down-to-earth manner.

"I am cheap," Mrs. Akkermans said. "I am very careful with how I spend your money. I spend your money like it was my money."

She also sees her tenacity and sense of curiosity as other strengths.

"If somebody tells me there is a problem," Mrs Akkermans said, "and there is no answer to it. I go and I look...every problem has an answer.

"Because I am so curious I often think of things the other members haven't thought of.

Bob Linney makes his living in digital communications. Previously he produced Max Keeping's television news shows and attributed his desire to help out to the well-known TV anchor.

"Max opened my eyes to the value of community involvement," Mr. Linney said. "He believed if you want to live in a community ,you have to give something back."

Having served as chairperson of the Municipal Recreation Association, Mr. Linney is a polished speaker with team-building and leadership skills.

"My job as chair has been to nurture respect and at the same time to respect everybody's individual priorities," Mr. Linney said. "(My) strength is the ability to get people to work together, to get maximum use out of what dollars we have available."

Chamber of Commerce questions had the candidates focus on the idea of paving new roads, the value of the ward system, and water concerns.

Neither candidate is ready to abandon the township's slow, gradual approach to the costly proposal of repaving roads.

Mrs. Akkermans said, "we can't do it faster than we are doing it, unless we want to rise your taxes. If you really want a road that is paved, sell your house and move to a road that is paved."

Both agreed a ward system is the best fit for Kenyon.

"If you abolish the wards and go to general representation we will end up with the day where all our elected officials coming from Alexandria and don't understand the things that we face here in Kenyon," Mr. Linney said. "The current system is the best to make sure our voices are heard."

Apple Hill water concerns came out in the form of a chamber question and also in a query from area resident Fred Leroux. He questioned what it would take for council to move ahead on the town's polluted wells.

"Here the problem is septic," Mr. Linney said, "because of the proximity of the buildings." He suggested the township needs to do a detailed survey and clean-up.

A study exists and and shows there was a lack of water, according to Mrs. Akkermans.

To move forward on the costly proposal, residents, "need to let their voices be heard that they want to support a communal system," she said.

"Because they will have to pay for it. The municipal act says if we supply you with water it has to be user pay."

Apple Hill resident Rudolf Mertl questioned the candidates about their taxation policy, saying he experienced a dramatic increase when his assessment jumped by 30 to 40 per cent.

Explaining that the township has no control over assessment numbers, Mrs. Akkermans stated it did its part by decreasing tax rates, even though the decrease in the rate was not enough to offset the jump in taxes in instances where an individual's property assessment had increased significantly.

"The mill rate went down," Mrs. Akkermans said. "The 2003 rate is lower than the 2002 rate."

For his part, Mr. Linney sympathized with Mr. Mertl's inflated assessment concerns.

"If we are going to provide municipal services," Mr. Linney said, "part of it should be to provide you with data you need to defend the assessment of your property, so that you are not left alone to fight the Municipal Property Assessment Corporation. And it is coming down to a fight each year."

Kenyon Ag Society reflects on loss of Angus Gray

In the early hours of the morning on September 30, 2003 an ominous glow could be seen for miles around the village of Maxville, Ontario. Its source was a blaze that ended an era. By the time the dawn light permitted observation, the Angus Gray Recreational Hall on the Glengarry Highland Games historical site was a smouldering ruin of twisted metal. Eyewitnesses reported that by 4 a.m. the fire had such a hold that any hope of saving the building or its contents was lost. Despite a timely response and concerted efforts by the Volunteer Fire Departments of Maxville and neighbouring Apple Hill it soon became apparent that the building could not be saved. The fire departments concentrated on making sure that the fire did not spread. In this they were singularly successful.

Jack Fraser, President of the Kenyon Agricultural Society, which owns and maintains the grounds said: "These volunteer firemen deserve the sincere thanks of the entire community."

On the subject of the loss of the Hall he added: "It's not so much the building itself, but what it meant to the community that is important to comprehend."

The hall, built in 1960 with funds donated to the KAS by the estate of the late Angus Gray of Dunvegan filled a multi-purpose role.

The long, low structure measuring approximately 225' by 50' was the venue for such activities as Boy Scouts, Girl Guilds, and Cubs, 4H, and Pony Club meetings. And who has not heard the swirl of the pipes as, in inclement weather, the Glengarry Pipe Band practiced within those walls

The hall was used for dances and musical entertainment during the Games and The Maxville Agricultural Fair. Wedding receptions, fiddling contests and many a refreshing brew were knocked back as the hall became the Celtic Pub during Games activities.

The Center also housed a VIP Lounge and viewing deck at which visiting dignitaries were received and at which all board meetings of The Fair and Games were conducted.

Bill Shields, Past President of the Glengarry Highland Games said:

"Much of what we lost we cannot replace. For example, The Wall of Fame, containing 40 portraits of rural men and women who contributed to improvement of rural and agricultural life in Glengarry.

"The trophy case has gone. It contained all the trophies, plaques and shields for the Games athletic events and the piping and dance contests that were so keenly contested year after year. Some of these trophies were more than half a century old.

"Additionally, the building was used to store a wide variety of equipment including kitchen facilities, banquet tables and chairs. They will all have to be replaced."

In any case, the KAS realizes it has to look towards the future.

"We have to look forward but replacement plans are not yet complete," says Mr. Fraser. "That is partly because we want to encourage participation and ideas from the community who bear the ultimate loss. We strongly believe they must be included in any plans for the future.

"We are looking to replace the building with a smaller yet esthetically pleasing structure; perhaps, but not necessarily, of post and beam barn-like construction. Because of the restraints of cost (insurance will not nearly cover the replacement cost) it will very likely be a smaller three-season building. But above all, we are encouraging response from the people of Glengarry and indeed all those who have an interest in the Grounds and for what they stand."

The Bank of Nova Scotia in Maxville has generously offered to match any donations up to $5,000 to the Fund, which is dedicated exclusively for the rebuilding process. Mr. Fraser also mentioned that there will be a curling bonspiel in January that will help raise funds for the new building.

Glengarry councils spark ATV meetings

By Pete Bock
News Reporter

Upcoming public information sessions should move North and South Glengarry policy makers forward on implementing new rules for All Terrain Vehicles (ATVs).

To get up to speed on new provincial legislation, councils invited a special unit from the OPP to lend its expertise at meetings scheduled at the arena in Williamstown on Nov. 19, and at the Maxville and District Sportsplex on Nov. 20. Both start at 7 p.m.

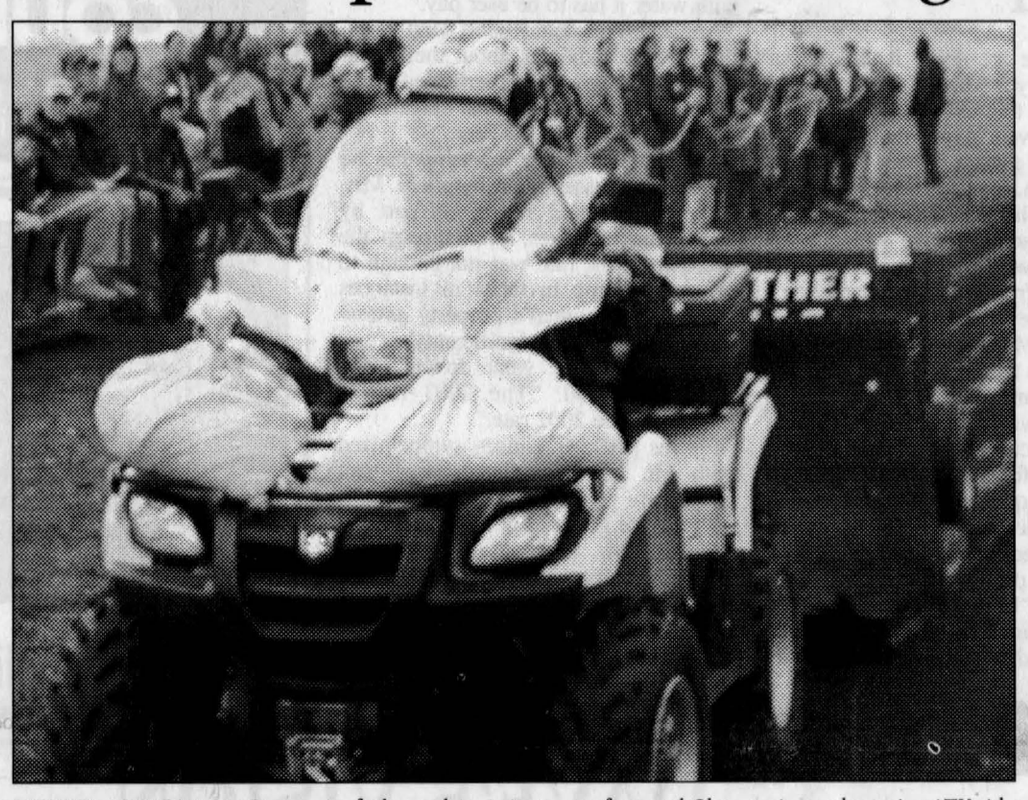
Public safety and the sharing of information are at the root of the meetings, according to South Glengarry Mayor Dave MacDonald.

"This meeting (in Williamstown) is to receive information," Mayor MacDonald said. "And for all parties to speak on the issue."

By amending an existing law, the province this summer handed municipalities added authority to regulate or permit ATVs to go on designated roadways.

The SAVE patrol, who enforce the Snowmobile Act, the Off Roads Vehicle Act, and the Small-Vessels Regulation, will give a power-point presentation on what the ATVs will be allowed to do, according to the SDG OPP Sergeant Paul Sabourin.

"Our only purpose here is to (inform) everybody who is legally entitled to partake in these activities, and to have them do it safely," Sergeant Sabourin said. "We want to be purveyors of good cheer and not bad news."



WHEEL ABOUT: Anne Dumont, of Alexandria, is just one of several Glengarrians who enjoy ATV riding. ATV enthusiasts may want to attend the upcoming meetings in Glengarry that will outline new ATV legislation.

The new amendment restricts ATV use on certain roadways, but leaves other roadways at municipalities discretion.

Along with authority to grant the use of roadways, the amendment put certain limitations on operators of vehicles.

"One restriction is that only one person can be on one ATV," Sergeant Sabourin said, adding vehicle tires have to meet required specifications for road use.

Four wheeling is a vibrant Glengarry recreational activity. This was seen at the recent successful ATV pull in Williamstown, hosted by the Glendalers Winter Sports Club. The club has over 450 members and a clubhouse in Summerstown Station.

In search of better trail access, the Glendalers established contact with the City of Cornwall and both Glengarry councils after the new provincial legislation passed, according to club vice-president Richard Picard.

"We are not interested in the main arteries, but access to secondary roads would be ideal," Mr. Picard said. "We are looking for trail-to-trail access; trail-to-service station or restaurant; and residence-to-trail access."

He sees the upcoming meetings as a good opportunity for people to learn about the new law.

With the OPP and the township represented, "nobody will be in the dark, they all will be informed."

Glengarry wins Filion Challenge Cup

By Todd Anderson
Sports Editor

This year's senior team from Glengarry District became the first squad from their high school to win a championship named after one of their most popular teachers.

Last year senior boys' soccer coach Glen Campbell came up with the idea of starting the Brian Filion Challenge Cup, named after his long-time friend and coaching partner.

The Cup would be played between the champions in SDG from the A, AA and AAA levels.

Glengarry faced CCVS in the final and came away with a 3-1 victory.

While gathering for a team photo after the match several members of the team pointed to the initials of Filion that they wear on their jerseys.

"It was a satisfying win on Friday for sure," said Campbell on Monday.

"It is great to have Glengarry's name engraved on the Brian Filion Challenge Cup. I was extremely happy with the effort and emotion the boys played with on Friday. It was our best all-around game of the year."

In the junior contest the Crusaders were looking to halt a 20 game unbeaten streak by St. Lawrence.

It was a close game but Char-Lan just couldn't solve the Saints' keeper.

St. Lawrence got goals from Chad Lapensee on a penalty shot and from South Glengarry's Nick St. John on a nice head ball that sailed over the head of the Char-Lan keeper and into the net.

The SDG champions will now wait until the spring when they'll participate in their respective EOSSAA championships.

Glens' big line gets support from youngsters

ALEXANDRIA JUNIOR B GLENS

By Todd Anderson
Sports Editor

Last weekend the Alexandria Glens' top line got some support in the scoring department from the youngsters on the team.

The line of Dominic Lamarche, Derrick Ryan and Louis Brisson still dominated the scoresheet in two weekend wins but the play of Pierre Paul Decoeur, Jeremy Ryan and Gabriel Lalonde caught the eye of Glens' assistant coach Simon Menard.

"They played quite a bit and they played well. They really picked up their games with some of the guys out of the lineup."

Simon Langevin sat out both weekend games with a two-game suspension.

Luc Beauclair also missed both games due to the flu.

Mathieu Desnoyers wasn't available Sunday in Gananoque due to work commitments and Decoeur wasn't there because he was called up the junior A Hawkesbury Hawks.

Defenceman Jami Jean Louis was also out of the lineup this weekend with a hip injury.

Despite all those players not available, the Glens picked up another four points.

Menard said he was surprised how easily they won Friday night against Brockville. It was after all, a rematch of last year's Rideau-St. Lawrence championship.

Glens 5 Tikis 1

The Glens got their revenge on the team that defeated them in last year's championship by totally controlling the flow of the game.

"We expected it to be a tougher game not 5-1," said Menard.

"We came out firing on all cylinders and we skated most of the night and stayed out of the box. I think (the drive from Brockville) played a factor. They have no legs in the first period."

Still the Tikis managed to skate off the ice down only 1-0 thanks to a goal from Dominic Lamarche.

In the second period the Glens took control of the match though as they added another three unanswered goals from Derrick Ryan, Pierre Paul Decoeur and Louis Brisson.

Decoeur received a nice pass from Chris VanOverbeek and deked out Brockville's Cory Chevrier then slid the puck into the empty net.

"Pierre Paul was pretty excited," said Simon.

"He doesn't usually have that much ice time but we know he has a good shot and good moves."

Lamarche capped off the scoring for Alexandria in the third period with three minutes remaining.

The Tikis spoiled rookie goaltender Jacob Rodrigue's shutout bid with a goal from Kyle Whiteford with 14:25 remaining in the third period.

Glens 7 Islanders 4

The Glens had a quick start to the game leading 3-1 after 20 minutes.

The big line of Lamarche, Ryan and Brisson was at it again as each scored a goal. The Glens then outscored the Islanders 3-2 in the second period for a 6-3 lead.

Patrice Brunet, Ryan and Gabriel Lalonde (with his first of the season) scored for Alexandria.

Other Islanders goals came from Kench, Shane Ehgan and Tom Dickson.

Justin Martel started in goal but left with 5:45 remaining in the second period in favour of Rodrigue.

Martel pulled himself from the game after complaining of a headache after being crashed into the net by an Islanders player in the first period. Menard said Martel did not suffer a concussion.

Before leaving the game Martel had a pretty good offensive game going for himself recording two assists.

Glens notes:

This Friday the Glens host the South Grenville Rangers starting at 8:30 p.m.

On Sunday the Glens travel to Westport for a 3 p.m. start.

Menard spoke about the possibility of Derrick Ryan staying with the team or having his junior A rights traded from Hawkesbury and moving back up to those ranks.

"We're expecting he'll leave but we don't want him to. He's a big part of our team. His brother is here so that might convince him to stick around but he's 19 or 20 so he wants one more year to try and get a scholarship. He would love to play with his brother but he's looking towards his future too."

Rebels offence explodes in pair of weekend wins

Rebels.

By Todd Anderson
Sports Editor

The Rebels offence caught fire last weekend as the team scored 17 goals in two wins.

Not only was head coach Eric Fontaine excited about the four-point weekend, he was also pleased to see the scoring spread out.

"It's good to see every line contribute. We've been counting on our first and second lines but all four were going this weekend. Everything we touched went into the net. We worked hard and got some bounces. Things finally paid off."

Heading into the season, many thought the Rebels would run away with the division. Fontaine feels his players may have been a little overconfident.

"We're a good team on paper and maybe the guys started the season off easy. The real shocker was our 8-1 loss to Kemptville. That opened our eyes and made the guys realize they have to work to be dominant."

One player Fontaine was impressed with last weekend was Julian Moffat.

The rookie scored three goals during the weekend bringing his season totals to four.

"He played with a lot more confidence," said Fontaine.

Rebels 7 Lions 1

A short-staffed Lions club hosted the Rebels Friday night and held themselves into the game for a while. That was before the Rebels dominated the second period in a 7-1 win.

The Rebels scored five unanswered goals in the period including the final two from Moffat.

Stephane St. Denis, Derek Duval and Steve Jarvo also scored int he period.

Pat Johnson and Addison Pelkey had given Char-Lan a 2-0 lead after 20 minutes.

Jason Denio scored the lone Morrisburg goal as Brian O'Shaughnessy was a winner over Matt VanEgmond in between the pipes.

Glengarry athletes succeeding "out of town"

By Todd Anderson
Sports Editor

The following is a sampling of some of the recent achievements from athletes with Glengarry ties who have moved out of the area to pursue their dreams in sports.

Eric Nielsen

The Alexandria native had made a monumental play in the Acadia Axemen's 29-8 victory over St. FX on Oct. 24.

Nielsen, a cornerback, ran back a kickoff for 94 yards in the second quarter to give his team a 13-8 lead at the time.

Nielsen, 6'0", 180 lbs, has had 14 kickoff returns for 406 yards and two touchdowns. That gives him an average of 29 yards per return.

Nielsen has attempted just one rush this season and it was for a 21 yard gain.

Defensively Nielsen is 17th in the conference with 26 tackles in eight games played and he also has one interception this season.

The Axemen are second in the Atlantic conference with a record of 4-4-0.

Elliott McCormick

McCormick, 17, was born in Kingston and now calls Ottawa home but he has several relatives who live in the Alexandria area.

The right-winger is playing as a rookie with the Brampton Battalion of the Ontario Hockey League this year.

McCormick, 6'2", 185 lbs, was a fourth round draft pick (72nd overall) by the Battalion in the 2002 OHL draft.

Last year he played with the Goulbourn Jr. B Royals and Kanata Jr. A Stallions.

In 14 games this season McCormick has been held scoreless.

Jean Desrochers

The Dalhousie native is entering his senior year and is finally producing as the Clarkson Golden Knights expected he could.

Desrochers, 6'2", 225 lbs, had 17 points in 32 games last year.

Last Saturday Desrochers had one assist as Clarkson beat Findlay 4-1.

Desrochers has been joined by Moose Creek's Nathan Beausoleil this year.

Beausoleil, 6'0", 180 lbs, is playing as one of the Golden Knights' top defencemen and has one assist in five games so far.

Tim McCuaig

A hip injury has caused the Lancaster native and SUNY Canton Northstars' goaltender to sit on the sidelines early this season.

He should return to action soon.

McCuaig, 5'11", 195 lbs, was injured in the first period of the first game of the season, a 7-4 loss to National Sports Academy.

Last season in 22 games McCuaig posted 9-10-0 record with one shutout, a .878 save percentage and 4.14 goals against average.

McCuaig is joined by former Char-Lan junior B Rebels teammate Troy Sinfield this year.

Sinfield, 6'2", 200 lbs, didn't take long to find the scoresheet scoring 1:10 into his first game, that 7-4 loss to NSA.

In four games this season the Cornwall native has one goal and five points.

He's the second highest scorer on the team and has been recently pushed up to the second line.

Kurt MacSweyn

The Dalkeith native is having another strong season with the St. Mary's Huskies.

The former captain of the OHL's Battalion is tied for ninth in the Atlantic Conference scoring race with three goals and five points in five games.

Saint Mary's is currently sixth in the standings with a 3-4-0 record.

In recent play St. Mary's lost 4-2 to the University of New Brunswick. On Oct. 31 the Huskies defeated the Université de Moncton 3-2 in overtime.

MacSweyn is joined on the team by Moose Creek's Jeff McKercher.

The defenceman is a former draft pick of the NHL's Dallas Stars and standout with the OHL's Peterborough Petes.

McKercher, 6'2", 203 lbs, has one assist in five games.

The Williamstown native is one of the key members on the fourth place Dalhousie Tigers in the Atlantic Conference.

Jonah Leroux

Leroux, 6'1", 200 lbs, has one two assists in four games but his role as a checker is helping the team win.

In recent play Dalhousie defeated the University of Prince Edward Island 3-2 and lost to the University of New Brunswick 3-2 in overtime.

Leroux played in the OHL with the Oshawa Generals, Brampton Battalion and Ottawa 67s.

Nicolas Ranger

The Casselman resident and former Alexandria jr. B Glens defenceman is playing well with the Gatineau Olympics.

The Quebec Major Junior League's top team sports a record of 17-3-2.

Ranger, 5'11", 180 lbs, is playing as one of the top defencemen on the club despite being an 18-year-old rookie.

Kevin Libbos

Coming off a concussion, the Glen Norman resident showed no ill effects as he was named Player of the Week in the Central Atlantic Collegiate Conference last week.

Libbos had two goals and two assists in two games for the Caldwell Cougars soccer team.

He had a goal and an assist against Molloy in a 2-2 tie on Oct. 28 and had the same result (including the game-winner) in a 2-1 victory over Felician on Oct. 30.

Caldwell (4-2-3) played Felician in their first playoff game yesterday (score wasn't available at press time).

In 17 games this season Libbos scored 28 points, finishing sixth in the conference.

Lori Dupuis

The Williamstown native is back once again playing in the Women's National Hockey League.

Dupuis, a veteran member of Canada's National Team, has scored nine points in nine games this season.

Dupuis, 30, is playing with the Brampton Thunder who currently rank second in the Central division with a record of 7-2-1.

Dupuis had two assists in a 5-1 Thunder win over the Ottawa Raiders on Nov. 1.

On Oct. 27 Dupuis scored her third goal of the season in a 6-2 loss to the Toronto Aeros.

Matt Verdon

The Summerstown native has struggled to find the scoresheet so far in the Central Collegiate Athletic Conference.

The former Cornwall jr. A Colts captain has yet to earn a point with the Ferris State Bulldogs.

Verdone, 6'0", 198 lbs, is joined on the Bulldogs by other former Colts captains Tim Vokey and Jeff Legue.

If you know of any other athletes with Glengarry ties who are participating in sports out of the area let us know at the Glengarry News.

Junior curling

Over 20 kids turned out to participate in the opening day of the junior season on Sunday.

Kids between the ages of eight and 18 were on hand as Bonnie MacLeod-Mayes and Margaret Boekhoff instructed with the help of Matthew Ladouceur.

The "little rockers" spent the session learning about scoring, sweeping, sliding and delivery skills as well as trying on some borrowed curling shoes.

The kids then practiced sending their rocks to the "halfway house" which is new to the program this year.

Curlers who are interested in the junior division may stop by the club next Sunday starting at 1 p.m.

Regular curling

Spots are still open. Contact Mario Riggio at 527-2375 or Mike Mayes at 525-0827 for more information.

Mustangs get set for busy weekend

By Todd Anderson
Sports Editor

The Maxville Mustangs lost for the seventh time in nine games after a 4-2 setback against Casselman Saturday night at home.

The Mustangs (1-7-1) remain in last place but are anything but out of it as they stand only two points back of Vankleek Hill and six of Casselman.

East Ottawa leads the way with 22 points.

After three consecutive weekends of playing just one game, the Mustangs will have their hands full this weekend as they'll play in three matches. It's not make-or-break time yet but some wins would be nice.

"I would like to see us come out with more intensity," said Mustangs' head coach Kevin Lalonde.

"I was more pleased with our effort Saturday but I still think we can turn it up quite a bit. That was one of our first times with a full lineup. We'll try and keep the lines together at practice and games now."

Last Saturday the Mustangs were looking to finally pick up a win and move out of last place.

The win would've allowed them to pass Vankleek Hill and creep closer to catching the Casselman Stars.

Stars 4 Mustangs 2

Stars' forward Marc Mainville's second goal of the game with one minute remaining, sealed the fate of Maxville.

The Mustangs headed into the third period down 2-1 and then traded goals with Casselman as defenceman Ryan Villeneuve scored five minutes after Mainville's first goal 1:25 into the period.

Casselman's Gino St. Louis and Mustangs' newcomer Matt Lalonde traded goals in the first period.

Lalonde played on a line with fellow rookies Shane O'Brien and Jordan Johnston.

"I was impressed with (Matt Lalonde)," said Lalonde.

"That line looks good and I think we'll keep them together for a while."

Villeneuve also picked up an assist on Lalonde's goal for a two-point night.

Josh Ingram lost in goal to Louis Felipe Raymond.

Ingram had no back-up as Dan Desnoyers had prior commitments.

"Josh played a real good game and I don't think our goaltenders have let us down all year. It's the players as the year goes on who have to play with more intensity. I would like to see us come out with more intensity this weekend. There's no hunger there."

Mustangs notes:

This Friday the Mustangs travel to Vanier for an 8 p.m. start against the East Ottawa Thunder. On Saturday the Mustangs host the Vankleek Hill Cougars starting at 7:30 p.m. On Sunday the Mustangs travel to St. Isidore for a 7:30 p.m. start.

"Friday is our chance to redeem ourselves after a poor effort in Maxville two Saturdays ago," said Lalonde.

"That is one of the harder rinks to play in the league though. Vankleek Hill we haven't seen yet but we know they've started off slow too. We're sure their record does not reflect the team they have though. I don't see how we can't beat St. Isidore."

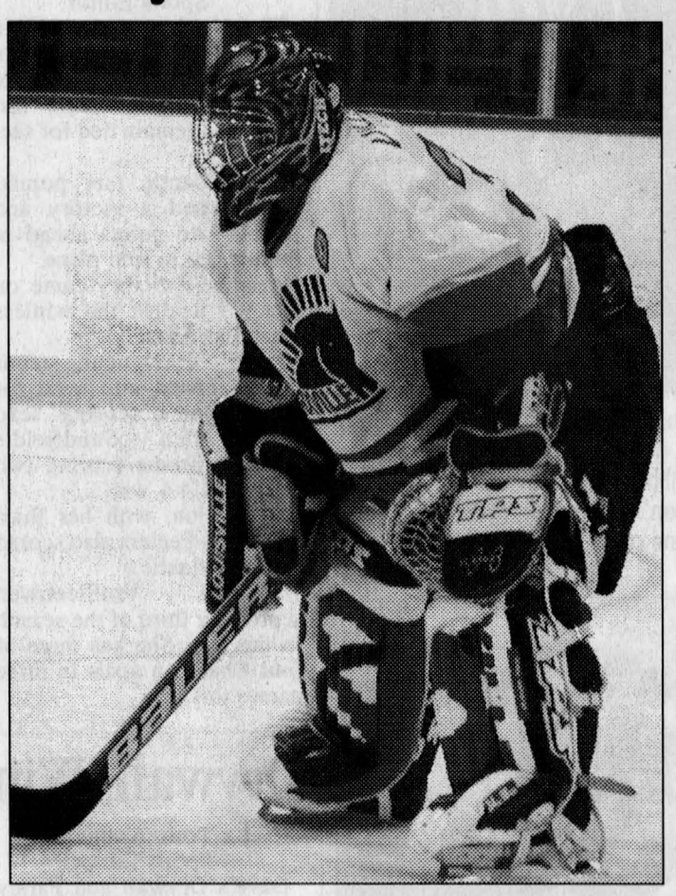
Lalonde said he was surprised to see Brody Coleman suiting up on Saturday.

Coleman suffered a broken hand during a game the previous weekend.

"I saw him in the room and asked what he was there for," said Lalonde.

"He said he was here to play. I didn't even have him on our list for that night."

Forward Andrew Michaud has told Lalonde that doctors may give him the go-ahead to play this weekend. Michaud has been suffering with shoulder problems and the Mustangs said they would not play him without doctor's approval.



ROOKIE SHINING: Mustangs rookie goaltender Josh Ingram earned praise from head coach Kevin Lalonde after another solid start Saturday night at home. The Mustangs weren't able to win however losing a 4-2 decision to Casselman.

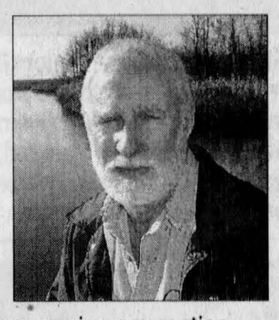
"Clean water is key for a prosperous future!"
Bill Franklin, Mayor



All across Ontario, water quality and quantity is a growing concern. North Glengarry is no exception.

While the problem has been years in the making, dry summers, increased demand and aging septic systems have brought the situation to a head.

There is no magic bullet. Nevertheless, your Council has been working hard to reverse the situation.

First of all, we are actively involved with programs like Ontario's "Environmental Farm Plan" and the "Healthy Futures" and "Healthy Waterways" initiatives. These and other programs are designed to help rural landowners improve and protect water quality.

As a first step to a permanent solution, we have also conducted a wellhead study in Glen Robertson and source water studies in Maxville and Apple Hill.

In Alexandria, we have implemented new procedures that allow us to hold more water in reserve, longer. We are repairing the Alexandria dam. And we have developed an affordable, effective wetlands sewage treatment plan.

Our water problems are not over. However, we have come a long way. And, if re-elected, I intend to continue making clean water a top priority.

Bill Franklin

Leaders keep winning

By Todd Anderson
Sports Editor

The Northerners and Glen Sandfield each won in Alexandria Women's Indoor Soccer League action last week and remain tied for second.

The Atlantic (six points) also earned a victory and remain two points ahead of both teams in first place.

Atlantic's victory came on Oct. 29 against the winless Char-Lan squad.

Kelly Lavigueur (four goals) moved into a tie for the league's scoring lead with Glen Sandfield's Natasha Brodie scoring two goals in a 4-1 win.

Sue Filion, with her third and Chris Peeters also scored for the Atlantic.

Vanessa VanSleeuwen scored her third of the season in the loss. She has three of four Char-Lan goals in three games this year.

In the two games on Oct. 27 the Northerners and Glen Sandfield finished the night tied for second with four points each.

After their wins that night they also boast identical goals for (nine) and against (seven) as well.

Brodie scored half of her team's goals in a 6-0 win over the league's other winless team, Springers.

Tina Dewar, Kaitlyn MacPherson and Rachel MacPherson had the other goals in the 6-0 victory.

Laura Urquhart posted the shutout.

The Northerners got two goals from Sherril Norman, bringing her totals to three, in a 4-1 win over Char-Lan.

Mel Chartrand, with her third, and Lori St. Denis rounded out the scoring for the North while Char-Lan got another goal from VanSleeuwen.

By Todd Anderson

Jason Ouderkirk led the charge with three goals in the win.

Gary St. Pierre added a goal and two assists while Justin Hueff potted his second goal of the season.

Sandy MacLeod scored the lone Matco goal, his first of the year.

Windows actually scored two goals in the final 6:32 to sneak out the win.

Norm Derepentigny scored the game-winner while Albert Derouchie added insurance with 2:40 remaining.

Randy Cousineau posted the shutout in the win.

Rebels

The Lions only had 15 skaters in the lineup as a few players have apparently left the club.

"I don't agree with guys walking out on a team," said Fontaine about the situation in Morrisburg.

"You're not always going to be on a winning team but you should go out there and give your all and have fun. When you're older, you're going to regret quitting. Those 15 guys that are left are out there working hard and having fun. That's all that counts."

Despite what could've been a frustrating evening for Morrisburg, the two teams combined for only five minor penalties in the game.

Fontaine said the game took only about one hour and 45 minutes to play.

"I've never coached a game with just five penalties before."

A night later the Rebels hosted the Athens Aeros in their first inter-league game.

Rebels 10 Aeros 4

The Rebels' key to this victory was another five-goal second period which saw Derek Duval, Derek Crawford, St. Denis and Adam Beehler hit the back of the net. With the explosion the Rebels headed into the third period up 7-2 and ultimately won 10-4.

St. Denis, Jarvo and Crawford scored in the third period while Johnson had both Rebels' goals in the first period. Jeff Boucher and captain Brian Johnson had a pair of goals each for Athens.

Anthony Fricchione won in goal over Tyler MacDonald who was pulled in favour of Ryan Shelter to start the third period.

Rebels notes:

This Saturday the Rebels host the Brockville Tikis starting at 7:45 p.m.

On Sunday the Rebels travel to Gananoque for a 7:45 p.m. start against the Islanders.

Fontaine said the goal against Brockville is to keep an eye on junior A veteran A.J. Howe's line and he expects another rough and tumble game in Gananoque.

"Every Sunday since I was playing you know what to expect there. They try and intimidate you. If we stick to our game we'll be all right."

Defenceman Ryan Major may miss Friday's game due to work commitments. Nathan Poitras' status is unclear after he injured his ankle at school last week.

Returning from a three-game suspension is took Rebels' defenceman Danny Duval just eight second to pick up a penalty (for elbowing) in the game Saturday night.

Horticultural Society to elect new executive

VIRGINIA WINN
528-4379 uwinn@cnwl.igs.net

Tonight, Wed., Nov. 5, the members of the Martintown and District Horticultural Society will get together for the final meeting of 2003 to elect a new executive, bask in the achievements of the past year and enjoy a potluck dinner. Following the supper a fun auction will take place, with members contributing baking, plants, knick-knacks, books and anything else that takes their fancy.

The Society is sponsoring another Christmas Decoration contest which is open to all residents of the Martintown area, member or not. The categories are Christmas Overall View, and Christmas Best Decorated Door. If you wish to enter, contact Marilyn Blackwood at 528-4620 by Mon., Dec. 7. Entries will be judged from Dec. 10 to 17, so leave your lights shining in the evenings. How is it possible that we are talking about Christmas already?

Craft sale

The 20th Annual One Stop Christmas Shoppe and Tea will be happening at the Martintown Community Centre on Sat., Nov. 15 from 10-3 p.m. So far, 18 tables have been rented to an assortment of jewelry makers, ceramic artists, tole painters, woodworkers, needleworkers, etc. Linda Brunet will be there with her jams and pickles, and so will members of the Martintown Optimist club with a table or two of books for sale. The Goodtimers will staff a bake table and provide tea with desserts in the seniors' room. Donations of baked goods to raise money for the Community Centre can be brought in after 9 a.m., and all are most welcome to attend and spend lots of money!

Heart warming

A life-time Martintown area resident, Shirley Charron, along with two others, took to the stage at Aultsville Hall on Saturday evening, Nov. 1, as living proof of the benefits of quick response and the use of defibrillators in saving heart attack patients. The Songs from the Heart concert was a sell-out and the musical gifts of two of the Ottawa Heart Institute surgeons, Dr. Fraser Rubens and Dr. Marc Ruel, did not disappoint. Senator Dr. Wilbert Keon, founder of the Institute was honoured during the evening, and the Cornwall Centennial Choir, under the direction of Lisa Zeran, added songs to the programme. A Glen Falloch neighbour, Nancy Knight, who just happens to be a nurse, was on hand on May 1, 2003 when Shirley collapsed, and she administered CPR until the paramedics arrived with a defibrillator. Once she was able to be moved, surgery at the Heart Institute followed, and now this lady, dubbed The Miracle Lady by Cornwall medical staff, is well enough to return to part time work. Congratulations to all the care-givers and best wishes for many years of good health to Shirley. Another Martintowner, Sylvia Thomson, once a patient of Dr. Keon, also attending the concert, was pleased to see her former surgeon, and have him tell her how well she looks!

Martintown Public School

Martintown Public School will hold its annual St. Albert's Cheese fundraiser sale. Cheese order forms went home on Monday, Nov. 3 and the deadline to order cheese is Nov. 17. Cheese will be delivered to the school on Thurs., Nov. 27 and small orders will be sent home with students on the bus but large orders must be picked up by parents. Volunteers are needed to assist in this fundraiser so if you can help please contact Kris Vanden Oetelaar at 525-4708.

On Mon., Nov. 3, the grade six students went to the Cornwall Armouries to participate in the Racing Against Drugs Program and thanks go to the Martintown Optimist Club for covering the cost of transportation.

On Tues., Nov. 4, the grade 7 and 8 students visited Char-Lan District High School for a theatrical presentation titled Shape of a Girl, put on by the Thousand Islands Playhouse.

Students and staff of Martintown Public School will be observing Remembrance Day on Tues., Nov. 11 at a service in the gym at 11 a.m. People from the community are welcome to attend.

In an effort to promote a safe and respectful school environment for everyone, the school is concentrating efforts to replace negative behavior with skills that involve treating others kindly and with respect.

In a school-wide approach, seven core values are being introduced, namely: empathy, conscience, self-control, respect, kindness, tolerance and fairness.

November's theme is empathy, which is the ability to understand and feel for another person's concerns.

Through the month the students will receive both direct and indirect teaching on this theme.

A concrete way to show empathy could be in filling an Operation Christmas Child box with small toys and useful items, and there are still boxes available at the school.

Get well wishes

Best wishes to Charlie Kinloch who has been in hospital in Cornwall since last week.

Martintown Mill

Well, there could have been a pretty fine canoe race this past weekend, as last week's rain caused the Raisin River to be as high in the fall as I have ever seen it in the 25 years we have lived here.

The air temperature was probably more pleasant than it usually is in April as well! The amount of water seeping into the basement caused a bit of a delay in the work on the Martintown Mill, but my sources tell me that the new floor should be finished this week.

Women's Institute

The Martintown Women's Institute is hosting the monthly birthday party at Maxville Manor in November. The date has been changed to Wed., Nov. 19 at 2 p.m. and members of the Brigadoons will be there to entertain.

Business moving

Best wishes to the staff of Wagar & Holland Chartered Accountants as the office moves to Boundary Road, the South Glengarry side. The business was formerly located at the west end of the bridge in Martintown, renting space from the Flarrow Hockey Stick company, in what had been the Raisin Region Conservation Authority building, and that is as far back as I go.

Fire Department trip

The fundraiser trip to the Rideau Carleton Raceway on Oct. 25 organized by the Martintown Fire Department's Women's Auxiliary, and supported by the firemen and their wives, friends and family was a success. A good amount of money was raised to be put towards the purchase of the Jaws of Life equipment.

Goodtimer's euchre

There was a big turnout on Tues. Oct. 28, as ten tables were required to accommodate euchre players at the Martintown Community Centre. The winners were: 1. Shirley Mesman, 2. Lorraine DeRepentigny, 3. Marcel Glaude, 4. Pauline McKinnon, 5. Mary DeWit, 6. Rita Parette, 7. Roger Brazeau. The door prize was won by Cecile Cuerrier, and the free ticket went to Roger Brazeau. Other door prizes were won by Mary DeWit, Rita Seguin, Shirley Wylie, Hermidas St. John, Bill Johnston, Andre Lefebvre, Estelle Brazeau and Shirley Mesman.

The 50/50 draw winners were Lorraine DeRepentigny, Claire VanPutten, Andre Lefebvre, Catherine McRae, Leona St. John, Onagh Ross, Therese Valade and Eileen Laperriere. The next Goodtimers Euchre will be held on Tues., Nov. 11, at 7:30 p.m., and please note the new earlier time for this season of shorter days.

Duplicate bridge

The results of the Martintown Goodtimers Duplicate Bridge held on Tues., Oct. 28, were as follows:

North/South, 1. Marg and Sam Wolynec, 2. Peggy Seymour and Grace Leroux, 3. Bernice Barlow and Del Roulston.

East/West, 1. Joan Turner and Isobel Quail, 2. Audrey Blair and John Roulston, 3. Sheila Pickett and Estelle Brazeau.

Bridge-playing witches, clowns, film stars and the like, under the watchful eye of Satan, enjoyed a delicious plate of shortbread witches fingers, complete with bloody fingernails, courtesy of Jane Troop.

Audrey's bridge

The winners of Audrey's Friday Night Bridge held on Halloween, Oct. 31 were: 1. Marjorie and Rudi Mertl, 2. Jean and Jim Campbell, 3. Joan Owen and Bernice Barlow.

Party bridge

The winners of the Party Bridge held on Monday, Nov. 3 were Perry Downs, Bill Tadgell and Evelyn Arseneau.

Community Reps Required

S.J.McLeod's School Council is seeking community representatives to contribute to the group.

Any member of the community can contribute. If you are interested in playing a role on the school council please call Kieran Kennedy, principal, Kathy Lauzon, office administrator, at 347-2648 or Inez Franklin, council chair at 347-7666 for information.

Everyone is welcome to the next school council meeting which is tonight, Nov. 5 at 6:30 p.m. at the school.

Remembrance Day

Please feel welcome to attend the Remembrance Day ceremonies at the school on Tuesday, Nov. 11 at 10:30 a.m.

This assembly reinforces for our children the awareness that their freedom was paid for by two generations of Canadian youth in the last century and that their respect and honour is a small token of appreciation for this gift.

Happy Birthday!

Special wishes this week to Leah McDonell and Kyle McDonell, who celebrate on the 5th and 11th respectively.

Thanks!

Many thanks to the North Lancaster Volunteer Firefighters who cooked up hot dogs at the Fire Hall on Halloween Friday night. A number of junior trick-or-treaters enjoyed their supper there.

L'Ecole Ste. Therese

The students in Grades 5/6 will join their peers from across the area at the Race Against Drugs Workshop in Cornwall this week.

Many thanks to the North Lancaster Optimist club who will provide a hot dog lunch on Thursday in honour of Child Appreciation Week.

Kim and Mike Major of the Alexandria Dairy Queen are kindly providing DQ certificates for students who meet their literacy goals at Ste. Therese. Rack up the books to earn a sweet treat!

Jason Chamberlain was one of the lucky winners from the pool of French Catholic schools contributing to the Pennies for CHEO campaign. Jason enjoyed a trip to the Corel Centre last Saturday to see the Ottawa Senators game.

Memorial Service

Last Monday, Oct. 27, a solemn funeral ceremony was concelebrated by Bishop Paul-André Durocher, his predecessor Bishop Eugene LaRoque and sixteen members of the clergy from Alexandria-Cornwall in St. Margaret of Scotland Church in Glen Nevis.

The funeral honoured the life of Msgr. Witold Mazurkierwicz who was St. Margaret's pastor from 1979 to 1990.

Msgr. Witold maintained close ties to several of his former parishioners with whom he corresponded.

He is remembered for his deep Catholic faith and his dedication to service as pastor to his people.

Rest in peace, Father Witold.

QUESNEL
In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather Raymond, who passed away one year ago Nov. 5, 2002.
Ray, you fought long and hard to stay with us
But in the end God relieved you of your suffering and took you home to a better place.
You were the centre of our lives
It is hard to go on without you
Maybe time will help to heal the pain of losing someone so dear
Always loved and remembered by your wife, children, grandchildren and great-grandchild Olivia.

OBITUARIES

Donald Francis Corbett "Donald George" MacDonald

Donald passed away peacefully and gently on September 30, 2003 at the Glen Stor Dun Lodge in Cornwall.

He was born November 5, 1915 at Munro's Mills, the son of Agnes and George C. MacDonald. He is predeceased by his parents, his wife Margaret McDougall (1947), and his brother John (1958.)

Donald will be sorely missed by his sister Isabel MacDonald, at the Maxville Manor, and by his much loved daughters, Arlene and her husband, Brian McKinley of Brockville, and Laurie and her husband, Lenny Dering of Atlanta, Georgia.

Donald was dearly loved and will be profoundly missed by his four grandchildren - Kent Fitzhugh and his wife Angie of Gananoque; Erin and her husband Martin Wright of Ottawa; Malina Farley of Atlanta; and Aimee and her husband Brian Wheeler of Atlanta.

He was the very proud great-grandfather of Abby (9), Ellen (6), Riley (5), and Emily (1 month).

Donald lived a long and full life and had the pleasure of many good friends and acquaintances. His passing has left a space in all our lives.

Friends were received at the Wilson Funeral Home, 822 Pitt Street, Cornwall.

The Mass of the Resurrection with Commendation and Farewell was Celebrated by Monsignor D.B. MacDougald in St.Raphaels Roman Catholic Church on Saturday, October 4, 2003.

Funeral arrangements were under the care of Wilson Funeral Home, 822 Pitt Street, Cornwall.

He is survived by his wife Bernice Lamarche (McPherson), and seven children, Julie of Colombia South America, Robert (Grace) of Williamstown, Paul, Anna Patricia, Mary-Theresa, Sarah and Charles all of St. Raphael's.

Former Pontifical Council president visits Dalkeith

DALKEITH

JEAN MACLENNAN
874-2385

His Eminence Cardinal Edouard Gagnon, former president of the Pontifical Council for International Eucharistic Congresses, a good friend of Louis Loczy and Frances Fraser, spent a day in Dalkeith visiting with them on Oct. 29. He then celebrated Mass in St. Paul's Church for a good number of people from the region. The Cardinal explained what were his responsibilities when he worked in Rome with the Holy Father.

Social notes

Ruth (McIlwain) Embree, Vancouver visited her sister Olive Fraser and many other relatives and friends lately.

Sincere sympathy is extended to Mary Jane Cousineau (his mother) and her family-Barney, Henry, Della, Aline and Jacqueline on the death of William (Billy) Cousineau. Following a lengthy illness Billy passed away on Oct. 21 at age 62. A Memorial Mass was celebrated at St. Gregory's Catholic Church, Vankleek Hill, with interment at St. Paul's Catholic Cemetery, Dalkeith on Oct. 25.

Annette, Pat and Taylor Aris, Ottawa visited her parents Yvette and Gerard Goulet, Hawkesbury and also with friends in Dalkeith over the weekend.

R.D. and Clara MacLeod, Laggan and grandson Kieran McBean returned from visiting Clara's relatives in Saskatchewan. While there, Kieran learned much of South Saskatchewan: He stood at a monument with one foot in Saskatchewan and the other in Manitoba and his arm extended into North Dakota, he saw open pit coal mining and a hydro plant and that the South Prairie is not flat, but rolling and full of oil wells, batteries and many many grainbins. He lost four days of school but learned much about a part of Western Canada. They then returned to Winnipeg and spent two days with his Aunt Sandra and Uncle Guy where he celebrated his 14th birthday.

40th Wedding

On Friday evening, Aug. 29, Ken and Carol (nee Hay) Scharfe celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with members of their immediate families in attendance. Glengarrians present were Ruby Hay, Sydney and Wanda Hay. The couple's daughters, Sharon Scharfe of Ottawa and Rosemary, Tom and Savannah Hardwich of Richmond, Virginia were in attendance. Additional members of the Scharfe family present were Russell and Peggy Scharfe, Doreen and Erving Young, Norman Toll and John and Norma Cameron, all of the Ottawa area. Marking their 40 years of marriage, a dinner was enjoyed at the Shallows Restaurant at the Southway Inn in Ottawa. This was followed by a beautiful anniversary cake at the Scharfe residence. A memorable fall foliage bus tour to the New England states and Eastern Canada was recently enjoyed by the couple. We join in wishing them the very best for the years ahead.

Library

A big thank you to Francis Fraser for reading at our Storytime. The theme was teddy bears and each child brought in their favourite teddy bear. Our fall storytime program was a great success. We had 4 new families sign up at the library.

Peter Zuuring's new books "Iroquois Roll Out," "Arrow Roll Out," and "Arrow's First Flight" are all available at the library. Coffee nights are every Tuesday and Thursday evening. Come and browse for a book and have a cup of coffee to warm you up!

Saturday, Oct. 25 was our Children's Gardening Workshop. It was very well attended by Alyssa and Ashley Fraser, Rachelle Houzlet, Cassie MacDonald, Tammy and Wilko Finger, Brittney Nixon, Sarah Desmaris. Phyllis Noble first prepared the garden in the front of the library, by digging it up, weeding and adding compost. We were very grateful for all of her hard work. Frances Fraser then led the local gardeners in a whirlwind of activity of planting bulbs and potted plants, arranging rocks, decorating pumpkins and adding name plates to each child's garden plot. The children had a great time learning, and working hard. It is now officially a "Children's Garden." The garden is available for anyone to come and take a look. Next spring, it should be in full bloom. Thanks to Frances for all of her hard work in making a great workshop for the Dalkeith kids. The Gardening Workshop was sponsored by the "Friends of the Dalkeith Library."

Laggan news

Laggan School Council is sponsoring its sixth annual Spaghetti Dinner on Saturday, Nov. 22 at Laggan Public School. Sittings will be at 4:30, 6 and 7:30 pm. Takeout orders are available too. This dinner is intended as a community social event as well as being a major fundraiser for school-related projects. Last year's event was another tremendous success, as will this year's event be, so come and join us! More volunteers to provide some food items and to assist with the serving of the dinners are required. For more information please contact Diane Edwards 874-9990 or Trish Dorn at 874-1149. An information/tickets request flyer with all the details was sent home to all families early last week. Everyone is welcome to attend and you are encouraged to return your request for tickets, with payment, by Friday, Nov. 14 as suggested in the flyer so that final planning can be done. Other members of the community and beyond are welcome too. Twice in the past five years Laggan Public School has successfully sponsored a Food and Supplies Drive for the local SPCA. Some time has gone by since the last one so we would like to dedicate the week of Nov. 17-22 as Laggan's SPCA drive. During this week students will be encouraged to bring any of the following: dry and canned dog and cat food, kitty litter, animal shampoo, javex, used towels, blankets. As well, you can donate when you attend the Laggan Spaghetti Dinner. Let's make this drive a success like the previous two.

A very special welcome to Educational Assistant Laine McDonell who has recently joined the Laggan Public School staff replacing Marlene Urquhart who was able to get a permanent position at Plantagenet Public School. Best wishes to Marlene in her new position.

Term 1 Report Cards will soon be ready and will be sent home by Nov. 24 .

Parent-Teacher Interviews are scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 27 from 6:00-8:50pm and Friday, Nov. 28 (PD day) from 9:30-11:30am.

Laggan Public School will hold its annual Remembrance Day Service on Tuesday, Nov. 11th beginning at 10:45 am. Members of the community and family members are welcome to attend. Student Council will be selling poppies in all classes each morning beginning Tuesday, Nov. 4 until early Tuesday, Nov. 11 before the Remembrance Day service. Veteran's Week is Nov. 5-11. The grade six class is planning its annual 3 day Ecole de Neige educational trip in early February. To offset some of the costs of about $120 - $125 per student, the class will be doing its usual cookie mix/muffin mix sales later in November with delivery well before Christmas. Additional information will follow shortly.

HIGHLAND PATHS

KEN MCKENNA

Friendships formed through mutual interest can sometimes go far back. I have known Allan Gillis for over forty years, going back to the days when he was a student and a piper in the legendary Black Watch in Montreal.

Allan visited me recently here in Glengarry and left with me some of the information he has amassed about his MacDougall ancestors. With his permission and because Cape Breton has so many similarities with Greater Glengarry, I include some excerpts from his research in this column. His mention of the Isle of Eigg reminds us of the Eigg Road here, just to the north of Alexandria and of the early settlers who brought the name with them from the Hebrides of Scotland.

"The MacDougalls of Judique Intervale, like many of their neighbours and relatives, have their ancestral roots in the western areas of Scotland, including the Inner and Outer Hebrides. They had their origins in the islands of Uist, Muck and Eigg. [There is a rather strained saying in the Hebrides - 'He was born on Eigg, raised on Rum and buried in Muck']. Uist is fairly well-known but Eigg and Muck are less familiar to most people. Eigg and Muck, together with Rum and Canna, form the group called the Small Isles. Eigg is home to about half of the present population of this group, which is roughly one hundred and thirty in all.

The name Eigg probably derives from a Norse word 'egg' meaning edge of a blade or a mountain. This is a good description of this island of 7,400 acres, five miles long and three in width, which rises out of the sea to nine hundred feet at some points. Its most notable feature is the spectacular Sgurr of Eigg, an outcrop that reaches a height of 1,289 feet and gives Eigg the most distinctive silhouette in the Hebrides. Eigg was given to Ranald MacRuari by Robert the Bruce in 1309 and the Eigg people followed the MacDonalds till 1826, when Clanranald [the chief] sold the island to pay off some of his gambling debts. The people of Eigg had suffered dearly for their loyalty to Clanranald and to Prince Charlie after the failure of the '45 and this was their thanks from their chief.

From 1826 until 1997, Eigg had been the property of a variety of landlords, some admirable and most not. On 12 June 1997, the residents of Eigg finally took possession of the island, after paying 1.5 million pounds to the last landlord...

Muck, which lies about two and a half miles from Eigg, measures only two miles by one and is the most fertile of the Small Isles. About 160 people left there in 1828 and sailed across the Atlantic on the ship St. Lawrence, landing at Ship Harbour (now Port Hawkesbury) on the west side of Cape Breton Island. This ship also carried about fifty people from Rum. The present population of Muck is about twenty souls. The Island is called in Gaelic Eilean nam Muc (Isle of the Sow), probably after the porpoises (Muc Mara) which were once very common in the surrounding seas.

In 1821 the Small Isles had a population of 1,620 people. This was probably a peak, for by 1843 most of the native people were gone, either because of voluntary emigration or due to forced clearances. Actually, some people had left for Eigg for Prince Edward Island in 1772. Most of the Small Isles people went to Cape Breton and other parts of North America. A small number went to Australia.

So much for this short description of the MacDougalls' homeland; now for the people themselves."

Allan Gillis goes on to talk of his mother's clan, the MacDougalls of Cape Breton:

"Our MacDougalls were often referred to locally as 'the Kellaigs", a name derived from the Gaelic word ceallag. [Other authorities believe that the name is of ecclesiastical origin]. This sounds almost the same as the adjective cealg meaning sly or devious. When I questioned my grandaunt, Maggie Belle (MacDougall) Gillis and her cousin Annie 'Neil Peter' MacDougall about this in 1968 they could think of no reason why their people would have had such a bad reputation. However, they may have forgotten that the noun ceallag means a homemade jury anchor fashioned from a rock bound with sticks of wood. In Newfoundland this type of anchor is called a 'killick'. This was also the term used for an able-bodied seaman in the British and Canadian navies whose badge was an anchor entwined with ropes. My uncle Dan Robert MacDougall had this rank in the RCNVR in WWII and was, unknowingly, a double 'killick'."

I'll continue with Allan Gillis' story of his MacDougall relatives next time. For those readers who may not know Allan, he is a cousin of the late violinist Wilfred Gillis of Arisaig, Nova Scotia and the father of Duncan Gillis who, with his wife, organizes the Cape Breton Ceilidhs in Ottawa.
