Barn, cattle lost in $600,000 blaze

by Bruce Hayes

LAGGAN—Damage from a barn fire Wednesday at a Laggan area farm could climb to as high as $600,000.

Alexandria firefighters were called to Dalagra Farms, owned by Ralph MacSweyn, who runs it with brothers Rhondo and Barry, at 11:42 a.m. for what they thought was a silo fire. When they arrived on the scene, they found the barn engulfed in flames.

Fire Chief Gerry Charlebois said the fire is believed to have started in the west end of the barn, near an elevator. He speculated that the fire could have been caused by an electrical malfunction, but admitted the actual cause might never be known.

Mr. MacSweyn, who had last been in the barn for the morning milking, had been in the basement of his house trying to unclog a drain. Neighbors noticed the smoke coming out of the top of the silo and drove to the farm to alert Mr. MacSweyn.

They succeeded in rescuing 53 of Mr. MacSweyn's estimated herd of 165 head, with the rest perishing in the blaze.

In addition to the loss of the animals, Mr. MacSweyn said early this week he also lost a 125 h.p. tractor and a manure spreader. Two cement silos in the rear of the barn will likely have to be torn down and replaced and a nearby harvester also suffered damage.

"It's going to have to be a complete rebuilding job," Mr. MacSweyn said Monday. "We'll have to dismantle everything."

In addition to keeping the fire from spreading to other buildings, firefighters had other headaches to contend with. A spark from the blaze ignited a bush and grass fire approximately a quarter of a mile from the barn. Mr. Charlebois said he dispatched men to the second fire and they were able to extinguish it in time.

While the future is still uncertain, Mr. MacSweyn said he will probably rebuild, adding that insurance will only cover part of the loss.

"You're never adequately covered," he said. "We were partially insured. We probably will be rebuilding, it's our livelihood."

A benefit dance for the MacSweyns will be held in Maxville on Saturday, April 27 starting at 9 p.m. Those wishing to make donations should make cheques payable to the MacSweyn Brothers Fire Fund.

More parents fighting principal transfers

It appears that Glen Robertson area parents aren't the only ones upset with the SD&G Roman Catholic Separate School Board over plans to transfer principals.

On March 25 the board announced it would transfer, effective September 1985, some of its elementary school principals.

Immediately parents of students attending Glen Robertson's Ecole Laurier Carriere protested the transfer of principal Gilles Joanette to Ecole Ste. Therese in North Lancaster.

The parents are circulating petitions and a delegation plans to present a brief to the board at its April 23 meeting in Cornwall.

Now parents of students attending Ecole Ste. Therese in North Lancaster are mounting a campaign to keep their principal, Donald Menard.

Mr. Menard, who has been at the school for 17 years, the last 11 as principal, is to be transferred by the board to another school. A board spokesman said the school Mr. Menard will be teaching at has not yet been determined.

Roger Claude, chairman of the school committee, said parents held a meeting March 19 and formed a committee to convince the board not to transfer Mr. Menard.

"We asked him if he wanted to stay and he said yes," Mr. Claude said. "He said if he couldn't stay as a principal he'd even be agreeable to stay as a teacher."

Members of the committee have been gathering names on a

OMB approves Glen Robertson water

LOCHIEL—The Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) has approved a communal well system for Glen Robertson, paving the way to cleaning up the community's longstanding water and sewage problems.

Lochiel Township Council announced the board's decision during its April meeting.

The decision followed an OMB hearing held December 3 to consider objections to the proposal from several affected property owners. All property owners along the route of the new water main will now be required to hook up to the system.

"Council is very pleased the the decision", commented Reeve Ron MacDonell. "It's something that has been dragging for a long time."

In October 1978 council requested the Ontario Ministry of Environment to do an initial survey of the water situation in Glen Robertson. Following the Ministry's findings Kostuck Engineering, an Ottawa-based firm, was hired to do an in-depth study. In the fall of 1979 Kostuck began its private services funding study.

By December 1981 Kostuch had completed its final report. Water samples indicated a cross-flow of septic systems into wells. Some solutions were outlined in the report. New wells could be installed as well as septic systems. A commercial well system would rectify the existing water problems.

Initially the communal well system was to be a voluntary program. However, some people started to pull out after volunteering to take part. Consequently, costs for others went way out of line. This also caused a delay in an early completion of the project.

In September 1983, after council met with residents of Glen Robertson, it was decided to make the well system mandatory.

Another delay ensured objections were forwarded to the OMB. In March of last year Kostuch submitted all the application forms pertaining to the project to the board. The board had to

Medals for firefighters

Two Alexandria firefighters will be presented with long service medals at a ceremony to be held in Kingston in late May.

Fire Chief Gerald A. Charlebois and Assistant Chief James Graham will be among an estimated 4,000 firefighters across the province to be recognized for their years of dedication and service.

Mr. Charlebois joined the department in July of 1957 and became chief on January 1, 1970. Mr. Graham joined in December of 1956 and became assistant chief on January 1, 1970.

Peterson says Liberals would put an end to Eastern Ontario neglect

by Bruce Hayes

AVONMORE — As expected, Morrisburg Reeve William Dillabough was selected to lead the Liberals in SD&G in the upcoming May 2 provincial election.

Mr. Diilabough, a former United Counties warden, was unchallenged at the April 9 meeting in Avonmore.

Ontario Liberal leader David Peterson, guest speaker for the evening, continued to pound away on the theme that this area of the province is ignored at Queen's Park.

"You don't need to tell me that Eastern Ontario has had more than its fair share of indifference and neglect," he said. "You don't need me to tell you about the nearsighted approach Queen's Park takes to your problems. If they can't see you from the top of the CN Tower, you don't exist as far as they are concerned."

Mr. Peterson, who was last in the riding during the December 1983 byelection, promised that a Liberal government would ensure that agriculture receives a fair share of the budget, saying a Liberal government would have stood up to the Americans when they imposed a duty on Canadian hogs being exported south of the border.

He also hammered away at the Conservatives record on tile drainage loans, saying that the government has its priorities backwards on the subject.

Mr. Dillabough, reeve of Morrisburg for the past 10 years, has served on counties council for the past decade. He is a member of the Legion, the Masonic Lodge and has been on the board of directors of Sport Canada for the past four years.

In his speech to the convention, Mr. Dillabough said the Conservatives, having been in power in Ontario for 42 years, have become "too arrogant and too self-serving and too sanctimonious.

"We have had 42 years of Conservative government in this province and 118 years of Conservative representation in SD&G," he said. "Ontario deserves a breath of fresh air and a current of new and fresh ideas to wash out the old. In other words, we need a complete house cleaning in Ontario and what better time to clean house than in the springtime."

Mr. Dillabough criticized the government for permitting Ontario Hydro to run up a debt of $23 billion, he accused the government of "losing faith in a most valuable and dear asset" by failing to properly fund education, and he called cutbacks in the health care system a legacy of Premier Frank Miller.

Locally, he called for better provincial highways, more jobs and higher road subsidies to municipalities.

"I want to continue to serve these three United Counties," he said. "I want to be part of the Peterson team at Queen's Park. With your help and support, we together, can make that happen, and bring about the change so long overdue in Ontario."

Derstroff says NDP would ease municipal tax load

by Phil Rutherford

FINCH—The Ontario Government should assume 100 per cent of the costs of education, social services and health care, relieving property taxpayers of what has become an unreasonably heavy burden, New Democratic Party candidate Rudy Derstroff said Saturday night.

Speaking to a small group of supporters gathered in the Legion Hall just west of Finch, Mr. Derstroff said municipal councils have been forced to cut back on what they consider important services in order to avoid "bankrupting the local taxpayer."

School boards have been forced to cut back in essential areas, such as remedial classes, he added, while social workers are so overworked they can do no more than administrate the welfare system, instead of getting into the field and counselling families in need of help.

At the same time, the province should increase the budgets for education, social services and other "people" services, he added.

An NDP government would take quick action on all of this, he said, and would also move to phase out OHIP premiums, which he feels amounts to an unreasonable tax on lower income families.

Recognizing such measures would sharply increase government spending, Mr. Derstroff insisted all the money required could be had simply by plugging unfair loopholes in the tax system that benefit large corporations and wealthy individuals.

The tax system is becoming increasingly unfair, he charged, quoting statistics that indicate the corporate share of the tax dollar has declined from 26 per cent in 1961 to eight per cent in 1984, while the share paid by individual taxpayers has soared from 16 per cent to 28 per cent.

"We are losing at least $1 billion a year through corporate give-aways," said Derstroff. "It's time the big corporations were told to pay their fair share.

"It's getting worse, because we've got an insensitive government that is out of tune with the realities of today."

The NDP candidate said his party would move to peg interest rates at a reasonable level, perhaps as low as eight per cent, to give a boost to the construction industry, where jobs can be most easily created, and to help farmers.

The low interest rate would be available only for those who genuinely needed it, he said, and would apply to a limited amount of principal.

The system of assessing property for municipal tax purposes should be revamped to take into account the amount of revenue properties can generate, instead of their market values, he said.

$10,000 burglary in Kenyon

Maxville OPP are investigating a break-in at a Kenyon Township residence that resulted in the theft of approximately $10,000 in merchandise.

On April 8, George Zucchi of Ottawa, reported a break-in at his weekend residence, located at Lot 29 Concession 4.

Missing are a considerable quantity of household furniture, guns and tools. Cst. Jim Brown is investigating.

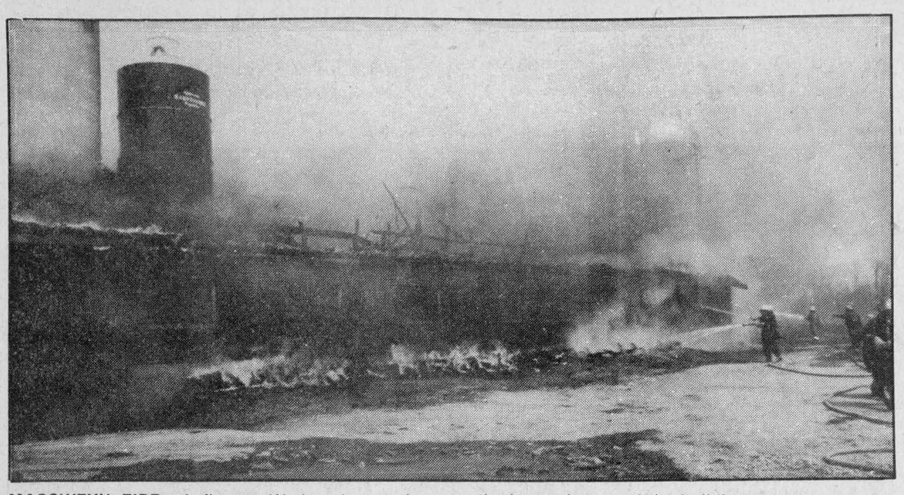
Sometime between April 8 and 13, a shed, belonging to Maynard Gertler of RR 1 Williamstown, was entered and a substantial quantity of goods removed.

Police are on the lookout for a red Massey-Ferguson diesel tractor, a rotary cutter, a riding mower, two self-propelled lawn mowers, a chainsaw and two socket sets.

Police say Mr. Gertler was away from home at the time of the incident.



MACSWEYN FIRE—A fire on Wednesday at the Laggan area farm of Ralph MacSweyn kept Alexandria firefighters busy for five hours. The fire, which is believed to have started in the west end of the barn, destroyed the building, some machinery and almost all of Mr. MacSweyn's herd of Holsteins.

Moose Creek woman killed in collision

MOOSE CREEK—A 37-year-old Moose Creek woman was killed instantly April 9 when the car she was driving collided with a VIA passenger train.

Sharon Rombough of Lot 144 Concession 7 Roxborough, was the sole occupant of the 1984 Plymouth Horizon when it collided with the Ottawa-bound train. The accident occurred at a level crossing less than one mile from Mrs. Rombough's home, south of Moose Creek.

A Long Sault OPP spokesman said there are no barriers at the level crossing, but the flashing red lights were in operation at the time of the accident. The spokesman also said the train, driven by Montreal area resident Yvan Chenier, had its light on and the whistle was sounding.

The spokesman did not know how fast the train was going at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Rombough was declared dead at the scene by Coroner Dr. Gabriel Slowey of Chesterville.

Dr. Slowey said a coroner's inquest would not be held into the accident.

"So far there is no indication an inquest is warranted," he said. "The incident itself is enough to warn people without having to go through a three hour inquest."

Cst. Hall Hamilton, the investigating officer, said Mrs. Rombough had been on her way to pick up her daughter from a babysitter when the accident occurred. He said the train goes through the area the same time every day and Mrs. Rombough might not have been paying as much attention as she should have been.

"There's no real indication why the accident happened," Cst. Hamilton said. "except she obviously wasn't paying attention. The engineer said he saw her coming and he expected her to stop and she just didn't."

Mrs. Rombough was born on May 22, 1947, the daughter of Lloyd and Vivian Seguin. She is survived by husband Earl and daughter Brandi.

Visitation was at the Brownlee Funeral Home in Finch with the funeral service on Friday, April 12 at 2 p.m. in the chapel. Interment followed at the Williamsburg Union Cemetery.

Derstroff says . . .

The NDP candidate even took time in an interview to offer some praise to Conservative incumbent Noble Villeneuve, while continuing to criticize the government.

"The problem isn't with Noble," said Mr. Derstroff. "It's with the PC government. If he could, he would do a lot for the riding, but he's blocked by Queen's Park.

"Noble works hard, but his ability is limited by the PC outlook. They're not ready to help low income people. For all his good intentions, he's not going to produce the policies we need here.

"He may have genuine concern for the individual, but he has no backing from the central organization at Queen's Park."

Mr. Derstroff promised the NDP would be fighting for major reforms "to make the system fair and just for everyone."

Town gives approval to cable bid

by Bruce Hayes

Town council has given approval in principle to a plan that would see a cable television service installed in Alexandria.

At its April 9 meeting, council met with representatives of DL Cable Services of Embrun, who have expressed an interest in bringing cable to the town.

On March 19 the firm wrote to the Town, asking for a long term lease on a small parcel of land located directly behind the municipal fire hall on Kenyon Street. The land would be used for a small building, a receiving tower and a satellite dish.

While council members seemed interested in the company's proposal, agreement couldn't be reached on the terms of a lease. The matter has been referred to the property committee and a decision is expected soon.

Company President Daniel Clement said Alexandria offers a potential cable market for between 1,400 and 1,500 homes, but the company could make the project pay for itself with as few as 200 subscribers.

Mr. Clement said the project could not proceed until the issue of an land lease was settled. An application to operate a service must be made to the Canadian Radio, Television and Telecommunications (CRTC) and that can't be done until the firm has a site and has done a system design.

"We have to know where the system will start," Mr. Clement said. "We can't plan the design until we know where we are going to be."

The company plans to erect a self-supporting tower, between 30 and 50 feet in height, to pick up some American and Canadian channels and the satellite dish will receive additional signals from an orbiting Canadian satellite.

Some councillors expressed concern that the base might create interference with existing television signals, but Mr. Clement said the cable service would not cause any such problems.

"The base just takes whatever signal is there," he said, "The satellite dish just catches whatever is thrown its way, it doesn't put out any signal."

The monthly subscription fee for the service has yet to be determined, but Mr. Clement said he felt it would be competitive with similar services offered in Cornwall and Hawkesbury.

While the company hopes to start signing up customers soon, Mr. Clement admitted it could still be some time before cable arrives in Alexandria.

"The CRTC has to approve everything," he said. "It could take six months, if everything goes well. There's still a lot of red tape to go through."

petition that will be presented to the board at its April 23 meeting. Of the parents contacted so far, he said, only three refused to sign.

Mr. Claude said Mr. Menard is a good principal, the students like him and he feels he's worth fighting for.

"The kids from Grade 8 say they are happy with him," he said. "They tell me they wish they could have him for high school. They really like him."

Mr. Claude said the principal shows uncommon dedication to his job. While teachers perform lunch hour supervision on a rotating basis, Mr. Menard supervises every lunch hour.

While the response from area parents has been good, Mr. Claude admits the chances of changing the board's mind might not be good.

"I'm hoping the chances are 50-50," he said. "Even though the odds might be against us, we feel it's worth it if we can keep him."

approve the expenditures before any work could be done on the water system.

A hearing was called for December 3. The board did not contact council with its decision until early this month, more than one year following the first contact.

Council will be meeting with Fern Decaire from Kostuch Engineering to discuss the process for going to tender. Mr. Decaire will be outlining plans for the well system at the April 19 special meeting.

"We are hoping to call tenders in late May," said Don Lishman, an engineer from Kostuch, on Friday. "It is hoped construction will begin in mid-June. It should be finished in September."

Geoffrion named to principal's position

by Bruce Hayes

A new principal has been named for Alexandria's Ecole Secondaire Regionale Glengarry.

Collin Geoffrion, currently vice-principal at Avonmore's Tagwi Secondary School, will take over the position in September, replacing the retiring Rene Gauthier.

Mr. Geoffrion, 36, was born and raised in Cornwall. He still lives there, along with his wife and two children.

His teaching career began in 1972 when he joined the staff at General Vanier Secondary School. In 1978 he spent one semester at Char-Lan District High School as co-ordinator of the French programs. In January of 1978 he served as associate department head of Francais at La Citadelle, before taking over as vice-principal at Tagwi in 1981.

Mr. Geoffrion said he was pleased to get the job and considered it a challenge. While he hasn't had any experience with two-panel schools, he has had experience working with English and French teachers at General Vanier, Char-Lan and Tagwi.

"I have worked with different types of staff," he said. "Here we have English and French and I think (that experience) is an asset."

NEW PRINCIPAL—Collin Geoffrion has been named the new principal of Alexandria's Ecole Secondaire Regionale Glengarry. Mr. Geoffrion, currently vice-principal at Avonmore's Tagwi Secondary School, will replace the retiring Rene Gauthier.

A meeting has already been set up between Mr. Gauthier, Mr. Geoffrion and board officials to go over the principal's duties. While he said this was his first assignment as a principal, he was looking forward to the challenge of the job.

"I've always been interested in French education," he said. "This will be an opportunity to move into a complete French environment."

Councillor worried about street

Crossing certain sections of Alexandria's Main Street is hazardous for pedestrians and one town councillor thinks something needs to be done about it.

Councillor James Baker brought up the subject at council's April 9 meeting. He said heavy traffic on Main Street, from the Bank of Nova Scotia south, spells trouble for pedestrians crossing the road.

"To me it's terrible," Mr. Baker said. "It's just asking for trouble."

Mr. Baker said part of the problem is due to the fact that there isn't a place to safely cross the street between the traffic lights located at the corner of Main and Kenyon and Main and Lochiel.

"I've seen people walk all the way up to the bank (Main and Kenyon) to cross with the lights and then have to walk all the way back down to get to the post office," he said. "Even teenagers are scared stiff to go across.

Cassidy slams Conservative government priorities

by Phil Rutherford

FINCH—The Ontario Government, like its federal counterpart, is too pre-occupied with reducing its deficit, at the expense of the unemployed and low income families, Ottawa Centre MP Mike Cassidy told a small group of New Democratic Party supporters outside Finch Saturday evening.

A former leader of the Ontario NDP, Mr. Cassidy was elected to the House of Commons in the federal election last September. He was in SD&G Saturday to support Rudy Derstroff, his party's candidate in the May 2 Ontario election.

In every election since 1971 the governing Conservatives have asked for a strong mandate in order to fight unemployment, said Mr. Cassidy, but the number of Ontario residents without work rose steadily through four elections, from 3.5 per cent 14 years ago to nine per cent today.

"Now they say they have to deal with the deficit first," said Mr. Cassidy. "Jobs are the number one priority with the NDP, but they have been put to one side by the Tories."

He used the NDP government of Manitoba as an example of effective action to create jobs.

"In Manitoba the NDP said it would bring unemployment down two per cent in one year and they did it, with a wide range of programs, while unemployment was rising in every other province in Canada. The same initiatives here could create 100,000 jobs."

The MP called for radical reform of the tax system, both nationally and provincially, arguing low and middle income Canadians are forced to pick up an unfair share of the load. As an example, he said the Bank of Nova Scotia pays tax based on a rate significantly lower than the rate faced by its lowest paid tellers.

He called for a minimum tax on the rich, while plugging wasteful tax loopholes that unreasonably benefit large corporations.

"Most of us are prepared to pay our taxes, but it would be a lot easier if we knew others were paying their fair share, as well," said Mr. Cassidy. With a fair tax system, he added, "we could create tens if not hundreds of millions of dollars in additional revenue."

He went on to criticize the Ontario government for "coddling" large corporations that continue to pollute the environment.

"It's time the polluters were told to clean up their mess," he said. "We haven't even got clean water here. We are still a major contributor to acid rain. The NDP would clean it up."

The NDP would pass legislation forcing employers to pay women at the same rate as men for equal work, he said, criticizing both the Conservatives and the Liberals for failing to support what he views as simple equality.

"We should be creating jobs and providing training opportunities for women, as well as men, and they should not be limited to traditionally female occupations."

Mr. Cassidy also campaigned for Mr. Derstroff in his first and unsuccessful bid for election in the 1983 byelection that saw Conservative Noble Villeneuve emerge the victor.

RUDY AND MIKE—Rudy Derstroff, NDP candidate for SD&G in the May 2 Ontario election, takes time out from a small rally near Finch Saturday night to talk to guest speaker Mike Cassidy. A former leader of the Ontario NDP, Mr. Cassidy was elected MP for Ottawa-Center in the September federal election.

Street lights for Lochiel

LOCHIEL—Ten new street lights will be installed in Lochiel Township this year. Township council gave its authorization for the new lights to Ontario Hydro during its regular April 9 meeting.

Three lights will be installed in the new MacLeod Subdivision east of Alexandria, two in Glen Robertson and five in Dalkeith.

Emile Beaudette from Ontario Hydro recommended the new lights, based on an inspection he conducted with Dolan Wylie, Lochiel roads superintendent.

Council will be responsible for all costs.

EDITORIALS/OPINION

The debate is on

Noble Villeneuve, with the help of at least one Lochiel Tory, managed to knock the foundation out from under one editorial this week.

It was already written, typeset and proofread by Monday evening, ready for publication in today's paper. In the editorial we attempted to take a strip off the Conservative incumbent for not being available for all-candidates debates in the riding.

He was compared to Premier Frank Miller, who has chosen to run away from the prospect of a televised debate with opposition party leaders. They were damaging the spirit of democracy, we said. Every political candidate and party leader should feel obligated to put himself to the test in a public debate.

We went on to suggest that it was likely Mr. Villeneuve's campaign handlers were the ones blocking the possibility of a debate.

By late Monday evening the editorial was in the wastebasket, however. Apparently Mr. Villeneuve instructed his campaign organizers to make room in his schedule for a debate.

This was followed by a call from the campaign manager committing the Conservatives to a meeting this Sunday at 8 p.m., pending agreement from the Liberal and NDP opponents and availability of the hall.

As of this writing, just shy of midnight on Monday, the debate appeared to be on.

So much for a good editorial. It sounded so much more strident than this one.

Farmers face high risks

Last week's fire that destroyed a large barn and killed more than 120 purebred Holstein cattle on a farm owned by Ralph MacSweyn near Laggan underscored anew the high risks faced by today's farmers.

The loss in the latest fire is well over half a million dollars and may exceed $600,000. To those not familiar with the expenses and investment involved in modern agriculture, that figure may seem astounding.

Times have changed. While mechanization may have made the life of a farmer somewhat easier than it was a generation or more ago, the hours remain long. The heaviest load, however, centres on money. Million dollar farms are not unusual anymore.

Cattle may cost as much as $2,000 each and milk quota, effectively a license to sell a farm's dairy production, now costs more than the cows do. Good quality farm land brings top dollars, pushed still higher by non-farm people moving to the country.

It's easy to pay $35,000 to $50,000 for a single tractor and other equipment carries similar price tags. The cost of silos seems to run as high as the structures themselves.

It's no wonder that young people find it impossible to start farming today unless they're fortunate enough to assume an existing operation from their parents.

Many farms carry a far bigger investment than most small businesses. Yet the return on investment can be insulting. Too often, farm products carry prices that are not high enough to cover the costs of production.

And we come back to the risks. Few businesses are as vulnerable to weather as farming. A bad season can leave the healthiest farmers in a tight position. Weaker farmers, primarily newer farmers and those who have expanded and must carry larger debt loads, can be put out of business by an excessively wet or dry growing season.

A barn fire, like the one experienced by the MacSweyns and other area farmers in the past year, can easily put an operation into bankruptcy over night.

We're left wondering why so many people choose farming as their life's work. We're fortunate that they do.

The hard work and high risks involved contribute to a sense of community that is all but unheard of in even the smallest urban setting. When one farmer is hit by fire, it is common to see dozens of other farmers rush to his aid. Nearly everyone is willing to pick up hammer and saw and put an unfortunate farmer back into business. No amount of insurance is better than good neighbors.

We wish the MacSweyns success and all possible speed in rebuilding.

Assessment horror stories

Market value assessment; three words heard more and more frequently as municipal councils weigh the pros and cons of revamping the method by which they assign shares of the municipal tax burden to individual property owners.

Most people don't understand what it's all about and even more are frightened by horror stories they've heard from other communities where market value assessment has been installed.

In principle, the new system has merit in that it promises to eliminate most of the inequity in the current system. Currently, owners with homes of equal value may actually be paying substantially different tax bills simply because one house is older than the other.

In some municipalities industrial and commercial property owners may not be paying their fair share in comparison to residential taxpayers.

It's obvious that some action is needed to ensure a system that remains fair to all taxpayers.

The answer may not be to jump immediately to market value assessment, however. The question requires careful research and a clear knowledge of how property owners will be affected before any change should be approved.

Up Highway 43 in the Town of Smiths Falls what a narrow majority of councillors felt would be a move for the better has turned into a horrendous nightmare.

According to a front page article in The Smiths Falls Record News, tax bills for some businesses have jumped between 30 per cent and 700 per cent, with dollar increases of $25,000, $30,000 and more. One small businessman saw his minor tax bill of $149 jump to more than $500.

Most of the councillors who were in favor of the system in January are now having second thoughts. They had no idea, they say, that there would be such increases. It may be too late for second thoughts.

We'd hate to see the same mess in Glengarry.

Obviously, our municipal councillors would be negligent in their duties if they did not take some action to correct the many inequities that exist in the current assessment system. Market value assessment may be the answer if we are prepared to reassess regularly. But it is not reasonable to make wholesale changes overnight.

Some property owners, gouged unfairly for years, would see their taxes drop sharply, while others, including those who may have had a break in the past, could see monstrous increases they simply can't afford to pay.

The new system could also hamper industrial and commercial growth, so essential to employment and the general economy of the community.

Whatever decisions are eventually taken by each council, they should not be made without full appreciation of the consequences to the hardest hit property owners.

We have a sidewalk that's an insult to St. Paul

RAMBLING REPORTER
Eugene Macdonald

It's about that time of year when local councils are thinking about their summer roads programs and it behooves us to repeat a suggestion we made to our town fathers some time last year.

Take a walk down St. Paul street to St. Finnan's, we suggested to town councillors. You'll be trodding the crummiest sidewalk in town, we pointed out, with the suggestion that something should be done about that eyesore this year.

We trust Mayor Touchette and his henchmen took us up on it without stubbing their toes or stumbling over one of the numerous breaks in pavement or asphalt. Yes, we have a bit of both surfaces on this poor excuse for a walk and it's hard to say which is the more broken up and unsightly.

This is an insult St. Paul should not have to put up with. Take a stroll dear members of council! and take action!

And talking of walks brings us to the subject of walkouts and the threat of blackouts we faced last week when Hydro employees staged a wildcat strike at Ontario's nuclear power plants.

The walkout was illegal but nevertheless effective in threatening residents of the province with power interruptions. Hydro was sent scrambling for alternate supplies of power and there were plans for brief rotating interruptions across Ontario even as power users were asked to cut down on consumption.

It was a sorry prospect but we escaped actual blackouts as Hydro got stuck for some $10 million of extra costs for supplies of standby power. Those millions will probably have to be absorbed by us Hydro consumers and we like the suggestion in a Citizen editorial that the union should be made to pay any costs involved.

Hydro is an essential service, the editorial points out, as are police and fire protection. As such it rates a ban on strikes and we rather like the suggestion that it would be fitting if the Hydro workers got a bit of their own medicine by having the power to their homes cut off. After all, they are using blackmail as a weapon when they hold all power users as pawns, just as post-office workers even now are threatening again to tie up the nation's postal service.

There may be a place for unions, but certainly the strike threat has outlived its usefulness. Especially should it be removed from people on the public payroll.

P.S.—A news report from town council brings word that our town fathers have plans for providing a face-lift for St. Paul Street. The above reference was already in type and so we add our felicitations to the members of council.

The Derstroff campaign - tilting at windmills

SECOND LOOK
Phil Rutherford

Noble Villeneuve, the Conservative incumbent running for his first full term as MPP for Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, will be easily returned in the May 2 Ontario election.

Keeping in mind the Conservative tradition in this riding and Noble's stunning victory in his 1983 byelection, it's hardly astounding to predict his easy return. The fact that he is not revealing overconfidence and is prepared to work hard throughout the campaign speaks well of the man.

Behind Mr. Villeneuve and a natural for his party's traditional second spot, is Liberal candidate Bill Dillabough of Morrisburg. The Liberals' only real chance at winning the riding in the past 40 years was in the 1983 byelection. They went down in flames before a high-flying Villeneuve campaign, instead.

Coming in a distant third, as usual, is the New Democratic Party. More of a social movement than a political party, the NDP has never caught on in this area. They have little hope of winning for another generation, at least.

None of this is news to Rudy Derstroff, a social activist of sorts making his second run at the provincial seat. Rudy, a bus driver for OC Transpo and a municipal councillor in Chesterville, knows full well he will not win this election.

Why does he bother? He's a quiet family man who displays none of the partisan fervor we've come to expect from Liberal and Conservative stalwarts. He's no great orator or gladhander. He almost seems out of place in politics.

But when he speaks his audiences can detect a real passion in his voice. He speaks with concern about the little people in the system; the people he feels have not been given their fair shake in society, people who have been ignored and exploited by government.

He's an idealist; an ordinary man striving for a perfect world. As such, he's doomed to disillusionment and frustration.

I listened to him speak to a gathering of NDP supporters, the real stalwarts, during a meeting Saturday night in the Legion Hall just outside of Finch. It was a small room, but the attendance seemed smaller.

These are obviously people who don't expect any rewards out of their political involvement. They are prepared to put themselves on the line, however, on behalf of a political philosophy they believe in. But there were fewer than 20 of them. That is not a number election victories are made of.

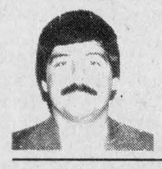
They have a different style of campaign; low key in the extreme. There's no desk pounding or name calling.

Rudy Derstroff even takes time in an interview to praise his Conservative opponent for being a well-meaning, hard-working MPP.

Rudy Derstroff is campaigning this time around, his second election in less than two years, in spite of serious health problems. The man should be home in his bed instead of attending political meetings. That's dedication and all in support of what is bound to be a fruitless cause.

To repeat yet again a too often repeated remark, it's unfortunate there can only be one winner. Noble Villeneuve has been a hard-working and concerned representative for SD&G. There's no doubt in my mind, however, that Rudy Derstroff would do us proud as well.

Silliness on the bubbly front



NOTEBOOK
Bruce Hayes

It seems one is hard pressed in these times of ours to turn on a television set or open a newspaper without reading of some new, armed conflict.

If it isn't the Iran-Iraq war (yes that's still playing to standing room audiences) it's South American guerillas who are threatening to lop off fingers from their countrymen if they should be caught exiting the polling booth.

But what's this cresting the horizon? It's a new slugfest that's being waged on our own soil, in our living rooms every day and all through the night.

It's (suitable drumroll please), soft drink wars.

Yes, from the people who brought you the Pepsi generation and who implored us to trust our own taste, an all-out war is being waged, not for the hearts and minds of consumers, but for their tastebuds.

A recent newspaper article chronicles the bubbling campaign so far. One side lobbed the famous taste test and industry surveys into enemy trenches. The enemy gathered its forces, regrouped and hurled back a withering salvo of celebrity endorsements.

It seems that your average Mr. and Mrs. Consumer have been lost in the star wars soft drink battles. Day after day we're bombarded with people telling us how great this soft drink is or why this other soft drink is chosen by more Canadians.

Let's see, there's unsuccessful vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro (I guess it isn't that much of a change from flogging yourself to flogging something in a can), Michael Jackson, Bill Cosby, Lionel Ritchie and we can't forget the entire Canadian heavy metal trio Triumph.

And then, when you think you just can't take it anymore, when you think if you see one more soft drink ad you'll be sent screaming into the night, comes the uncola.

You know the one I mean. The ad that features a big black man who always dresses in white with a big, floppy Panama hat. Now when he tells me I should be drinking the uncola, I feel I should do as I'm told. He looks like the sort of guy who could rip off a bottle cap with his fingers.

Now I'm not exactly what you would call a major participant in this battle. I'll drink the occasional cola, but mainly I managed to keep the makers of tonic water from declaring bankruptcy.

It's always struck me as being rather strange that with abundant supplies of both water and milk, North Americans insist on drinking what amounts to little more than flavored and carbonated water with a great deal of artificial taste and color thrown in

I can remember back to when I was a little tyke and soft drinks were something I was only allowed on special occasions. Too much sugar in it, I was told. So, on birthdays or when people came to visit, it was always special because I was allowed to have a soft drink and feel grown up. What I didn't realize was that the adults weren't drinking unadulterated soft drinks, but that's another story.

And what kid hasn't made himself a couple of extra bucks by combing the ditches for empty pop bottles? And what did we buy with our bottle deposit money? That's right, more pop.

In spite of all the pressure to drink this or that brand, I think I'll listen to my teeth and my waistline and I'll make mine milk.

WEEKLY OPINIONS

From other newspapers

Since 1985 is the final year of the three-year terms under which our municipal councils were elected it would be wise to give some thought to whether or not councillors and the voting public are actually in favor of such long terms in office.

No doubt the longer terms are advantageous in some ways. New councillors have a greater opportunity to become knowledgeable about municipal affairs; working committees have more time to organize and carry out their policies

There are, however, definite disadvantages inherent in the three-year term, not the least of which is that many good potential councillors are unwilling to commit themselves to three years of public service. During the past year we have read of many resignations from municipal councils by people who found it impossible to serve for the complete three-year term. After all, a seat on a local council does not pay the sort of money which will compensate a member for sacrificing his own business or personal interests should such a decision be required.

One-year terms, we agree, are too brief, but with the two-year terms which prevailed until 1982, there was ample time for the voters to determine whether or not new or sitting councillors should be returned to office. In the final analysis the length of term should be determined by local voters, who know something about local conditions, rather than by some committee of the provincial government in Toronto.

Pipe smoking is worse than you might think

Dalkeith, Ont.

The editor,
The Glengarry News:

Dear Mr. Rutherford:

Your comments on pipe smoking, under the caption "Second Look" in the April 10, 1985 issue of The Glengarry News, in which you state you are "not concerned about health problems associated with pipe smoking," leads me to say that you should be deeply concerned; and your readers should not be led to believe that the practice is not injurious.

I started to smoke a pipe in my teens, under the tutelage of the hired man on our farm. I continued thus for about 50 years. My tutor died after a protracted illness due to cancer of the mouth. I developed cancer in my mouth at over 60 years of age. I received a painful course of cobalt irradiation, followed by removal of half my lower jaw, tracheotomy and subsequent cosmetic plastic surgery. Of several contemporary fellow-sufferers from the same malady at the tumour clinic, I am the only survivor, unable to resume my former employment, and with considerable disfigurement. I don't know why I have been spared so long—possibly to warn you, and others like you, of the peril you harbour.

In case you retort that my experience is an isolated one, let me assure you that it is not. It is true that it is not often seen, but that is largely because pipe smoking nowadays is not so prevalent. Two or three generations, and longer, ago it was much more in evidence. The cause was sometimes attributed to the heat of the pipe stem. It was after the association between inhalation of tobacco smoke and lung cancer became apparent that the carcinogenic property of tobacco smoke and tar was recognized. Also, aggressieve promotional advertising of cigarettes displaced much of the market for pipe tobacco. (More money could be made in selling cigarettes, than pipe tobacco.)

Your closing remark that life insurance companies rate pipe smokers as non smokers, is interesting, if true. If so, I advise you, if you persist in pipe smoking, to carry as much life insurance as you deem prudent; and keep in force adequate sickness insurance, which helped me and my family through a difficult time.

Unless you stop smoking, may I suggest your long-suffering wife, whom you mentioned, take a copy of this note, frame it, and display it beside your pipe rack.

Howard Mitchell

P.S. I hope this receives the same prominence as your article.

More cholesterol information

The editor,
The Glengarry News:

It's sad to see so much propaganda on cholesterol. Dr. Peter Hanson tells us the so called experts say eating choesterol is responsible for the fact that we have five times the heart attacks we had in 1910.

When you think about it the cow that produces food high in cholesterol never eats high cholesterol foods. The cow produces it, that is how we get it. Dr. Hanson says he has done open heart surgery on vegetarians whose coronary arteries were plugged with cholesterol.

Obviously people who try to tie products such as butter with heart disease are missing something major, and that is stress. Since 1910 we have been confronted with new stresses that our bodies aren't programmed to defend against.

Pressures such as urban crowding, deadlines, noise pollution, require carefully thought out defence. We know stress is not the enemy—it is how we respond to it. There are people in Georgia, Russia, the Himalayas and South America who routinely live to be 100.

The one thing these diverse societies have in common is stress. The people face increasing stress as they get older since the village elders are responsible for the decisions. This stress gives them a joy of living they would not get in an old age home where we protect them by smothering them.

We must learn to control our stress. During the Korean war some conclusions were drawn when autopsies were performed on Korean and American soldiers. The American boys had high cholesterol, the Koreans were free of it. The analysts figured it had to be the American boys were eating more cholesterol. What they forgot was one key factor—fibre. The people of China and Korea ate high fibre diets, while Americans at that time were eating low fibre diets.

Dr. Hanson states, we manufacture our own cholesterol in the liver, and it goes straight to the gut. If you eat more fibre more of the cholesterol will be taken out of the system. Under stress your cholesterol goes up. It's a good idea to eat more fibre. Ninety-one per cent of the population have nothing to fear. Many fear they have high cholesterol but do not have their doctor test it.

For most people cholesterol won't do them any harm as long as their doctor assures them that their cholesterol profile and their physical examination proves fine and they are eating a balanced diet.

Address please

Calgary, Alberta

The editor,
The Glengarry News:

We would like to congratulate you on the new format the newspaper has taken. It certainly is for the better. We have been away from Alexandria for quite a few years and find the delivery of The News such a good way to keep in touch with home.

We've lived in Calgary for four years now. Little did we know of the existence of The Glengarry Club in Alberta until we read of it in the March 27 issue.

I would like to bring to your attention an important omission that was made on your part. You forgot to put the house number of C. A. Macleod the contact person for the club. His full address is 63 Queen Alexandra Chase S.E., Calgary, T2J 3P9. Without this part of the address I doubt very much if delivery of letters could be made. I have driven around some of the subdivisions in Calgary equipped with an address and a map of the city but still ended up hopelessly lost.

Perhaps you could start a new column in the paper. You have reports from Maxville, Lancaster, etc., how about a report from the Glengarrians around the world wherever they may be? I would have found out about the Glengarry Club in Alberta a lot sooner if that was the case. The first year was rough. It would have been great to speak to someone who had the same experience. Perhaps contact with a familiar face could have been made.

I really have always enjoyed the Old Lang Syne. The photographs you've been running are such a fine idea.

Co-operative education praised at dinner

by Sybil Carello

About 300 people gathered at the Bonnie Glen in Alexandria Monday night, to attend a dinner in recognition of their contributions to co-operative education in SD&G.

One of the opening comments by T.R. Leger, director of the Board of Education, "Education is alive and well, and living in SD&G," set the mood of accomplishment for the workshop-dinner, hosted by Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Board of Education, and co-operative education work related program educators.

Throughout the evening of speeches and praise, one fact was made clear. Co-operative education goes hand in hand with co-operating employers. Its helping hand is directed at the unemployable—that large demographic bulge with three handicaps: absence of practical work skills and experience, incomplete education, lack of necessary re-training.

Co-operative education, with its on-the-job training and in-class instruction, help to close these wide gaps. For instance, if 110 hours is needed to earn a credit in class, double that amount would be required on the job.

To date, the six year old program involves 856 work stations and 450 students of high school age and over. And, too, there are about 50 secondary school teachers who play an active role.

Mr. Leger says the alternative education program was set up in response to young people who, for a number of reasons, do not fit in with the traditional system.

A referral system keeps the teachers in touch with many who have dropped out of school.

"That is not to say we get them all back," explained Mr. Leger. "But we have found that when we link a student with an actual work situation, a spark is lit."

The revitalizing program allows students to work in different job capacities. Very soon, they gain self confidence and are ready to set new, realistic goals.

Mr. Leger credits the success of the program to a number of things. Teachers visit students on the job site and establish an important liaison with the employers. From the onset, expectations are laid up front. Assessment reports reflect the variety of experience gained. Most important, is the co-operating employer who gives of his time.

The educators and the employers provide the real alternative said Mr. Leger. He congratulated the capacity filled room on their ability to face a problem that existed in the area, and turn it into an opportunity.

Of the many employers representing a wide range of businesses and industries, he said: "We could not have provided the setting that you people have given to the students."

John J. Comtois, superintendent of education, spoke of the need for a centre to house the alternative education program. Presently, there are three such centres in Ontario.

Mr. Comtois hopes to see the combined assistance of federal, provincial and municipal governments bring the reality of such a centre into operation by September of 1986.

"I think it would be an asset to the area," he said, stressing it would give young adults a ray of hope by re-training and providing them with an opportunity to finish their education.

SD&G MPP Noble Villeneuve called the project important

His closing guarantee of assistance for the proposed centre sent a wave of applause throughout the room.

Glengarry-Prescott-Russell MP Don Boudria, also praised the program. He noted one of the many positive aspects is the number of young people in the program, who have gone back to school as a result.

"A society," he added, "shows how civilized they are by the way they treat their disadvantaged."

Art Buckland, chairman of the board underlined this with an expression of appreciation to all participants.

Fire department plans safety campaign

MAXVILLE
Sybil Carello

Last Wednesday, when winter hurled another sneaky splat of white powdered abuse, spring fought back with miniature down jackets for all the delicate crocus blooms, and custom-made snow--shoes for the robins. In other words, an apology is duly noted for my presumptuous belief that winter had ceased to roar.

Another fight of a more serious nature, is firefighting; it can happen whatever the weather. When a fire breaks out, every second counts. The time it takes to call the fire department and the speed with which they arrive on the scene, can make all the difference.

Having the fire department number at your fingertips and heart symbol decals on windows designating the locality of a child or elderly person, can add precious time to a firefighter trying to save a life.

To ensure that each house in the village is aided by these devices, Maxville Volunteer fire department plans to launch a campaign April 20. Volunteer firefighter, Bill Munro, said an effort to canvass the entire village will be made. Canvassers too, will make sure that stickers and decals are affixed immediately. Mr. Munro says putting them aside can result in their being misplaced, defeating the purpose of the campaign.

Although the department, as a group, will absorb the cost of the campaign, any contribution, however small, will be appreciated. Mr. Munro is quick to point out that this campaign is not a fundraising activity. The fire department's aim is to increase the awareness of the residents with the stickers and decals.

A Niagara Falls man was taken to hospital early Wednesday morning after the transport truck he was driving turned over.

Lancaster OPP report that Donald Degraaf had been driving the truck, owned by O'Connor Transport Inc., east on Highway 401, west of the Curry Hill interchange, when it went off the edge of the road and flipped over on its right side, coming to rest in the south ditch.

Mr. Degraaf received minor injuries and was taken to Cornwall General Hospital by ambulance. Damage is estimated at $5,000 and the accident was investigated by Cst. Brad Eamer.

Long ago I recall hearing "What is so rare as a day in June." Methinks we might add to that this year "What is so rare as spring in Glengarry." One might wish the calendar and weatherman would reach an agreement. As we pondered on this week's column the radio blared forth the news predicting a chance of snow flurries. Thankfully they didn't materialize and warmer weather seems to have moved in—but is it here to stay?

Early risers in Glen Robertson on Easter Sunday morning were a little startled to see two horses strolling through town.

It seems Liane Ward's horses, Daisy and Christie, a mother and daughter team, decided to explore greener pastures and proceeded westward.

A nearby neighbour, Mrs. Villing, spied the horses in her yard and called the owners. Meanwhile the horses knew exactly where they were going and headed straight for Larocque's Feed Mill, where they were eventually caught by their owners. Oats did you say?

Glen Robertson Guides assisted the Optimist Club on Saturday, when they were in charge of the coat checking at the Sports Palace for the club's presentation of charter night. Proceeds from the coat checking were donated to the Guides and will be used to assist them with camping expenditures this coming summer.

Among the guests at a tea at St. Andrew's United Church in Dalhousie on Saturday were quite a group of Glen Robertson ladies. The tea was sponsored by the UCW of that congregation.

A delicious lunch was served and entertainment was provided by a singing group from Roxboro United Church, Quebec.

Appreciation night held for Mr. Avonmore

by Bruce Hayes

AVONMORE—If there had been one to give, Fred Barkley probably would have been presented with the key to Avonmore on Friday night.

Mr. Barkley, owner of Barkley's Store on the village's Main Street, was honored Friday at the Fred Barkley Appreciation Night, sponsored by the Avonmore Community Athletic Association.

Mr. Barkley, who will turn 72 on Halloween, has operated the tiny general store since 1935, and before that his father Willis ran it from its opening in 1908.

Operating a store, with help from wife Florence and son Murray, for 50 years is in itself an accomplishment, but Mr. Barkley went beyond that, involving himself in many local projects and always lending a hand when it was needed.

Many of Friday's speakers proudly referred to the storekeeper as Mr. Avonmore.

Charles Rielly, the village's postmaster, recalled how, in 1937, he went to work at the store part-time after school. Mr. Rielly said in those days there was no such thing as a self-service store.

"Fred or myself would be behind the counter and you'd walk up and tell the clerk what you wanted," he said. "Of course in those days if you spent $5 you'd have to get your teenage son to help you carry out the groceries."

Long before the advent of computers, Barkley's Store was on an advanced system whereby Mr. Barkley could tell at a glance where a certain item was.

"You'd be looking for something and walking up and down the aisle," he said. "Then you'd ask Fred. He'd tell you to walk three feet ahead, look to your right and it would be right there. He didn't have to spend any money on computers, Fred is his own computer."

Over the years Mr. Barkley built a solid reputation as a merchant who offered a wide variety of goods and people knew that if you couldn't find an item elsewhere, it would always be available at Barkley's Store.

"Let's say a customer came in for a can of tomatoes and we were out," Mr. Rielly said. "Well, Fred would give me a dime and tell me to run out the side door to buy a can at another store. The customers never knew we had to go to other stores to get them things."

SD&G MPP Noble Villeneuve congratulated Mr. Barkley for his half-century in business, contrasting it with the province's 200th birthday in 1984.

"Last year we celebrated our bicentennial," Mr. Villeneuve said. "While 200 years is a long time, the Barkley family has been in downtown Avonmore for 50 years. That's 25 per cent of the time Ontario has been in existence. That's something really special."

RIDING IN STYLE—The guests of honor for Friday's Fred Barkley Appreciation Night arrived at the Avonmore Community Centre in style. Arnold McIntyre, right, chauffeured Fred and Florence Barkley to the event in a white Lincoln.
Staff Photo—Bruce Hayes

Throughout the years, Mr. Barkley has involved himself in local concerns and projects. In 1947 he was one of the people who revived the Avonmore Public Library Association and from 1947 to 1951 the village's library operated out of Mr. Barkley's study. He has always been active in his church, he is the Roxborough representative to the Maxville Manor and he has served on committees of the Eastern Ontario Health Council.

Roxborough councillor John McIntyre said he too was keenly aware of Mr. Barkley's importance to the community.

"Fred was born the same year the IOOF Hall and the Avonmore High School went up," Mr. McIntyre said. "Both those buildings are gone now and I guess Fred is the only relic left."

After listening to tribute after tribute, Mr. Barkley admitted he was a bit overwhelmed by it all.

"I'd like to offer a sincere word of thanks for the great evening you've given us," he said. "You've given us so many things to think over in the future. After listening to all this praise I'm sure some of you are wondering if this is the same skinflint you've been dealing with all these years. Come next fall I might even run for reeve."

Mr. Barkley praised his father Willis for not only starting the family business,but for instilling in the younger Barkley strong values.

"My father had great attributes for a businessman," he said. "He was honest, dependable and trustworthy. He would not sell something he didn't think suited your needs."

The Avonmore of Mr. Barkley's younger days is substantially different from the village of today. Village residents in the 1930s most likely would have asked a newcomer what their religion and politics were. In the 1980s, Mr. Barkley noted, the questions asked concern VCRs, satellite dishes and recreational vehicles.

"Avonmore has a special charm," he said. "When I walk to the railroad tracks, it pleases me to see the flowers and the well manicured lawns. We have no great mansions and we have no great slums, we have average, well-kept properties."

Although it was the Fred Barkley Appreciation Night, Mrs. Barkley came in for a few words of praise from her husband. His voice cracking with emotion, Mr. Barkley said his wife shows the truth of the axiom of 'Behind every great man is a great woman.'

"In 1945 I did the best day's work in my life and married Florence," he said.

While he had many people to thank for the evening and for 50 successful years in business, he reserved his biggest thanks for some very important people.

"Most of all, thanks to those who made all these things possible, our customers over the years," he said.

ACAA PRESENTATION—The Avonmore Community Athletic Association presented Fred and Florence Barkley with some gifts Friday at the Fred Barkley Appreciation Night. Midget Glens closing banquet caps a remarkable campaign

by Sheila Stewart

The Royal Bank Midget Glens turned out in full force with coaching staff and parents to celebrate their successful season with a closing banquet at the Knights of Columbus hall on Friday, April 12, 1985.

After the sit down chicken dinner, catered by Lanthiers, coach Euclide St. Denis presented members of the team with a trophy and gave the parents a little inside information on each player.

He also made a very generous gesture by giving the Midget Glens green nylon jackets, which they greatly appreciated.

Stephane Gareau presented a token of appreciation to Mrs. St. Denis for keeping their hockey sweaters clean during the season.

She later remarked how happy this made her and would remember the boys every time she looked at it. Trophies were then presented to the assistant coach, Claude Gallant, by Dominic St. Denis, to the manager, Don Campbell, by Michael Daniels and to the coach, Euclide St. Denis, by the team captain, Andrew McCormick.

A beautiful pen and clock trophy was presented to yours truly and it will always be greatly appreciated.

Mayor Touchette, although not present, donated Centennial Alexandria hats for the team.

All things considered the boys had a memorable evening. Dancing got underway with music by Dude and team members with parents and friends seemed to enjoy themselves.

Break dancing by Mrs. St. Denis and Mrs. Stewart, Richard and Michael Daniels was one of the highlights of a very successful evening.

Once again, congratulations to the Midget Glens coaching staff for such a remarkable season.

I would like to wish you all a very happy and healthy summer!

Knights capture championship

BROCKVILLE—It's taken nine years, but Ottawa West Golden Knights finally have the Eastern Ontario Junior B Hockey League championship.

After winning the Valley Division, Ottawa West won the overall title Saturday night against St. Lawrence Division champion Brockville with a 4-3 double-overtime win at the Brockville Memorial Centre.

Ottawa West and Brockville earned berths in the final after posting better records in a round-robin tournament, which included Alex English Division champion Navan Grads.

The champions won the best-of-seven series 4-1. Last year, Metcalfe Jets of the Alex English Division won the championship against the South Ottawa Canadians.

Brian Hepburn was the hero for the Golden Knights Saturday scoring the winner five minutes into the overtime session.

The clubs skated to a 1-1 tie after the opening period and Ottawa West held a slim 2-1 lead after 40 minutes.

Norm Quenneville, of Cornwall who played for the Alexandria Glens two seasons ago, was a member of the Ottawa West club.

He shared the goaltending duties with Marc Titley for the Glens last year.

Awards surprise Pattyn

Close to 400 athletes from across the province received athletic achievement honors at the 18th Annual Provincial Sports Awards Banquet last Friday night at the Sheraton Centre in Toronto.

Well, almost all the athletes received awards.

Alexandria's Johanne Pattyn, winner of the Canadian Women's Powerlifting Championship, knew nothing of the awards night when she was contacted by The News Tuesday morning.

"I never got anything in the mail yet," she said. "I haven't heard anything about it. Talking to you is the first I've heard about it," she added with a chuckle.

The awards are presented annually to Ontario amateur athletes who win individual or team sport titles in national or international competitions.

Ten Glengarry students win at science fair in Cornwall

CORNWALL—Ten Glengarry students were among the winners at the United Counties Science Fair held Saturday at St. Lawrence College in Cornwall.

The Kastack family took all the honors in the fair's electromagnet competition. Rachel Kastack of Char-Lan District High School captured the senior prize, while Gloria and Rebecca Kastack, both of Williamstown Public School, took first and second prize, repectively, in the junior division.

Rachel was back in the spotlight again, taking home a merit award for her science fair project, the "Wandering Monarch," which detailed in words and illustrations the migration habits of the Monarch butterfly.

Another Char-Lan student, Dale Blacker, was given a merit award in the intermediate division for his entry concerning the speed of sound.

A second Kastack, Rebecca this time around, captured fourth place in the junior physical science division for her entry detailing the birth of the moon.

She was followed in fifth place by Paula Siwik of Maxville Senior Public School with her imaginative entry concerning volcanoes.

Larry Thistle and Michael McKinnon, also of Maxville Senior School, shared a merit award in the junior engineering and computers division for their entry entitled, "Gears and Pulleys in Action."

All of the Glengarry winners also took home cash prizes.

Darlene Hall and Sandy Lavigne, Grade 8 students at Ecole Jean XXIII in Cornwall, took top honors, "Best in Fair," for their entry, "Memory versus Reasoning."

They tied with Trevor Hall. No further details were available concerning Trevor and his winning entry.

Police investigating two collisions

Alexandria Police investigated two motor vehicle collisions in the past week, with damages totalling $5,500.

The first accident, reported to police at 8 p.m., Wednesday, April 10, occurred at the intersection of Dominion Street South and Derby Street.

According to the police report, Ronald Aubin, 29, of 395 Dominion Street S., was northbound on Dominion in a 1973 Chevrolet pickup truck when he collided with an eastbound 1985 Pontiac driven by Sheila Tremblay, 45, of Cornwall.

Mrs. Tremblay was charged with failing to yield the right of way when she crossed Dominion Street on Derby.

Damages were estimated at $3,500 to the Pontiac and $500 to the truck.

The second serious accident occurred at 11:40 p.m., Sunday, on Kenyon Street, at the intersection of Ottawa Street.

Apparently, Lorraine Massia, 26, of 120 Kenyon St., was turning onto Kenyon from Ottawa Street when she came into collision with a 1979 Ford driven by Marlene Lacombe, 30, of Concession 7 Kenyon Township. The Lacombe vehicle was westbound on Kenyon Street at the time.

Damages were estimated at $1,500 to the Pontiac and $500 to the Ford.

Mrs. Massia was charged under the Highway Traffic Act with failing to yield the right of way to oncoming traffic.

Man charged with theft

A 38-year-old St. Polycarpe, Quebec man will appear in Alexandria Provincial Court April 25 to face a criminal charge of theft over $200, following an arrest by Alexandria Police April 8.

Police recovered 21 railway ties valued at $18.50 each, after stopping the man's car on Lochiel Street. The ties were found in a trailer behind the car.

While on patrol earlier Cst. Roger Levert had observed the car leaving Canadian National Railway property in Alexandria. Police officials did not want to reveal the exact location.

Fined for impaired

Two men received fines totalling $775 Thursday in Alexandria Provincial Court after pleading guilty to charges of impaired driving.

Jean-Guy Bourgon, 42, of RR2 Green Valley, was fined $275. He was charged January 24 in Charlottenburgh Township.

Court was told the accused was southbound on Highway 34 and crossed the centre line, forcing an OPP officer off the road. Th officer then followed the accused and stopped him.

Mr. Bourgon was taken to the Maxville OPP for a breathalyzer test and his readings were 170 and 160 milligrams of alcohol in 100 ml of blood.

He was given two weeks to pay the fine and had his license suspended for three months.

Richard Rochon, 32, of Cornwall, was fined $500. He was charged March 10 in Charlottenburgh Township.

Court was told an OPP officer saw a vehicle parked on the shoulder of Highway 2.

During the officer's investigation, he saw the accused was unsteady on his feet and had difficulty producing his license for the officer.

He was taken to the Lancaster OPP for a breathalyzer test and had readings of 210 milligrams of alcohol in 100 ml of blood.

He was given three months to pay the fine and had his license suspended for three months.

Death accidental

MAXVILLE — A falling tree branch has been blamed for the Easter weekend death of a well known Maxville area seed dealer.

Robin Fjarlie, 64, of Concession 20, Lot 6 Kenyon, died April 8 at the Ottawa General Hospital from injuries he received in a bush accident the previous morning.

Maxville OPP Cpl. John Mesich said Mr. Fjarlie and his son, Roy had been felling trees in a bush near the family home Sunday morning. Roy had been trimming branches off trees with a chainsaw while his father gathered the wood and piled it on a wagon.

Sometime around 9:30 a.m. a branch that was being cut with the chainsaw whipped forward striking Mr. Fjarlie on the side of the head and throwing him back eight feet.

Mr. Fjarlie was initially taken to Glengarry Memorial Hospital by ambulance and later transferred to the Ottawa General.

Mr. Fjarlie was well known throughout Stormont and Glengarry as a seed grower and dealer. He was active in both the Canadian Seed Growers Association and SeCan, an Ontario seed growers association.

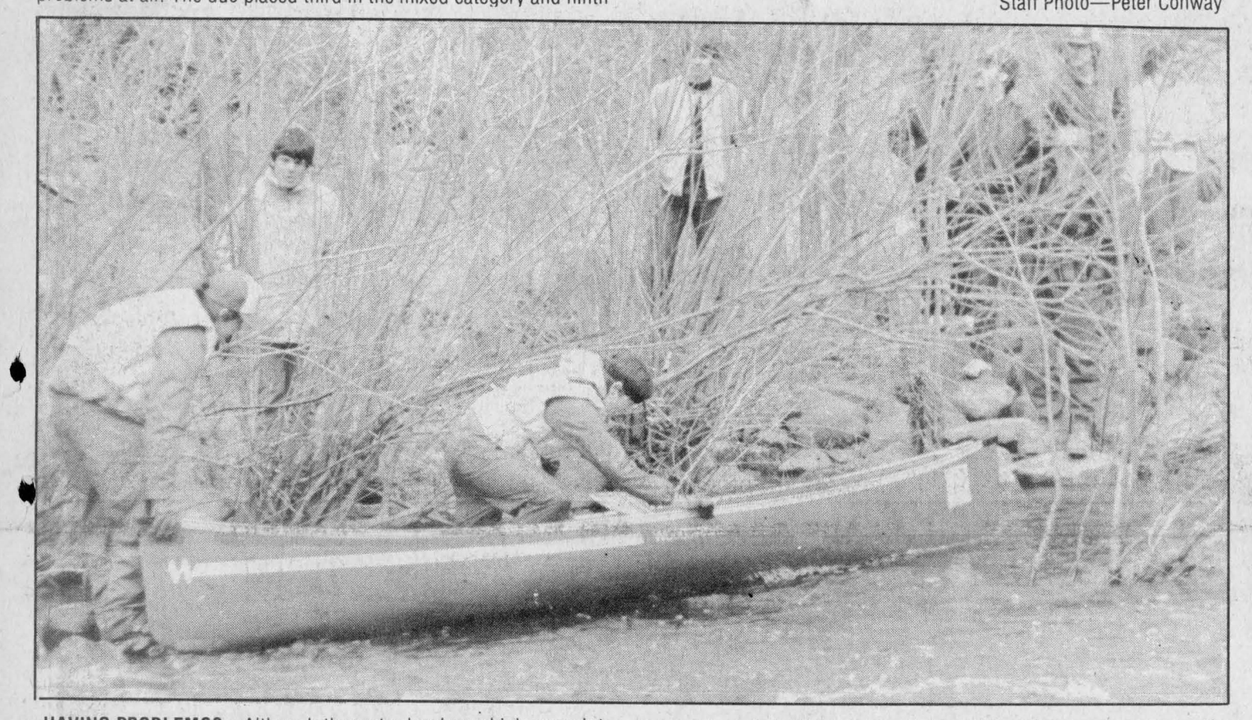
Canoeists brave icy waters

NO PROBLEM AT ALL—While some canoeists had all kinds of problems jumping the dam at Martintown in Saturday's Raisin River White Water Canoe Race, Myles and Lyn Gallant appeared to have no problems at all. The duo placed third in the mixed category and ninth overall in the 33-kilometre race from St. Andrew's West to Williamstown. Alexandria's Maurice Deguire and Hull's Pierre Brault were the winners.

Staff Photo—Peter Conway



HAVING PROBLEMS?—Although the water level was high enough to jump the Martintown dam during Saturday's Raisin River White Water Canoe Race, some of the competitors felt it was better to portage around the dam. Low water conditions in some areas gave the canoeists problems as they tried to continue in the race. Above, these two men can't get going near the shore.

Deguire, Brault win Raisin River Race

MARTINTOWN—Cool temperatures and rapids caused by low water conditions turned Saturday's 12th annual Raisin River White Water Canoe Race into one of the most exciting and competitive in the history of the event.

The race, which is usually held on Sunday, was switched this year to Saturday because of construction at St. Andrew's West school. The race started from a nearby church.

Although the participation was down from last year's 80 canoes to this year's 69, organizers were pleased with the turnout of competitors and spectators who lined the 33-kilometre course from St. Andrews West to Williamstown.

"We anticipated a lower turnout because the race was moved to Saturday from Sunday. A lot of people work Saturdays," said Raisin Region Conservation Authority project manager Mike Lalonde. "We are still satisfied with the number of people who participated and the people who came out to watch," added Lalonde.

There were a few areas that presented problems for the canoeists along the course. In some places, the competitors had to get out of the canoes and portage because of the low water level.

"The water was low generally throughout the course and a lot of rocks were showing. The water level in areas wasn't as high as usual," said Lalonde.

Most of the spectators lined the bridge at Martintown to watch the canoeists jump the dam. The first canoe to approach the dam decided to portage. The first canoe to jump the dam without any difficulty was Alexandria's Maurice Sauve and Williamstown's Bruno Major. They finished third behind the winning team of Alexandria's Maurice Deguire and Hull's Pierre Brault.

The champions finished with a time of two hours, 39 minutes and 57 seconds. In second place was the L'Orignal duo of Pierre Pinard and Marc Lalonde with a time of two hours, 42 minutes and 18 seconds.

Sauve and Major, in third place, finished with a time of two hours, 46 minutes and 25 seconds.

Approximately half of the competitors jumped the dam at Martintown with some having no problems and a few not so lucky. A number of canoes overturned and the competitors ended up in the icy waters. Some emptied their canoes while a couple decided not to continue after overturning.

"That's where all the action is (Martintown bridge) and that's what the people want to see. They come to see the canoes go over the dam. Because of the water level, I thought the canoes would have more problems than they did," said Lalonde.

The winners of the mixed category was the team of Daniel and Liette Proulx of RR1 Williamstown. They finished with a time of three hours, 22 minutes and 32 seconds.

In second place was Alexandria's Sylvie Campeau and Williamstown's Mark Major with a time of three hours, 27 minutes and 34 seconds.

Alexandria's Myles and Lyn Gallant were in third position with a time of three hours, 30 minutes and 29 seconds.

The top three finishers of the mixed category were seventh, eighth and ninth overall in the race.

Lalonde says the event will be moved back to its traditional day next year on Sundays.

"Everything went smoothly with this year's race but it will be held on Sunday again next year as usual," said Lalonde.

WHERE NOW?—The Raisin River White Water Canoe Race was staged Saturday with 69 canoes taking part in the annual trek from St. Andrew's West to Williamstown. A number of competitors overturned at the Martintown dam. Above, these two men scurry to grab their canoe after overturning past the dam.

OUT OF MY WAY—Some competitors in last Saturday's annual Raisin River White Water Canoe Race felt jumping the Martintown dam wasn't the best idea. Above, two canoeists portaged at the dam as spectators watched from the shoreline of the river. A total of 69 canoes partcipated in the 33-kilometre race.

More than silverware up for grabs for Glen Nevis, Rebels in News Cup

by Peter Conway

No matter who wins the Glengarry News Cup, there'll be more than one winner after the final buzzer sounds.

Glen Nevis and Charlottenburgh Rebels begin the best-of-seven championship series Thursday night at the Glengarry Sports Palace.

There'll be more than just the championship title and trophies on the line after the opening face-off. Also at stake for both clubs will be lucrative rewards. The size of the reward will depend on attendance throughout the series.

"Each of the four teams played paid a $200 entry fee and the two teams in the final split the entry fee money and one third of the gate receipts at a 60-40 percentage," says Glengarry News Cup chairman Raymond MacDonald. Mr. MacDonald, along with Arthur Maclaren, are co-ordinators of this year's News Cup.

MacDonald is pleased with this year's News Cup.

"The teams were fairly evenly matched this year, at least the top two teams were evenly matched. It's pretty hard to predict who'll win in the final between Glen Nevis and the Rebels," says MacDonald.

MacDonald is pleased with the attendance so far, even though some games have gone head to head against the National Hockey League playoffs on television.

"Attendance is up this year and we've averaged close to 200 spectators per game. I think we'll draw even better in the final series," says MacDonald.

Another reason for the surging attendance could be attributed to the calibre of play and competitiveness between the clubs.

"I think the calibre is slightly above junior B. Guys like Leo Seguin, Ian McInnes and Marc Bissonnette are all good hockey players. It's been good hockey for the fans to watch," he says.

A few years ago, the Glengarry News Cup had the reputation of being a fight-filled tournament which played a major role in attracting spectators at the Glengarry Gardens. There were times when the News Cup was a rock 'em—sock 'em affair to the end.

MacDonald says those days are a thing of the past and teams are now concentrating on providing an entertainment package for the fans.

"We've had no flair-ups or hassles so far on the ice. It's been good hockey and the boys have concentrated on playing hockey. The style of slam-banging a player into the boards has gone out of the game. The teams now concentrate on skating and scoring goals," says MacDonald.

Another reason for the tamer atmosphere during games is that everyone is careful about injuries.

"A lot of these guys go to school and they hang around together. No one really wants to hurt anyone with a cheap shot. The brawling reputation is over—the kids want to play hockey nowadays," he said.

Glen Nevis should be favored to win this year's News Cup on the basis of its perfect mark during round-robin play.

It was only last year, however, that the Scots bowed to the Glengarry Juniors in the seventh game of the final after posting a perfect mark during the round-robin.

Fans should be in for an entertaining series and most people think it will be a long series.

Apart from the Glengarry News Cup for the winning team, other trophies up for grabs are for the most valuable player, top defenceman, most sportsmanlike player and best goaler.

The Char-Lan Roy's Garage Bantams captured the Lower St. Lawrence League championship by defeating the Alexandria Glens in a tough five game series, six points to four.

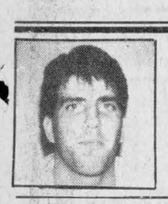
Put away the skates and sticks, time to get out the gloves



SPORTS
Peter Conway

For sports enthusiasts this time of the year can be depressing, to say the least.

Hockey season, whether it's been recreational men's or minor hockey for the kids, is winding down. Most of the area curling clubs have only a couple of bonspiels left on their schedule.

Both junior B teams—the Alexandria Glens and Charlottenburgh Rebels—can look back and ponder what went wrong in the playoffs.

Some of the players, however, haven't hung up the skates just yet. The Rebels entered their club in the Glengarry News Cup while members of the Glens are scattered around on the other clubs in Glengarry's spring hockey rite.

Although I didn't grow up in Glengarry, as a youngster I had heard of the News Cup through relatives and friends living in Alexandria.

As a youth I can remember coming to Alexandria to watch exciting, and sometimes fight-filled, battles at the Glengarry Gardens. The News Cup back then was a prestigious affair and most kids growing up dreamed of some day skating for a team in the tournament.

In recent memory, the News Cup had lost its flavor and interest had dwindled. A couple of years ago, only three teams took part.

This spring's News Cup has attracted four teams and while it's still too early to predict who'll win, Glen Nevis and Charlottenburgh Rebels will fight it out for the championship.

Organizers are relatively pleased with attendance so far. The only problem which might keep people at home would be a conflict with the National Hockey League playoffs. As long as the Montreal Canadiens continue on the road to the Stanley Cup on the same nights as News Cup contests, don't expect a large turnout of fans at the Glengarry Sports Palace.

There have been some entertaining News Cup games to date and the two finalists should provide an exciting brand of hockey.

With only a couple of weeks of ice left at the Glengarry Sports Palace, golf clubs will be coming out of storage, soccer balls and shoes will be dug out of the closet and baseball gloves will be greased up again.

Ah, summer! Warm weather, swimming, golf and soccer. Expos baseball, hot dogs, apple pie and a cold ale. These are the good things that come with summer.

From the minor soccer level to the senior women and men, soccer dominates Glengarry in the summer months. There isn't a night that goes by when soccer fields in the county aren't being used by the tykes or adults.

So it's away with the hockey sticks and skates for another season and the summer sports will be starting up in the near future.

Not having to wear a winter jacket, gloves and boots for the next few months is certainly a refreshing thought.

UNFAMILIAR POSITION

For the first time in a number of years, a Chris McDonell-coached team won't be participating in the Glengarry News Cup final.

Surprising Glen Nevis went through the round-robin portion with a perfect record while the Charlottenburgh Rebels lost only once in earning berths in the finals.

After a poor record a year ago, Glen Nevis has played exceptionally well in this year's News Cup. Glen Nevis in the past, concentrated on a physical game and at times it cost them on the scoreboard. This year's edition is well balanced and the club has received excellent goaltending so far.

Glen Nevis will need the superb goaltending if it hopes to snatch the title from the Rebels.

The Rebels, on the other hand, lost to Glen Nevis by a one-goal margin early in the tournament. The Rebels are basically the same club that played in the Eastern Ontario Junior B Hockey League this season.

The Rebels are a younger team than Glen Nevis, and perhaps more prepared for a grinding, bump 'em series after having played body contact all season. A number of the Glen Nevis players played in a no-body contact league all season. At times, the transition from a non-hitting game to a physical one can be a difficult task for some players.

This year's final shapes up as an evenly matched series and it wouldn't be unrealistic to think the best-of-seven series might go the limit.

Both teams will be hungry for the title, and, although Glen Nevis posted a perfect round-robin record, you can throw those statistics out the window after the opening face-off.

The opening game of the series is Thursday night at the Glengarry Sports Palace and the next games are Friday and Sunday evenings.

Both teams deserve to be where they are and the final should be a dandy.

Awards night for curling club

SHOWING APPRECIATION—Organizers of the junior curling program at the Alexandria Curling Club the past winter received a plaque in appreciation from the curlers who participated in program. Ron Graham presented the plaque to Nicole Trudel, Jean-Claude Nadeau, Joan Ryan and Art Craig.

The Alexandria Curling Club's junior curling program wrapped up its season Sunday with its awards presentations.

This year's junior program was co-ordinated by Art Craig, Nicole Trudel, Jean Claude Nadeau and Joan Ryan.

The program attracted 45 youths, the highest number of participants in the history of the program. The season for organizers and the young curlers got underway in November and weekly draws were held. The youths also participated in a number of bonspiels throughout the year.

Mrs. Ryan is optimistic about the future of the program for junior curlers at the local club.

"We had a new program this year," she says. "We changed the program from Sunday nights to afternoons and we had a very good response from the kids. We had 45 kids in the program, our highest ever," she added.

Mrs. Ryan feels the program has a great future judging by the good turnout of parents and participants at the awards presentations.

"It's a good program for the kids and they seemed to have fun curling. It's great for the kids and it's rewarding to sit back and watch the positive results of the program," says Mrs. Ryan.

A number of trophies were presented to winning teams. Jean Claude Nadeau presented the Richelieu Club trophy to the winning team of Marc Lecompte, Lyne Emond, Robbie Latreille and Judith Doiron.

Art Craig presented the Lions Club trophy to the foursome of Charlene Ryan, Marc Lecompte, Judith Doiron and Marc Lefebvre.

The Royal Bank trophy, presented by Mel Roy, went to the team of Jacques Trudel, Simon Nadeau, Rachelle Patenaude and Marc Lefebvre.

The final trophy presented went to a team that won a bonspiel which was held at the Alexandria Curling Club. Al Malcomson presented the trophy to Alana DaPrato, Blair Fraser, Stephanie Emond and Josee Theoret.

At the conclusion of the trophy presentations, junior curler Ron Graham presented a plaque to the program's organizers in appreciation of their work and dedication towards the junior curling program on behalf of the participants.

Alexandria Curling Club President Jack Paavila told the audience that curling can be one of the most enjoyable of all sports.

"First of all, I'd like to thank the people who organized the junior curling program. Curling can be very competitive and can be enjoyable as a team sport. But, curling can also be a nice social game. You can go out once a week and have fun and meet a lot of people. I've met a lot of nice people through curling and meeting all those people has been a real benefit to me. Curling is an enjoyable sport and you can play it as long as you want," said Mr. Paavila.

The local club will stage its closing bonspiel April 27 and the awards night will be May 4.

After a scoreless first period, Roddie McKenzie and Don Pilon, with his first of two, scored in the middle stanza.

Dan Flaro and Pilon completed the scoring for the Rebels in the third period.

Doug Spink earned the shutout for the winners.

In the second game, Chris McDonell's hat trick paced Glen Nevis in an 8-4 win past Glengarry Express.

Red-winged blackbirds return to Canada

by Mike Singleton, Federation of Ontario Naturalists

Return of the cocky marsh-bosses transforms eerie silence into a jangle of sound and sight. They chortle and screech, race from perch to perch, and boldly bait any challenger to just try to take over their turf.

Red-winged blackbirds might well be described as the epitome of chauvinism. The differences in both color behavior are as dramatic as they are important to the bird's stupendous success.

The male flashes about in his sleek black coat, replete with gaudy red-and-yellow epaulettes. Cockily, he fluffs and poses—it seems that inflated chests, padded jackets and stretched-tall-stands aren't confined at all to people. Flicking tail, he shrieks to challenging males, courting females and threats, alike.

The female, by contrast, is muted. Softly patterned, she's a collection of streaks—brown and black above, and brown and black on white below. Rather quiet, she is as recessive as the male is cocky. And just as the male is superbly adapted as a show-off, to stake territory and attract a mate, the female disappears into the marsh scene. As inconspicuous as a branch or mat of dry leaves, she can invisibly tend their vulnerable nest.

Redwings have spent the winter jammed together in the marshes, meadows and roosts of the southern U.S. and Caribbean Islands, feeding and patiently awaiting spring's cue.

Males begin arriving in Southern Ontario about the first week of March, and reconquer the countryside as a steadily-moving wave. When to move is always a difficult judgment call. Too early, and they may be trapped by late-winter's killer storms. Too late, and the prime meeting territories will be taken. Unlike people, redwings can't simply pack more territories into the same breeding marshes.

By the time the females begin arriving, three to four weeks later, the ponds and marshes are open and territories well-defined. The females immediately set to work, choosing the best—the cockiest and gaudiest—of the males available. The marshes reverberate as dozens, or hundreds, of males put on their best performance.

Again, the couple's roles diverge. The inconspicuous, quiet female takes sole responsibility for the 10 to 12 day incubation; she blends perfectly into the setting, minimizing the risk of giving away the nest's location, or of drawing predators. The gaudy male, meanwhile, flits about, boldly defending the territory, drawing off predators and gathering the food necessary for both he and his mate.

But they'll grow quickly, ravenously consuming parental offerings of caterpillars, grasshoppers and myriad other insects. Doggedly, the parents race to and fro. From dawn till dusk, they gather and feed, over and over, generating tomorrow's still-bigger appetites.

Within weeks, the first brood will be off, making way for the couple to mate, relay, and repeat the ritual yet again.

Students away from home can take part

Students attending an educational institute away from home may vote by proxy in Ontario's 33rd general election on May 2.

All students voting in person or by proxy must ensure that their names are on the list of electors for the polling division where they normally reside.

Students may obtain the required proxy forms from any returning officer throughout the province. However, the form, once completed, must be certified by the returning officer in their own district.

Upon presentation of a proxy form, the returning officer will issue a certificate to vote to the proxy who will, in turn, exchange it for a ballot on election day.

Proxy voting allows an elector to authorize another qualified elector in the same polling division to cast is or her ballot on election day. A qualified elector may act as proxy for only two electors.

Persons eligible to vote in this general election must be 18 years of age on election day, a Canadian citizen or British subject at the time of voting, and must have been a resident of Ontario for at least the 12-month period prior to election day.

WHAT'S THIS BUTTON?—Participants at a family farm safety seminar held last week had to familiarize themselves with the operation of a tractor. Farm safety officials say it is often an unskilled family member who is the first to arrive at an accident scene, not knowing how to turn off a piece of equipment.

Farm families learn about safety

by Bruce Hayes

LANCASTER—A group of Glengarry farm families found out Thursday that while farm accidents only take a few seconds to occur, the consequences can last a lifetime.

The families took part in a family farm safety workshop sponsored by three Glengarry women and held at Munro Feed and Farm Supply Limited.

The women, Georgina Mitchell, Joanne Peters and Helen Mackenzie, were concerned about the high number of farm accidents, particularly in the spring at planting time, and decided to take matters into their own hands.

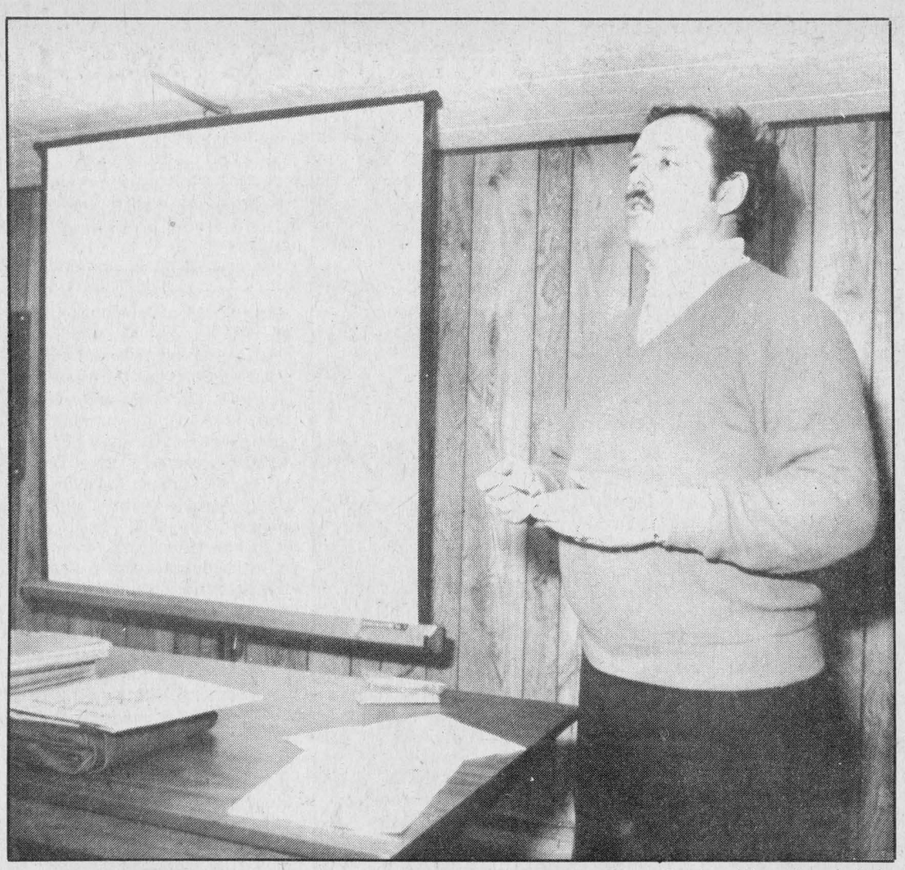
"With planting season coming up, we felt this would be a good time to hold it," said Mrs. Mackenzie. "We'd like to challenge mothers in other townships to do the same thing. We hope to have another workshop in the fall at harvest time."

Guest speaker for the day, Harold Morphy of the Farm Safety Association, said one of the major problems on a farm is that the person who usually is first on the scene of an accident, doesn't know how to react.

"We feel that the husbands aren't instructing their wives enough about farm equipment," he told the audience. "The farm wife is usually the first person on the scene and some times she just doesn't know what to do. She might not know how to shut down the power take-off shaft or raise or lower the front end loader. The time lapse (between discovery of the accident and rendering assistance) could be improved with some basic knowledge of farm machinery."

Mr. Morphy said it was essential that every member of the family be instructed in how to shut off farm machinery and he said little things such as being familiar with the operation of a fire extinguisher or having emergency phone numbers posted beside a phone could help avert tragedy.

"The farm is a dangerous place and we all know it," he said. "But some farmers take a few more chances than they should at specific times. I think all of you want to have your husbands for a long time."



BE SAFE—Farm safety consultant Harold Morphy was the speaker last week at a family farm safety seminar. The seminar, organized by three local women held at Munro Feed and Farm Supply Ltd., stressed the participation of every family member in farm safety.

Basic Baking Club to hold achievement night

The Lochiel Popular Pie People are coming to the end of their Basic Baking Club. This 4-H group has learned how to bake pies, both sweet and savory, how to bake cakes and how to decorate them.

To help them with decorating, a professional was asked to give a demonstration. Denise Legault showed them basic decorating techniques and then allowed the members to try their own skills.

They finalized their club with a bake sale at Laggan School on euchre night. Quite a bit of money was made and they decided to give it to a local charity.

Achievement Night is April 18 at the Glengarry High School where this club has an exhibit on cake decorating.

The leaders of this project are Marilyn Larocque and Lenora MacMillan. Members are Julie Quesnel, president; Miriam van Nooten, vice-president; Mary McCaskill, secretary; Kris Marr, press reporter; and Renata Nyssen, Francine Lauzon, Jodi Murray and Jenny Marr.

Charlottenburgh club elects executive

The Charlottenburgh 4-H Junior Calf Club held its regular meeting on April 4.

The meeting elected an executive of: President Eric Lang, Vice-President John Edwards, Secretary Heather Pasco and News Editor Rodney Howes.

The vote for youth council representative ended in a tie between Margo McDonell and Laura Lang. A second vote gave the position to Margo.

The next meeting will be held May 7 at the home of John Edwards in Williamstown.

CWL praises school boards for 'spirit of co-operation'

CORNWALL — The Catholic Women's League of St. Raphael's has written a letter to both the SD&G County Board of Education and the SD&G Separate School Board commending the organizations for their handling of the issues of extension of funding to Catholic schools.

The letter, signed by Sue Lajoie, president and resolutions convener Patricia Major, commends both boards "for the spirit of co-operation in dealing with the issues of extension of Catholic schools."

The boards formed a joint committee to formulate a response to the Ontario government's announcement that it would extend public funding of Catholic education to Grade 12.

In that brief, the boards stressed co-operation during the transition period and pledged to work together to minimize problems.

"You are a model to the province in the Christian spirit in which you have proceeded, proving that harmony, co-operation and respect for others can solve this issue."

Glengarry president calls for smaller herds

Ontario hog producers will have to make substantial cuts in their herd size if they want to remain competitive in today's market.

Jim Gillissie, president of the Glengarry Pork Producers Association, said recent countervailing duties that were imposed on Canadian pork exported to the United States will influence domestic prices.

At a pork producers meeting on Monday, he called on local pork producers to decrease the size of their herds.

The tariff, which will be reviewed by the Americans in July, adds an additional 5.3 cents per pound, dressed weight, on hogs being exported south of the border. The measures were handed down after American pork producers complained that Canadian producers were underselling them because of Canadian government assistance programs.

"It's certainly not a positive step," Mr. Gillissie said, "but it's not the worst thing. I think it will help producers evaluate their herds. The feeling of the executive is that we're going to have to become better, more efficient and reduce the size of our herds."

At the recent Ontario Pork Producers Marketing Board annual meeting in Toronto, a resolution to develop some sort of a quota system for the pork industry was defeated by a three to one margin. Mr. Gillissie said he feels some producers artificially increased the size of their herds, in anticipation of quotas being approved.

While some producers have blamed the countervailing duties for recent drops in the price of pork, Marion Myers, a marketing board director, says other factors might be responsible.

A recent United States Department of Agriculture report showed that the number of hogs being sent to market dropped only one per cent. Many analysts had expected a drop of up to nine per cent.

"Our market dropped along with the American market," Mrs. Myers said. "The biggest downturn isn't being caused by the duties but by the USDA report. The numbers of hogs didn't drop as much as we expected them to. The duties are having some bearing, but not as much as the USDA report."

In spite of what some would term a setback, Mr. Gillissie said the countervailing duties could be a blessing in disguise, forcing producers to become more efficient.

"It could be one of the best things that will affect the industry in the last five years," he said.

Glengarry 4-H'ers to travel to Kamloops

by Heather Pasco

Fifteen members from Glengarry 4-H clubs have been selected to participate in Canada's Open House Exchange. The Glengarry group will be twinned with a 4-H group from Kamloops, British Columbia. Our group will be visiting Kamloops from July 12 to July 21 and will host the Kamloops 4-Her's from August 1 until August 10.

Before Glengarry could be selected for the Open House Canada Exchange, the group met with Kathleen Ryan, the Rural Organizational Specialist, to plan a schedule for the visiting group, including visits to Ottawa, Montreal, Upper Canada Village, the Highland Games, and the Williamstown Fair. This ten day schedule placed the Glengarry group second among the 15 successful applicants in Open House Canada. Since we were successful in our bid for an exchange, we met at the OMAF boardroom on Tuesday, April 2, to form committees to look after details of the exchange.

Doug and Helene Sova will chaperone the 15 members who are Thomas Bill, Claire Carriere, Matthew Eamer, Susan Edwards, Steven Fraser, Anthony Hagen, Diane Hagen, Annette Huizinga, Dean MacIntosh, Wendy MacNaughton, Scott Moffatt, Allison Pasco, Heather Pasco, Tammy Rozon, and Sonia Villeneuve.

Club holds first meeting

Eleven members attended the organizational meeting of the Lancaster Junior 4-H club, held Monday, April 1 at the agricultural office in Alexandria.

The leaders of the Lancaster club are David Smits of Lancaster and Lawrence St. Denis of Bainsville.

The purpose of the meeting was to organize future meetings and to elect an executive. The executive for the club is President Julie Carriere, Vice-President Shawn McRae, Secretary David Robertson, News reporter Bruce McCuaig and Scott Fourney as the 4-H representative for Lancaster Junior Calf club.

Pork producers told to plan business structure carefully

More and more farmers are starting to realize that farming isn't just a way of life, it's also big business. What form that business will take will play a large part in determining the success or failure of the operation.

Alexandria lawyer Pierre Aubry addressed a crowd of about 30 farmers Monday at the Glengarry Pork Producers general meeting, and said the type of farm operation you choose has a great deal to do with how profitable the farm is.

"Basically there are three types," Mr. Aubry said. "There is sole proprietorship, partnership and corporation. You must choose which type is suited to your needs."

Among the factors to consider are the complexity of the business, sophistication of the parties, commitment of the parties to the arrangement and the longevity of the arrangement.

The advantage of incorporating is that the shareholders in the corporation have a limited liability when it comes to legal action, a corporation can protect the assets of the individual shareholders and a corporation can be useful in estate planning.

"You can use a corporation to protect against future capital gains," he said. "The father takes preferred shares in the corporation, established at a value representing the cost of his investment. The kids will get common shares, so the capital appreciation will belong to them. When the father dies, there won't be much in the way of capital gains tax."

The disadvantages to a corporation is that all shareholders must abide by a specific set of by-laws and the corporation can prove to be rather inflexible. Another thing to consider is that the farm must generate enough income to make the advantages of incorporating worthwhile.

"As prices on the international market go down, your prices will also go down," he said. "For hog farmers, you have to make sure your income will stay high to be comfortable with a corporation."

A partnership has the advantages of being flexible, it's suitable for a family unit, it's cheaper to establish or dissolve.

The disadvantage is that many partnerships aren't documented and, should it dissolve, lawyers and accountants will spend a great deal of time attempting to sort out the details.

"A partnership will create problems if nothing is documented," Mr. Aubry said. "Get it down on paper, who has responsibility for what, how much each partner brought into the arrangement, what happens when a partner dies, what happens at dissolution. If you don't do this, what happens at dissolution is you're facing all kinds of legal and accounting problems and you'll have to pay these advisors to clean up the mess."

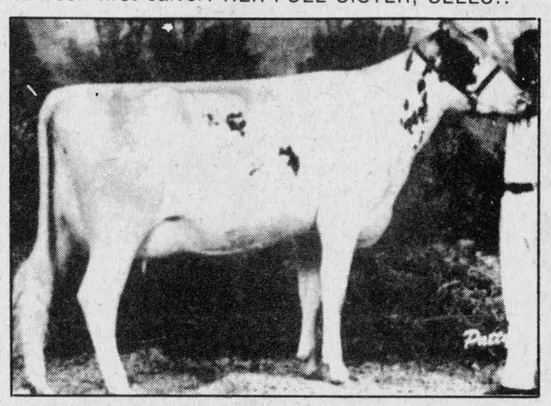
''The best groups of dairy cattle ever offered for sale at public auction in this county.''

A fresh first calver: HER FULL SISTER; SELLS!!



WOODLAND VIEW V. POLLY ET.; R.A.C. 2-yr.-old 84, H.M.A.A., 2-yr.-old 84; Maternal sister All Canadian plus R.A.A. 83. R.A.C. 84. Dam was a 22,000 lb. producer, 3 times champion R.W.F., 5 times All Canadian.

Some records of cattle in sale and dams of calves: 2-2-236-245, 4.34%; 2-06-195-205, 4.42%; 3-03-209-208, 4.10%; 2-02-218-216, 4.13%; 1-330--216-206, 3.98%; 3-06-200-200, 4.16%; 3-04-221-220, 4.13%; 3-02-203-199, 4.08%; 3-11-214-197, 3.76%; 8-11-249-233, 3.75%; 2-2-191-210, 4.67%.

Also selling first prize 4-year-old Maxville Spring Fair, along with some beautiful calves and 2-year-olds, some worthy of All Canadian nominations. I have the greatest respect for the accomplishments made by Glengarry's black and white breeders. I certainly wouldn't want them to become divorced from what they have, but rather I'm presenting the unique opportunity to fool around on the side. Can you afford a Royal Winner and All Canadian nomination or a production class leader in your breed? The best in the nation have been gathered to gether for your observation and with the stroke of a pen your dreams can come true!!

NOTE: Due to the tremendous work involved in organizing this sale I have refused other auctions in the month of April. Numerous choice dates have already been committed to in the area and 2 in Illinois; yet I still have some dates open for whatever type of auction you are planning. Your guarantee for a successful sale is the recommendation of my former clients.

Dunvegan WI celebrates 50 years of fellowship

DUNVEGAN — The Dunvegan Women's Institute celebrated its 50th anniversary at a special gathering at the WI Hall on Tuesday, April 2.

The 25th anniversary guest book used in 1960 was signed by everyone attending. Grace was sung and the Queen was toasted before a turkey dinner was served to members and guests. The blue and gold cake trimmed with the Women's Institute crest was cut by Mrs. D.J. MacIntosh.

Mrs. Stanford MacCrimmon, first Dunvegan Branch secretary treasurer, read the minutes of the organizational meeting.

Isobel MacLeod and Sybil MacPhee presided over the unveiling and dedication of the honor roll and membership book.

The honor roll, prepared by James Joyce, lists the charter and first year members and now hangs in the hall.

The membership book coordinated by Sybil MacPhee, lists year by year the executive and members of the branch. A short biography of each member is included and the book will be in the hall permanently.

Branch curator Flora Chisholm, gave a brief history. Still surviving are charter members, Mrs. Stanford MacCrimmon, Mrs. William Simpson, Mrs. John A. MacQueen, Mrs. Cecil Johnson, Mrs. D. H. MacIntosh, Mrs. Fred Metchette and six first year members, Mrs. R.G. Crowe, Mrs. Christena MacLean, Mrs. Duncan J. MacLeod, Mrs. Fred C. MacLeod, Miss Tena MacRae, and Mrs. Stewart Urquhart.

The candle lighting ceremony was conducted by Mrs. Dan MacRae. Mrs. Stanford MacCrimmon lit a candle in tribute to the past. A minute of silence was observed for those members who died. Marion Loewen lit a second candle in tribute to the present and the future.

Mrs. Duncan J. MacLeod was presented with a life membership certificate and pin by Mary Fraser. Mrs. Neil MacRae was unable to attend and will be presented with her Life Membership certificate and pin later by Rhoda MacRae.

Mrs. Lynus MacPherson, board member, gave a congratulatory speech urging members to leave something for those to follow as the women of 50 years ago left their heritage for today.

A singsong followed and the evening closed with a fashion show
