SYLVIA'S SLANT

We've been deluged with the 'Free Trade' talks, and now that the deal has been rushed through over a bucket or two of fried chicken we will hear a lot more gobbledegook, because no one really knows what has really been agreed to, other than the Great Canadian Giveaway. We give the U.S. banks full access to Canada without giving Canadian banks full access to the U.S. What kind of deal is that? There is the BDSM — that's the binding dispute mechanism. Big deal according to Mulroney, but our U.S. counterparts didn't see it the same way — they left out the word binding. All we got was the right to name half the members of a panel which will attempt to apply U.S. law. Oh! yes there is a 'Canada-U.S. Trade Commission' which will make decisions by consensus. In other words it won't be able to act if the U.S. uses it's veto. That doesn't sound like a good deal to me. The whole deal is so full of ifs, ands, and buts that it will probably be a long time before we realize that we have given away most of our resources. In the meantime I wonder why we don't have Free Trade right here in our own country. Take for instance the breweries. Moosehead beer, brewed in New

Robert Bateman -
IN THE GRASS - LIONESS $365.00
950 s/n* 24 1/2" x 31 5/8" (No. ABC41) Published from an egg tempera painting.

I have painted lions many times. I do this not because I love cats or because lions are popular. I do it because they have a strong presence, and their physical shapes have a good sense of abstract form.

This is one of my earliest serious paintings of the species, and it is still one of my favorites. It is not much more than a simple study of a lioness in repose. My goal was to capture the sense of an individual and particular animal with the quiet confidence of the so-called "king of the beasts."

Congrats this week to Gerry Brown. He was recognized by city council for his 25 years of dedication to the Parks and Recreation Hockey School. Mayor Brian Lynch calls it a significant contribution for young people.

In labour news around the city...we note the Post Office was boarded up like Fort Knox last week. Did Postal Officials expect trouble on the picket lines?

In city lockout of outside workers..we see where St. Lawrence college officials moved the activities from the complex to the college. Also, we hear the Royals cancelled their home games. For fear Union members in town wouldn't cross picket lines.

Norma Lawrence started yelling at the Mayor and Council just as the meeting concluded last week.

On our Regligious file we see where the 93 year old cornerstone at St. Columban's Roman Catholic Church was dedicated last week by Alexandria-Cornwall Bishop Eugene Larocque.

We also see interesting conflict on future of St. Felix De Valois. Standard Freeholder says the church can't build there, Le Journal De Cornwall quotes different city officials as saying they can. Parishioners wondering whose right.

Word around Trinity Anglican Church is that construction on a 50 unit senior citizen home will get under way in the near future. Will be located next to the church hall near Augustus.

On Political front...not hearing too much from new MPP John Cleary. Story goes the riding office will be located at 404 Montreal Road. Story also suggests alderman Claude Poirier would like the job as Cleary's executive assistant.

Work resuming at CJSS-CFLG*FM Radio. Ernst seen outside climbing the walls with a paint brush.

Hear FM morning man did a number on his car on his way home from T.O. last week. Andy Stokes is fine...report on car coming later.

Dan Latour has another money-making idea. He's set up the Cornwall Investment Club. For $150 you get a piece of the pie. It's going to cost an additional $50 a month to stay in.

Elaine Kennedy settling in at St. Lawrence High School. She's moved from C.C. where she used to teach math. Even 13 years in the system doesn't protect you from transfer.

By the way, St. Lawrence has two vice principals–Bob Raymond and Doug Werely.

See where a group of friends of scouting have decided on Bingo to raise money to help with scout deficit. Bingos take place on Sunday afternoon. Money goes to a good cause.

Special thanks to our friends at Bolger Steel for doing us a favour.

Congrats to Ron Flaro on getting his license.

Congrats to Lisa and Tony Eamer on the birth of their son.

Debbie Ouderkirk from Dreamland just had a baby girl. Congratultions. Father is doing well.

NATIONAL BLOCK PARENT WEEK

OCTOBER 19 - 26, 1987

Once again in Ontario and across Canada, October 19 - 26 is being celebrated as National Block Parent Week.

A Block Parent is any responsible adult, 18 years of age and over, who has been police approved, who is concerned about the well-being of all citizens, who volunteers his or her home as a safe refuge when a need arises.

The displaying of the Block Parent sign in a window indicates that help is available should it be needed. Block Parents are known as "Safe Strangers".

And even when there is no cause for concern, the sign acts as a deterrent to potential offenders who quickly realize that the neighbourhood or community has its own safety support system for its citizens, and especially for its children. A Block Parent community is a caring community where residents are working together to provide a safe environment for its citizens.

Today there are over one million such concerned citizens and "Safe Strangers" across Canada who willingly display their unique red and white window sign as an indication of their caring and concern and their availability to provide assistance.

The Block Parent Program is organized on three levels: the Block Parent Program of Canada, Inc., the Ontario Block Parent Program, Inc., and the local Block Parent Program. All levels of the program are run by dedicated volunteers and all receive their financing from fund-raising events and promotions, donations from service clubs and business organizations, and a few very fortunate committees may receive grants either nationally, provincially or through their local municipalities.

The program is supported by police and educators across our country. It is through the vital co-operation of these groups with national, provincial and local levels that the Block Parent Program has gained its recognition as a Crime Prevention Program that really works.

The Board of Directors of the Ontario Block Parent Program, Inc. extends its best wishes to the individual local committees and the many block parents across the province who work so diligently to make our communities safer places in which to live and to visit.

Tough campaign starts against violence in sport

By Damien Cox

The message under the caption "The Scene of the Crime" is dramatic and hard-hitting.

"It's criminal what's happening to the game of hockey. What was once the scene of a great pastime is becoming a spectacle that thrives on violence," reads the black-and-white poster showing an empty hockey arena.

Tough words, but that's the approach the federal government's Commission on Fair Play has chosen to launch a national advertising campaign aimed at reducing violence in Canadian sport.

At a press conference here yesterday, federal Sports Minister Otto Jelinek unveiled two print advertisements and a television commercial that will form the first stage of the campaign.

"We are committed on a long-term basis to deal with violence in sport and to bring back to the playing field fairness in play," he said.

The advertisements clearly single out hockey and have already come under harsh criticism from Canadian minor hockey officials.

Metropolitan Toronto Hockey League president John Gardner warned the campaign may turn parents and children away from hockey.

"The primary theme and visual effect is negative," said Gardner. "This is not something that is going to enhance fair play and proper safety."

Even Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president Murray Costello, who is a member of the commission, admitted he is not "comfortable" with the nature of the advertisements.

"I would have preferred to go in another direction," he said. "I think it reflects unfairly on many of those involved in minor hockey, but it's too important for the CAHA not to be part of."

A second print advertisement depicts a young hockey player being carted off the ice on a stretcher with the caption, "Is the game of hockey getting carried away?"

At the bottom of the ad, the opening paragraph reads: "It's no longer whether you win or lose. It's how you survive the game."

The 30-second television commercial shows several hockey players bodychecking and battling each other to the cheers of the crowd, while the puck lies to the side unnoticed. The final scene shows a helmet spinning to the ice as the whistle blows.

Jelinek said the major Canadian television networks have agreed to show the commercial during the coming hockey season.

The 20-member commission was formed in June, 1986, and includes honorary chairman Wayne Gretzky, Montreal Canadiens vice-president Jean Beliveau and Sport Canada director Abby Hoffman.

One proposed print advertisement was dropped from the campaign, apparently with the urging of Gretzky. It showed a youth in a wheelchair with the caption, "He got two minutes, I got life."

Jelinek defended the controversial campaign yesterday, saying the commission wants to "stem the flow of violence" in Canadian sport.

"If we can save one spinal cord injury, we will have done our job," he said. "We don't want to make it a sissy sport, but we want to eliminate the excessive violence."

Jelinek said hockey has been highlighted because of the sport's high profile in Canada, but added that violence in other sports will be targeted in upcoming months.

Serious injuries

Dr. Tom Pashby, a member of the Ontario Sports Medicine and Safety Advisory Board, said there have been about 100 serious spinal cord injuries related to hockey reported since 1976.

But he said the bulk of such injuries occur in other athletic activities, including diving and motor sports.

"I just hate to see them zeroing in on hockey when some other activities are causing many more serious injuries," he said.

Pashby also told Jelinek the best way to cut down on neck and spinal cord injuries in hockey would be for the federal government to insist all new hockey rinks are built to international specifications.

International ice surfaces are generally wider and have more space between the end boards and the net.

Former NHL referee Bruce Hood admitted the final choices in the ads were the subject of much debate among commission members.

"When we first saw the ads you could have heard a pin drop in the room," said Hood. "It is harsh. It hits people right between the eyes."

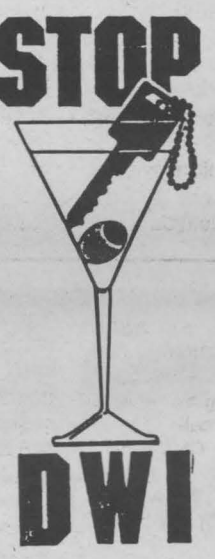
Commission member Brian Ward, executive director of the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, said he was "delighted" with the print and TV ads.

"We've been calling for this kind of thing for a long, long time," he said, "and once everyone sees the biggest sport is cleaning up its act, everyone will follow along."

The CAHA estimates about 500,000 Canadians under the age of 20 play hockey.

The campaign will also include another 25,000 ads for schools, buses and subway cars showing groups of youngsters and the message "Whatever you play, play it fair."

Jelinek said the campaign will be aided by corporate donations and will only cost the federal government about $5,000.



Get style, even on a shoestring

"Don't buy it," his mother said, "you'll have to rip out the whole kitchen." "Don't buy it," her mother said, "the kitchen's a mess." They bought it, of course, and decoratively proved that mothers aren't always right. Instead of ripping out the pre-war vintage kitchen cabinets, they economically painted them a striking shade of blue, coloring the window frame to match. Terra cotta-colored tiles were chosen to replace the time-worn linoleum, while a cheery colonial-patterned wallcovering was used to hide the sun-faded design already in place. The red, white and blue window shade fabric replicates the wallcovering to carry through on the colonial theme.

American country chairs from Riverside's Great Hill Road collection were purchased and handmade, checked gingham cushions were added for comfort and flair. The breakfast table is a scarred thrift shop find covered by a dimestore tablecloth. A colonial-style shelf for displaying dishes, bought at a crafts store and stained at home, flea market ceramic jugs, rustic baskets and bargain-basement placemats and napkins add the finishing touches.

Maybe your decorating problem is a family room that has to be all things to a family with wide-ranging needs. Or is it a master bedroom that needs budget redecorating now that the new jacuzzi tub has been installed? You'll find lots of affordable decorating ideas and a blueprint for building a decorative plan in the new 28-page booklet, "Style on a Shoestring: Riverside's Guide to Affordable Home Decorating." You can order the booklet by sending a check or money order for $1.50 to Riverside Furniture Corporation, P.O. Box 3392, Maple Plains, Minn., 55348.†

Norman Warner M.P. Reports

Small Business Week 1987 will take place October 25 to 31 and I invite you to join with me in saluting entrepreneurs in our area.

The theme of Small Business Week 1987 is Entrepreneurship: Creating Opportunities. The men and women who operate small business in Canada create employment, investment and economic development opportunities. Over the last two years they have created more than 70 per cent of the new jobs in this country and contributed 25 per cent of our Gross National Product.

A new publication of the federal government offers something interesting and a little out of the ordinary. Canada: Our Place in the World, is an attractive booklet published for elementary level schools and offers students a wide variety of classroom activities focusing on our role as a trading nation.

The booklet will be distributed to all school boards and elementary schools across the country.

The Prime Minister has announced that the next economic summit of the seven major industrialized countries and representatives of the European Economic Community will take place in Toronto June 19 to 21, 1988.

Locally, an important annual event was held last Friday evening when the graduates of Seaway District High School in Iroquois received their diplomas. I was pleased to attend the ceremony and address the graduates.

The students of Rothwell-Osnabruck School also held their convocation ceremony on Friday evening and I wish to offer them my congatulations. I regret being unable to attend but wish them every happiness in the years ahead.

Four area couples celebrated their 50th anniversaries on the weekend and I would like to offer them congratulations: Dwight and Eileen Beckstead; Garnet and Florence Johnson; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nicholson; and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Black.

Doris Kitchener of Cornwall celebrated her 80th Birthday, October 12 and to her, too, I wish the very best.

I hope everyone's Thanksgiving holiday weekend was joyful. To celebrate the occasion the Rotary Club of Cornwall held a special flag-raising event on Thanksgiving. The club completed phase two of the Flag Pole Project: the members raised 15 flags around the Canadian flag, one flag for each province and territory in Canada and one for the United States, the City of Cornwall and Rotary International.

HOT SOUP fuels for fitness after sports.

Hot soup refuels athletes

Physical fitness has become an integral part of the '80s lifestyle. In American Food Preferences, a study by Campbell Soup Company, nearly 70 percent of the 5,000 families surveyed indicate that they do some form of exercise.

For physical fitness buffs such as those identified in the study, the search is already on for good tasting, nutritious foods that can be quickly and conveniently prepared.

After all, whether you work out on exercise equipment in the gym or out-of-doors on the ski slopes, you don't want to waste time in the kitchen.

Most athletes, male and female, agree that exercise tends to curb appetites. Less is more and a bowl of hot soup is a terrific meal maker. With some imaginative additions — herbs or spices — Campbell's Condensed Soup is the athlete's answer for quick refueling.

This Olé Bean Soup is fast to fix when a hot and hearty soup fills the bill.

OLÉ BEAN SOUP

1 can (11½ ounces) Campbell's Condensed Bean with Bacon Soup
1 teaspoon chili powder
½ soup can water
1 can (6 ounces) "V-8" Vegetable Juice
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese

1. In 1½-quart saucepan over medium heat, combine soup and chili powder. Heat, stirring constantly until hot, about 2 minutes.

2. Gradually stir in water and V-8. Reduce heat; simmer 5 minutes or until hot. Garnish with cheese. Makes 2½ cups or 2 servings.

Calories Per Serving: 290.

Brunswick, can be sold in any of the states in the U.S., but not in any other province in Canada. So, if you bring a few bottles back with you, there is no way to return the empties unless you go back there. Another strange thing is the fact that without taking a driving test you can use an International Drivers' Licence all over Europe for 12 months, yet your Ontario drivers' licence is only good in other provinces for 60 days. Professional people can't practice their trade in another province unless they obtain that particular provincial licence. I'm thinking of nurses, doctors, lawyers, teachers, etc. Maybe there is reciprocity between some provinces, but for the most part this kind of licensing puts an added financial burden on people who have to relocate. It also means we have 10 different standards of driving, health care, health coverage and services. (It still beats the system or lack of it that they have in the U.S. of A.).

I am always fascinated when I see all the various license plates on trucks and buses. It must cost plenty to renew them all. No wonder the transportation costs are so high. Alcohol can only be purchased at LCBO outlets, unless it's a certain type of wine that you can buy in your local A & P store. Some of the 'wines' at the A & P have a higher alcoholic content than some of the beers, but you can't buy beer there. I'm not advocating selling these products just anywhere, but it all seems a little ridiculous and confusing.

Why talk about free trade and free practices when the breweries, distilleries, and tobacoo companies can all charge the same prices, but if other manufacturers or producers agreed to charge the same prices so they could all make a decent living they would be in court charged with 'Price Fixing'.

Maybe it's all part of the 'Canadian Identity' like the strange and unfair legalities in our own province. If you go to small claims court in Toronto you can claim up to $3,000.00, but in Ottawa or here you can only claim up to a maximum of $1,000.00. We don't even have free trade here in our own province. Confusing isn't it?

Pre-winter tune-up should include inspection of the cooling system

Many motorists wait until the first cold snap to winterize their automobiles.

The result is usually a frantic phone call to their local service station mechanic, who by this time, is already deluged with time-consuming road calls for dead batteries, frozen radiators and various ignition ailments.

To make sure your engine will run properly when it's ten below zero, the Gates Rubber Company has developed an easy-to-perform winterizing tune-up for your car's cooling system, the cause of many cold weather driving problems.

1.) Examine all hoses, especially the radiator and heater hoses. for swelling, soft spots, cracks, a partially collapsed condition, cuts and general deterioration.

2.) Tighten all hose clamps. Replace those which can't be adequately tightened, or that show corrosion.

3.) Check all V-belts for wear on bottom and sides. Pay particular attention to the alternator drive. Replace or retension as necessary. If belts are more than four years old, replace them regardless of visual condition.

4.) Check the coolant for rust and the concentration of antifreeze. Auto parts stores sell inexpensive testers for checking antifreeze protection. Flushing the system (about every two years) and replacing the coolant with a 50–50 mixture of water and antifreeze is a do-it-yourself job.

While the cooling system is drained, this is also a good time to replace the upper and lower radiator hoses.

5.) Inspect the condition of the radiator cap gasket and spring. Check the radiator filler neck for nicks that could lead to a pressure loss.

6.) Clean bugs, leaves, paper and other foreign matter off the front of the radiator. Remove by spraying with water. This helps the flow of air through the radiator.

DON'T GET CAUGHT STRANDED this winter. Auto parts manufacturers say one of every two cars on the road this season has a cooling system component needing repair or replacement. By having antifreeze, belts and hoses checked, motorists can avoid costly towing and road service charges.†

THE ROGERS PUMPKIN PATROL SET TO ROLL

It's a special night for ghosts and goblins, witches and pirates and . . . the great pumpkin. But whatever it means to your children, it should be an evening of happy safe memories.

The staff of Rogers Cable TV care about the families in Cornwall. And that's why they are introducing a safety program this Halloween, Saturday, October 31, 1987. Starting at 5:30 p.m., the Rogers Pumpkin Patrol will be hitting your streets in their 'orange pumpkin' Company vans and trucks. The staff will be out patrolling your neighbourhood, parks, schools and streets. They'll be keeping an eye on your children and watching out for anything suspect.

Should anything arise, staff can quickly contact police via their mobile radio dispatcher for assistance. The majority of the time, the staff will be driving around your area with occasional stops to say hello and handout treats to the little ones.

Once the children are back home safe and sound, the 'orange pumpkins' will retire back to the patch at 517 Pitt St. at approximately 8:30 p.m.

To aid the children in their quest for treats, Rogers is making bright orange trick or treat bags available free of charge. Parents are asked to drop in at the Rogers Cable Centre during normal business hours to pick up the free bats. A limited amount will also be available at the City Police booth at the Chamber of Commerce Home & Trade Show.

The Pumpkin Patrol is just one of the many ways Rogers Cable TV and it's staff are involved in our community.

For more information, please contact: Jeanne Fortier, Co-Chairperson, 932-5966 or Paul Gougeon, Co-Chairperson, 932-5966.

PAY TV SHOWCASE
By Blake Fowler

Bob Hoskins may be the best movie gangster since Cagney and Bogart.

Bob who, you say? Once you've seen the film Mona Lisa, you won't forget Bob Hoskins. Actually, he played a gangster once before in The Long Good Friday, but most people didn't even see that one. Mona Lisa, on the other hand, won him the Best Actor award at the Cannes Film Festival and he was also nominated for an Oscar. The film airs on First Choice October 25 and 30.

This is Beauty and the Beast updated and set in the sleazy underworld of London. Hoskins, the beast of the piece, turns in an amazing performance. He is George, a small time hood just finishing a seven-year stretch in prison and hired as a chauffeur to a high-class and aloof prostitute.

At first the two mix as poorly as oil and water. But the comically ingenuous George gradually gains her trust while falling hopelessly in love with her.

Mona Lisa is a touching and terrifying tale, told with astonishing elegance and skill.

And, as long as you're in the mood for intense films, you might want to take a look at Extremities which airs October 24 and 29.

Farrah Fawcett-Majors is Marjorie Easton, a lady who jumps into her car and discovers a rapist there, with a knife. She escapes a rape attempt but leaves her wallet — with her address — behind. Said rapist shows up at her home on the night her two roommates are out.

The film enters an intense zone of terror at that point and Marjorie undergoes the expected humiliation. The film takes an unexpected turn when Marjorie overcomes her assailant, ties him up and begins to turn the tables on him.

Fawcett displays an astounding, intense range of emotions and the audience is carried right along. When Extremities played on Broadway four years ago, it was a powerful, relentless piece of theatre.

The film version is equally as harrowing.

Mister Rogers: Insights Into Childhood

The View from Down There

How many times we wish people could see something from our point of view! "If only they could see how it looks to me, then they'd understand!" we think.

When you and I think of a "point of view," we're probably thinking of a feeling, an opinion perhaps, or an attitude toward something. When we're trying to communicate with our young children, though and particularly when that communication seems to be getting nowhere, it may help to take "point of view" in its literal sense: What does the world look like when you're only three feet tall?

A mother recently told us a story about this. Again and again she had scolded her little boy for dawdling in front of the open refrigerator wondering what to eat for a snack. She explained about letting the cold air out and about how much electricity costs these days and so forth, but that mother just couldn't seem to get her son to see the problem her way.

Then one day, by accident, she saw it his way. She was down on all fours mopping up a spill in front of the refrigerator when her son came by looking for a snack. He yanked open the refrigerator door, and she looked up ready to tell him, as usual, not to take all day about making his choice. From her new "point of view," all she could see was the bottoms of containers, and it was indeed a puzzle to tell what was there.

"I'll bet that's one reason it takes you so long," she said to her son, who hadn't really thought about it because he'd simply accepted that grownups' refrigerators were confusing places. With a little reorganization, that mother was able to accommodate all her son's favorite snacks on the lower shelf. Once he could see them clearly, the boy suddenly seemed to "see" something else as well: the importance of keeping the refrigerator as cold as possible.

Here's another example of seeing something from an unfamiliar point of view: A father, out on a long car trip with some business associates, found himself in the unusual (for him) position of riding in the back seat. Like his family car, the one he was riding in had high bucket seats in the front, and the view out the windshield was obstructed by both the seats and the people in them.

As the world zoomed by the side windows, that father found himself feeling hemmed in, a little queasy, and impatient for the trip to come to an end. Into his head popped his young children's whining voices with a nagging question he'd heard so often behind him on trips like this: "Are we almost there yet?"

When he got home, that father told his children how he had felt in that back seat, and he agreed it was hard to be cooped up like that, on the move, in a place where you couldn't even see much of what was going on. "Maybe it would help a little to stop more often along the way," he suggested. His children agreed, and family car trips became more bearable for everyone.

I mentioned this business of finding new points of view to an associate the other day, and she laughed and said, "Here's one for you first hand. My husband, Michael, had an evening appointment one day last week, and it happened to be a day when things had gone wrong for me. What's more, the twins had low-grade fevers and were at each other's throats, and the baby was cutting a new tooth.

"The sight of Michael about to leave me — one hand on the front doorknob and a briefcase in the other — turned me right back into a little child. 'Don't go,' I said. 'I really want you to stay.' Of course he said he had to go, but that he'd be back as soon as he could, and he gave me a hug and kiss on his way out. I found myself mad at him for a little while, and part of me wanted to make him feel guilty for going.

"You know what? That changed my whole attitude toward the kids' whining at me when I have to leave them for a while. I'm sure I felt that way once when my parents would leave me, and thanks to Michael that evening, I can once again remember how it felt." New points of view do have a way of bringing new understandings. Or, to put it another way, new sights can lead to new insights.

New kitchens serve many functions in today's homes

Walls between the kitchen and dining room or family room are coming down. Guests are gathering in the kitchen to chat with the cook or assist in food preparation. Meal preparation itself has become a form of celebration.

To accommodate this type of entertaining, adequate seating is a necessity, often in the form of peninsulas or islands that can double as snack or wet bars.

According to information released during the Symposium, entertaining habits also come into play in kitchen design, influencing everything from appliance selection to counter design.

The person who entertains large groups at home will want a refrigerator that can accommodate party-sized trays.

An over-and-under unit with the freezer on top and refrigerator below may be preferable to a side-by-side unit that characteristically has shorter shelves.

If there is a full-size freezer elsewhere for storing hors d'oeuvre or casseroles, a larger freezer in the kitchen may be unnecessary.

Warming drawers, infra-red heating lights and microwave ovens are other musts for people who entertain frequently at home.

In discussing new developments in appliance technology, Symposium speaker Monte Berkoff, CKD, advised that multiple ovens and duplicates of utensils used in food preparation are a wise investment when more than one person will be using the kitchen at the same time.

The Garden City, N.Y., designer recommends ovens that can switch from conventional to convection to microwave cooking for maximum versatility without consuming too much valuable kitchen space.

Other deluxe multi-appliances include dishwashers with built-in small food disposals that eliminate the need to scrape plates and down draft ranges with interchangeable grills and wok modules.

"In a few years, we'll be seeing freezers that instantly freeze food, for better taste and preservation," Berkoff said.

Lifestyles influence design

In addition to entertaining needs, kitchens should reflect the lifestyles of the household residents. Often there is a correlation between the ages of the family members and the amount of time spent in the kitchen.

When children are young, they spend a good amount of time playing in the kitchen under their parent's supervision. Naturally, wipe-clean surfaces are a must.

As these families mature, schedules tend to vary to the point where a meal a day, or even one meal a week, is a family affair. Then food warming facilities such as warming drawers and microwave ovens become a necessity.

While cooking needs tend to dominate kitchen design, the many secondary activities played out in most kitchens should be taken into account.

If there are students at home, a study area should be incorporated. Seamstresses claim nothing beats a wide expanse of countertop for laying out and cutting patterns.

Gardeners would appreciate the installation of a greenhouse window and large patio doors that bring the outside in.

What's most revolutionary about the kitchen is what you can't see, said Symposium presenter Robert Lidsky. The Wyckoff, N.J., designer cited roll out tables disguised as cabinets that emerge by pulling the "drawer" handle...built-in stepladders that put everything at fingertip reach...appliance garages that keep mixers, food processors, can openers and other housewares neatly out of sight in their own compartments at ideal working height.

"It's no surprise that improved efficiency is most frequently mentioned as the primary reason for remodeling," said Lidsky.

"Homes are getting smaller, especially in the condo and multiple housing market, and not all kitchens have the luxury of a full-sized pantry.

"A sophisticated storage system is the secret to keeping order in the kitchen and making the most efficient use of available space," he said. "Roll-out, slide-out or swing-out shelves can make the contents of today's 2'x 2' pantry instantly accessible. Lazy susans can create accessible storage in space that would otherwise be wasted," Lidsky advised.

FINANCIAL PAGE

IT'S YOUR MONEY

Paul J. Rockel

The "painless" way to build your fortune

It's not what you earn, but what you "keep" that counts.

It is so true. In my many years in the investment fund industry I have run across many people who gave the appearances of wealth, and in reality they had next to nothing. They were earning big incomes, but they were spending it as fast as they earned it, and were making regular payments to pay for the "things" they owned, which were actually decreasing in value as they were paying for them. Thing's like cars, stereos, TV's, vacations, etc.

But, we've run across others who earned just a nominal income, but they saved part of that income, and were on their way to true wealth.

And... in most cases, guess who was the happiest?

You're right. The savers. They could see their lot improving, and in most cases husband and wife and family were much happier.

The spender's often were dissatisfied, always wanting more, and never ever seeing themselves as out of debt. And the "things" they had would lose value, and have to be replaced.

Almost all of us have heard the slogan: "Pay yourself FIRST".

But do you?

And... is there an easy, or almost painless way to do it?

We say there is. And we say those who decide to "Pay Yourself First" should invest those "payments" regularly.

We could put names to hundreds of people who are ordinary citizens, the Mr. and Mrs. Average of this country, who we feel are going to end up wealthy. And we could put names to many top wage earners, who we feel will end up with very little to pass on to their survivors.

The "painless" way (we believe) to save and invest is through what we call a PAC. That stands for "Pre-Authorized Cheque".

Many of us use PAC's to make the monthly payments on our homes. The bank or trust company, once so authorized, sends the prescribed amount to the mortgage holder every month.

We should do the same with our "pay yourself first" savings.

If you were to choose an investment fund for those regular monthly savings, the investment fund would simply receive the regular monthly amount you stipulated, and invest it for you. You would then have the advantage of saving regularly, and "painlessly", and the advantages of dollar-cost-averaging (the "guaranteed" way to beat the market).

As we've stated before, the person at age 21 who starts saving $50 monthly into an investment @ 15% average per year, will be worth over $2 Million at age 65. That's a mathematical fact.

Do you have to be rich to save $50 monthly?

SMALL JEWELLERY BUSINESS FOR SALE: Bob's Gold Mine will be opening soon in Florida. After 10 years in Ingleside, we are looking for someone to take over our Ontario location. HOME WORKSHOP FILE

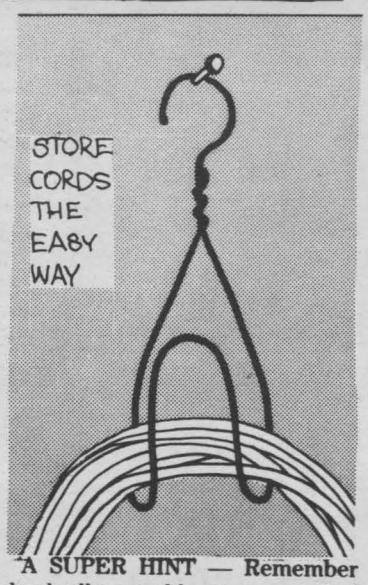
HANDY HANGER-UP

BY AL CARRELL

Here's another nifty way to store cords and rope in your workshop. First, get yourself a wire coat hanger. Hold the hook at the top of the hanger and stretch the hanger down into an oblong shape with your other hand. Then, bend the bottom half of the hanger back up towards the top making it into a hook shape. This big hook will be strong enough to hold cords, rope, wire and lots of other hang-ups that usually get tangled up.

Dear Al:

I made a handy tool holder for my workshop wall. I cut some old garden hose into sections about 3 inches long and slit them lengthwise. I then nailed them vertically to the wall. I can stick the handles of my tools into the slit hose. I have left other pieces without slits to hold screwdrivers and the like. — G.P.



A SUPER HINT — Remember to check all central heating vents before turning on your heat for the upcoming winter. Make sure all are clean and not blocked by furniture.

Dear Al:

Here's a wall papering tip for your column. Instead of using plain paste, which is clear and hard to see, add a drop of food coloring before brushing it on. This way, you'll be sure not to miss any spots. Don't add too much or it might show through. We tried it and it seems to work well. — H.J.

Q: I have the typical rubber strip on the bottom of my garage door but I would like to add something more to the door or the garage floor. I want to keep more of the dust out. What would I be able to add on?

A: There are special weatherstripping kits made for garage doors. You can easily install them yourself. I know of one friend who got some discarded fire hose from the local fire department and stapled a strip of this to the bottom of his garage door as a piece of weatherstripping. He said it worked just fine.

Dear Mr. Carrell:

I'm a little afraid of using an extension ladder to get up on the roof but it's the only ladder I have that's tall enough. While painting my house I came up with a pretty good idea to hold the ladder steadier. I pounded in a stake about a foot behind my ladder and secured the bottom rung to the stake with a rope. This way, I was sure it wouldn't slide out from under me, as I've heard can happen. — S.M.

You can never be too careful on a ladder. I had one slide out from under me. I found out I can't fly.

SHOP TALK — Garden hoses wear out every so often no matter how much care you give them. Let's face it, we don't always take the time to really pamper the garden hose. Another thing you probably already know is that garden hoses usually go bad right where they hook up to the faucet. They seem to kink up right there. You probably have trouble getting a tight seal and then more trouble getting the hose unscrewed later. There's a new gadget called the Hose Whiz Knuckle Saver that fits right on the end of your hose, between the hose and the water faucet. Its special rubber sleeve helps you get a good tight seal, prevents kinks, and reduces leaks, all of which helps your garden hoses last longer. The Hose Whiz even comes with a limited 5-year warranty. It's new and not yet available everywhere. It's the nifty idea of Hose Whiz, P.O. Box 67, Warrensburg, Mo. 64093.

PULL THE TRIGGER OF A LOADED INDY.

Introducing the Indy 400 Classic. We like to think of it as a loaded Indy.

It comes with key start and handwarmers standard. And full instrumentation, with accessory lights for temperature, low oil, headlight high beam and handwarmers. And it's styled so that it looks like someone spent all summer customizing it.

Underneath it all, it's still an Indy 400. It'll still give you the thrill that only an Indy can deliver. But beware—we're only building a few. So if you want to pull the trigger of a loaded Indy, you'd better do it soon.
