SYLVIA'S SLANT

There was a supplement to a newspaper recently called "Tax Planning". It advised us to start checking our tax status, as there was still time this year to reduce it. There was a worksheet for estimating taxes, and suggested budgets.

So I had a go at it. I wish I hadn't. In black ink you list all your income, then in red ink all your expenditures. After one line in black ink I then had more red ink than the comics. My budget is so unbalanced it belongs in a psychiatric ward, and by the time I've tried to figure out Mr. Wilson's 'new and improved' tax reform I'll be in the same ward. The trouble with my budget is the miscellaneous column. I try to put a little aside for incidentals. The only trouble is that just when I think everything is O.K., something breaks or falls apart and has to

Gifts for today's fast-paced executive

If you're in a quandary about what to get that busy business person who has everything but no time to use it, this year's answer is high technology.

A gift that will make the workday easier and more enjoyable is sure to be appreciated, and he or she will think of you fondly every time it's used.

For that sharp-minded executive who's always on the run—catching planes, chasing taxis and doing business over lunch—one of the most useful gifts around is a new electronic organizer called the Wizard.

From Sharp Electronics, the Wizard puts an office full of equipment into the palm of a hand. Containing an appointment diary, personal computer, calendar, phone directory, notepad, calculator and world clock, the Wizard fits into a coat pocket and weighs only eight ounces.

In addition to using it for business, busy men and women can use the Wizard to help organize their personal lives, as well. If dad doesn't want to forget to buy junior a bike or mom the earrings she wants, he can store the information in the Wizard memo function as a reminder.

If mom's trying to schedule her business meetings around holiday plans, she'll find the appointment diary convenient.

Retailing for about $299, the Wizard also comes with optional software cards for time management, eight-language translator and a thesaurus/dictionary for a suggested retail price of $119.99, $99.99 and $129.99, respectively.

To help the high-tech exec apply some fun to the new year, give him SwimWare software from Hi Tech Expressions. With this new software program and a personal computer, the man-on-the-go can create his own 1989 daily, weekly or monthly calendar with digitized pictures of today's hottest swimsuit models.

It's the perfect way for today's busy man to have fun while keeping track of important appointments, events and milestones. He can even use it to make gift calendars for his buddies at work, much to their delight! SwimWare retails for $9.99 (mail order: 800-447-6543).

Great stocking stuffers to go along with computer hardware and software or other electronic gadgets are floppy disks and batteries. To power the Wizard and laptop computers, give him Maxell's lithium batteries.

To store those sizzling SwimWare calendars and valuable business data on his laptop, he can use Maxell's 3½-inch MF2-DD floppy disks, retailing for $48.00 for a box of 10.

Source of whining noise has '84 Civic owner frazzled

By Bill Gardiner

I own a 1984 Honda Civic sedan, which has about 120,000 kilometres on it, and runs absolutely perfectly except about 5,000 kilometres ago a strange noise appeared in the front end. It is a sort of whining, howling, whirring noise, not quite unlike tire noise.

Here is what I have determined: Noise becomes audible at about 40 to 50 km/h, and increases somewhat to 100 km/h and then levels off.

Noise persists even when I depress the clutch; depress the clutch and move the shifter to neutral; do both of the above and cut the engine and coast.

I had the front bearings checked, including opening up and regreasing the left axle. No change.

I took the car to a dealership for regular maintenance service including front-end inspection. The report was — everything is okay.

I changed the front tires — no change in noise. I had the front brakes and calipers serviced — no change in noise.

Yet, the car runs smoothly, rolls when out of gear, does not heat up, does not use more gas. The garage that opened the front bearing, and Honda, say that there is nothing wrong with the car. But the noise really annoys and worries me. What is going to break — and when? I also had my ears checked out. They are okay.

I wonder if you have heard (no pun intended!) of similar problems? Any information you could give me would be greatly appreciated.

Taimo Pallandi

I'm absolutely sure that you are describing a noisy front-wheel bearing in spite of what you may have been told. There's probably no need to panic just yet as the bearings on front-wheel-drive cars quite often howl for a long time before any looseness appears in the front wheels. However, the condition will only worsen with increasing mileage so you should begin to sort it out soon.

A preliminary check for any play in the front wheels is the place to start, but I would assume that previous inspections you had done would have revealed any looseness. Running the front wheels up to speed with the car on a hoist likely won't reveal anything either, as you need the vehicle weight on the suspect bearing to produce any appreciable noise.

The best method I have found is to road-test the car until you can pinpoint whether the left front or right front bearings are causing the noise. You need a deserted, quiet area with fairly smooth pavement and dry road conditions so that background noise is kept to a minimum. Drive the car at the lowest speed required to produce the noise so as to minimize other mechanical noises and try to position yourself in the seat so that your head is roughly centred left to right in the car. Tugging the steering alternately left and then right will cause the noise to change and you should be able to determine from which side it originates. Having determined which side is noisy you should replace the wheel bearings and seal at that wheel. Unlike most front-wheel-drive cars that typically have sealed bearings, your Honda has bearings that require repacking with grease and periodic adjustment. Shop manuals on this car suggest inspection and repacking at 30,000-mile intervals and adjustment of the castellated spindle nut to 87-130 foot-pounds of torque.

Maximum pressure will prolong tire life

☐ I have a 1988 Lincoln Town Car with 150,000 kilometres. It's an airport limousine. The tires on the front of the car wear out prematurely (tire size P215-75-15) at 50-60,000 kilometres; the rears last about 130-170,000 kilometres. I had an alignment done five or six times at a front-end shop. What do you suggest to do to prolong front-tire life?

My other car, a 1985 Mazda 626 has 75,000 kilometres. The owner's manual doesn't say anything about automatic transmission service. Would you recommend changing the transmission fluid and, if you would, at what mileage? Alex Yampolsky

A ratio of two or more to one (front- compared to rear-tire wear) is more typical of a front-wheel-drive car, but may not be indicative of a problem on your rear-drive Lincoln. Ford, by the way, specifies the slightly larger P215/70R15 tires at 30 pounds per square inch front and 34 psi rear for your 1988 Town Car. I wouldn't necessarily describe 50-60,000 km front-tire life as premature wear, as it may be completely in line with your driving habits and conditions or type, size and quality of tires you are using.

Having said this, however, there may be one or more things you can indeed do to prolong front-tire life other than the all-important wheel alignment you have attended to. 1. Run tires at maximum allowable inflation pressure (likely 35 psi). 2. Install the best gas-charged shocks available in the front end. Shocks help minimize tire "scuCff," which is movement of the tire in both directions and at 90 degrees to the direction of travel. Scuff occurs anytime the suspension travels, and good shocks limit the amount of time that tire scuff may take place. 3. Use rib-type tires, as opposed to all season, on the front for longer life. 4. Up the tire size to P225/75R15 (at all wheel positions) next time you replace the tires. 5. Select tires with the highest possible treadwear rating numbers embossed on the sidewalls. Premium quality tires you require should have treadwear numbers close to or in excess of 300. Keep in mind this is a comparative rating of one tire to another and not indicative of how many actual miles of service you should expect.

Many manufacturers don't require transmission fluid changes before 100,000 kilometres, and some go as high as 160,000 kilometres if the vehicle is used under light duty or "normal" driving conditions. "Severe service" conditions such as trailer towing, driving in mountainous or hilly terrain, or continuous stop-and-go driving require more frequent transmission fluid changes. Mazda, by the way, recommends the first transmission fluid change at 12,000 kilometres for manuals and 48,000 kilometres for automatics like yours.

☐ If you have a problem with your car, you can write to: Bill Gardiner, Wheels section. Toronto Star Syndicate, One Yonge St., Toronto M5E 1E6. A couple of things to note: It would be very helpful if you would be more specific about your car model and please, write clearly.

How We Look to Our Lovers

Q. The male reader who wrote to you about having had an orchidectomy — the surgical removal of a testicle — was worried that, when he begins to have an intimate relationship with a woman, which was all in the future for him, the woman would be turned off by his having only one gonad and perhaps by the appearance of his scrotum.

I have something to say to this young man and to anyone else in similar circumstances. Three husbands and three lovers have provided me with a wide sampling of male appearance. My present husband has only one testicle — and our sex life is fine. Sexually, he functions very well. Better than some with the usual number. As for the appearance of his scrotum, it looks like scrotums in general, going by my sampling. So far as I am concerned, the man who wrote in about this is worrying about something of no importance to women, and I really hope he reads this and that it gets him over one of life's unnecessary worries.

A. Thanks for taking the time to help another reader. Reassurance from a woman who is not a professional can help a man when doctors and sex therapists leave him in doubt. I have over the years had a number of queries from men who have had this surgical procedure and so far as I can recall this is the first letter from a woman telling the sensible truth from a female viewpoint.

Testimony like yours is something men don't get very often about their needless self-doubts, especially when the men are young and have few adult women friends close enough to discuss such matters with. I hope that young man reads this and that other men read it and pass it around among their male friends during all those conversations men have about sex, in which a lot of hurtful misinformation gets spread around.

I like to quote a woman friend, not a professional but a sensible woman with grown sons, who said, "I have heard a lot of complaints from women about male performance in bed, but not one about the equipment." When men leave their women unsatisfied in some way, it is nearly always because the men fail to be loving and understanding, fail to see sex as something they share with a woman instead of being purely a source of male pleasure. And men have too little information about making love to a woman.

Nowadays people are used to hearing this from sex lecturers like me, and it begins to sound like a soft-soap job, something we say to minimize difficulties that are real. But it is true that between a man and woman who have a good relationship, many special things are understood and appreciated.

A good lover does not expect her man to look like an idealized Olympic medal winner, fitting or surpassing some artificial "norm." And the man in a happy relationship does not want to trade in his woman for one with more standardized or heroic breasts or other body parts.

I have a letter here on my desk from a woman with inverted nipples. She has avoided starting relationships with men because she foresees the moment when this is revealed. She is sure it would turn any man off. But women with inverted nipples attract men, keep men, raise children and have all kinds of good things out of life that women want. A woman with this condition almost always needs reassurance from somebody about this. The best reassurance would come not from me or a medical doctor but from a lover. Before a lover becomes a lover she would have to allow the acquaintance to reach that stage.

It might help to hear from some man who has been in a relationship with a woman like her that inverted nipples don't prevent a man from being attracted to a woman or enjoying her as a companion, cheering section and lover.

I have on my desk a letter from a man. It seems the same as one I got several years ago from another man. This man is over six feet tall, which makes him like the World Trade Center to someone my size, and he confides that his male member is of average size — more than adequate, as he has heard time and time again, for having successful intercourse with a woman.

But he thinks that women will be disappointed when he appears before them nude. He thinks that if fate had been considering his feelings he would have a male member more in keeping with his generous proportions.

Feelings like this I understand. When I was very young I thought I was a funny little thing — especially that I was too little to attract a man. This proved to be untrue. It is no longer a question with me but a known fact that a very small woman is not short of suitors. I certainly have never frightened men away by looking too imposing. But no words would have persuaded me of this when I was a girl — life had to teach me.

The tall man with an average-size member has to risk something, has to trust some woman and find out that his fears are groundless. I would like to build into his mind the knowledge that if he should happen to have his feelings hurt by some woman who is stupid or insensitive or a thoughtless tease, that life is not over. There are plenty of other women with better brains than that one.

I have known women who thought their behinds were too big, who had navels they were afraid to show to a lover, who were terrified of being seen without makeup because of pale freckles or those little brown spots that come with a certain age.

To the point of being boring, I repeatedly tell the world that good sex takes place within an understanding relationship. Sexually or appearance-wise, no one has to please the whole world, but only that significant other person.

CORPORATE FITNESS UPDATE

Q. Being the owner of a small company, I'm curious about fitness programs for employees. Now that they've had a few years to prove themselves, are they all they've been cracked up to be?

A. In a word, absolutely! When several large companies first established fitness centers for their top executives in the mid-1960s, managers intended to provide more than just another perk. Frazzled executives needed to unwind, relieve stress, and get fit. And that's just what happened: Those who took advantage of the facilities were less stressed and more productive, and had fewer sick days and medical bills than their sedentary counterparts.

Managers then set up centers for other employees, reasoning that they would benefit as much as top executives had. The managers went to great lengths, compiling elaborate statistics, to justify the investment in space and equipment. The justification was definitely there. A few years ago, for example, the Journal of the American Medical Association published an evaluation of a fitness program at Johnson & Johnson. The study, which kept track of inpatient medical charges, found that the program certainly had paid off. Medical care costs for Johnson & Johnson employees who used the facilities rose an average of $43 per year. For those who didn't use the facilities, the yearly rise was $76.

People who design fitness programs, for companies offer other persuasive figures. According to their estimates, the average program costs between $200 and $500 for each employee every year, but a company can expect a $600- to $800-per-employee savings in medical costs every year.

Employers are recognizing a psychological benefit as well. That benefit is hard to quantify, but very real all the same: Employees who have fitness centers available to them generally feel better about their employers than other workers do. Even an employee who doesn't actually use his facility appreciates it as a symbol of good will from the boss.

Employers also find that a center can be a valuable asset in the recruitment of new workers. It's more than just another benefit in the package. Pepsico, for instance, says it's more interested in potential employees who are interested in fitness. That way there's a payoff for both sides.

If you need further evidence that the corporate fitness program is an idea whose time has come, here's more — almost everyone's doing it. The Washington Business Group on Health surveyed 1,700 companies all over the country last year. In companies with 750 or more workers, the number jumped to 54 percent. And

Some business and investment facts just aren't

FINANCIAL PAGE

By Jack McArthur

Mankind staggers under information overload. Womankind, too.

To make it worse, the blizzard of facts, theories and explanations has a high content of stuff that's misleading, useless or simply a bunch of lies.

It's frustrating. The more material we get in this Information Society, the less useful it seems to be.

Ethical behavior hasn't kept up with our ability to communicate.

Now we need — and, happily, The Star had — explanations of the lies, inaccuracies and over-simplifications in last week's televised debates among the three major federal party leaders.

Let's hope this becomes a growth industry. And not just as it applies to politics. Business and investment needs it, too.

☐ We are increasingly victimized by statistics of doubtful meaning that get such big play that we feel they are significant.

Recent example: The report of low U.S. economic growth of 2.2 per cent (at an annual rate) in the third quarter.

On this pinhead foundation is constructed a rambling structure of alleged meaning for Americans, Canadians and the world — for growth, inflation, interest rates, almost anything.

No attention is paid to the fact that 2.2 is an estimate that may later be revised out of sight. Nor to the distinct possibility that it's a statistical oddity, not necessarily a sign of anything.

Aside from that, quarter-years are too brief and too subject to temporary jiggles to hang your parka on. They're all over the map.

Canada within a recent 18-month period had quarterly rates of 8.7 per cent, immediately followed by 1.2, then by 3.2, a little later by 0.4 — oh, gloom! — which was succeeded by 6.4.

☐ Also common is the much-publicized, supposedly solid conclusion based in half-hidden analytical quicksand.

The basis often is a supposed trend that will justify a policy, which, you'll suspect, is unjustifiable without resorting to fairy tales.

The National Energy Policy of the early '80s was keyed to such a tale: that the price of oil would rise to more than $80 a barrel, more than doubling.

It fell to $10 and isn't much higher now. The policy became a shambles.

Similarly with the justification for heavy government subsidizing of the development of Hibernia oil off Newfoundland. Its cost is far above current prices. No problem. Let's have a study showing a boom in prices that makes it nicely profitable.

Corporations sometimes do it, too. They have an urge to do something. So they sponsor an unlikely analysis, which, if you don't look closely, makes it appear okay.

☐ An allied deception is the fact that isn't a fact.

Our hassling over freer trade with the U.S. is loaded with this nonsense.

Both sides confidently recite figures and statements from sometimes lengthy studies. They look quite definite when taken out of context — 250,000 new jobs, 80,000 jobs lost, such-and-such an industry wiped out or booming.

You're not told the studies are highly and necessarily hypothetical. Those done by independent economists usually emphasize that there can be nothing close to certainty and actual results may be quite different.

They're assuming certain human reactions and certain economic and financial backgrounds. They're really only talking about a variety of possibilities.

☐ We suffer much from regulatory protection that isn't there.

It's outlined reassuringly and in increasing detail, with many promises of fairness and honesty.

But good things don't seem to happen all that rapidly. We have a situation terribly misleading for decisions about where our money should go.

We've had 20 years of scandal and seemingly strong efforts to provide regulators and rules to make sure we can, in a timely way, learn the truth, the whole truth and nothing but.

If anything, though, there are more scandals, more loopholes showing up. And a remarkably lackadaisical attitude among enforcers. The more rules there are, the less strictly they seem to be enforced.

You've seen a succession of financial institutions fail in the '80s, something that almost never used to happen. Many were found to have made business decisions that were awful, some beyond what were allowed.

In many cases, when regulators discovered such things — or suspected them — they didn't tell us about them and did too little, too late, to force the companies to mend their ways. There were even inclinations to keep them secret from the unsuspecting investors out there.

The collapse of Alberta's large Principal Group of financial companies is a horror show of regulatory failure.

Now we have another shocker in an Ontario survey of financial reporting to investors by corporations.

Of 250, about one-quarter are reported as failing to meet standards of good disclosure or accounting.

That failure will be intentional in almost every case. Many years of public emphasis upon fair dealing with investors mean most companies are fully aware of what's wanted.

Will there be a big rush to end the problem, with tough, quick penalties? Past practice suggests the approach will be one of gradualism and wrist-slapping.

Appropriate here is a comment by Douglas Peters, senior vice-president of the Toronto-Dominion Bank:

"The sorry record of provincial regulation of financial institutions makes one wonder why the provinces would want to be in the business at all."

You can apply a similar indictment to many other brands of investment regulation.

NEW TOOLS FOR THE DO-IT-YOURSELFER

By Larry Eisinger

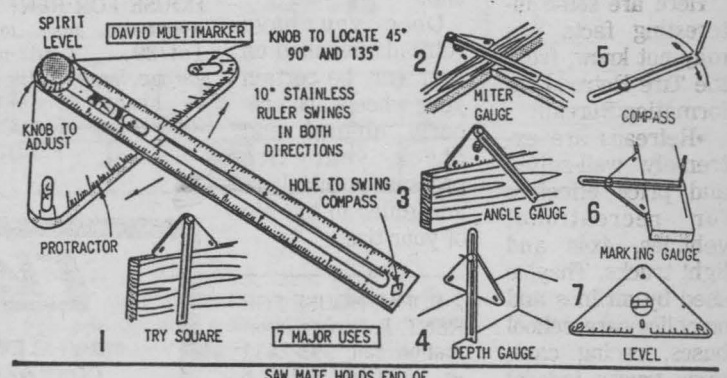
Here are two ingenious tools recently imported from Holland that should be welcomed by all do-it-yourselfers. One is extremely versatile and the other offers a better solution to an age-old problem.

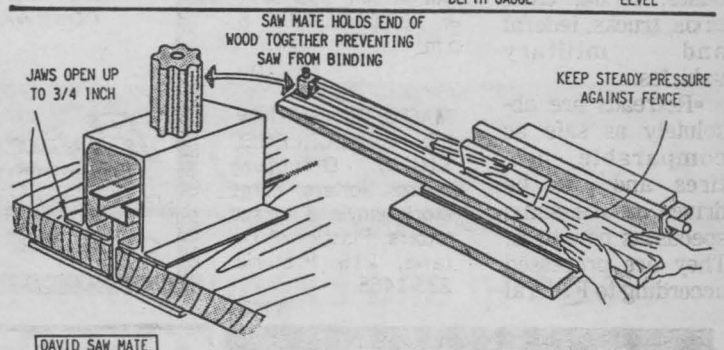
The versatile tool is appropriately called the Multimarker because it can be used as a try square, miter square, angle gauge, depth gauge, marking gauge, level, compass, in addition to being a rule and protractor! The head is molded from plastic and fitted with a spirit level. The 10-inch stainless steel ruler is held in place by a knob that can be screwed tight to perform various functions or the knob can be unscrewed so the ruler can be used separately and the base used as a level. The Multimarker won first prize in Holland's National Inventor's Contest held last year. Cost is about $16.

Another new tool, appropriately called Saw mate, solves an age-old problem encountered when ripping lumber or a sheet of plywood. We all have had the experience — which at times can be very dangerous — of having the narrow piece of plywood or lumber sag while being ripped. The usual solution requires an extra pair of hands, but even with a helper holding the end of a plywood sheet or a long board, while ripping it on a table or radial saw you run the risk of having the blade bind or making a curved cut because your helper exerts pressure on the plywood or lumber, causing it to pull ever so slightly away from the rip fence. For years I have used a small C-clamp to hold the stock together after the first foot or so has been ripped.

But now a Dutch inventor has come up with the idea of an extruded section of aluminum fitted with a screw and knob that can be adjusted to clamp lumber or paneling up to ¾-inch thick. Start ripping and after a foot or so stop sawing and clamp the saw.

HOME WORKSHOP FILE





Suggested retain price is $12.95 at many home centers.

Both tools are marketed under the David name by Themans Tools Inc., 5721 Bayside Road, Virginia Beach, Va. 23455.

As a reader service, Larry Eisinger has published two HARDCOVER books (No. 101) CARPENTRY AND WOODWORKING and (No.102) PLUMBING AND HEATING. With hundreds of photos and drawings, they will help you with everyday techniques. If you are not completely satisfied, your money will be refunded. The cost of either book is $3.95, plus 70 cents shipping. Send a cheque or money order for $4.75, payable to Eisinger Communications, Inc., to HOME WORKSHOP, care of your newspaper, Box 158, Staten Island, N.Y. 10314. Also available at a cost of $3.00 is an 8-page illustrated brochure on HOME TELEPHONE INSTALLATION TIPS.

A PRIMER ON RETREADED TIRES

The only thing between you and the road is your tires — so why not opt for the best? Many students are taking a good look at the options available on todays tire market, and are discovering retreaded tires offer safe and dependable performance at a far lower cost—up to 50 percent less—than comparable new tires.

Here are some interesting facts you may not know, from the Tire Retread Information Bureau:

•Retreads are extremely well-suited and price effective for recreational vehicles, 4x4s and light trucks. They're used by airlines and on police cars, school buses, racing cars, taxis, trucks, federal and military vehicles.

•Retreads are absolutely as safe as comparable new tires and can be driven at the same speeds as new tires. They are processed according to Federal Safety Standards.

•Retreads are available in high performance sizes in all tread designs.

•With proper maintenance and care, retreads can give you about the save mileage as new tires and they look just like new tires.

It's a good idea to comparison shop for retreaded tires and to ask for a written warranty. The warranty may be for workmanship, mileage or some combination of the two.

Once you have retreads installed on your car, be certain your wheels are properly aligned and check your tire pressure regularly to add miles to the life of your tires.

Cooke's book giving Derby new priority

By Milt Dunnell

Jack Kent Cooke was saying, the other day, he intends to win the Kentucky Derby and it could be as soon as 1990. No, he didn't call specifically to say he was about to win the Run for the Roses. It was about something else. The Kentucky Derby thing was incidental. Considering Cooke's track record, though, it could be prophetic.

Those who know Cooke, from his radio and publishing days in Toronto, might be inclined to store the prediction in their mind banks for the day he arrives at barn 40, Churchill Downs, as he almost certainly will. Cooke's success ratings in his pursuit of sports baubles has been pretty close to phenomenal.

As far as anyone can recall, it all started when he took dead aim at the championship of the International Baseball League — a modest target in light of later developments — and bought the Toronto Maple Leafs, who were in a state of comfortable lethargy.

Under Cooke's aggressive ownership, they did win the pennant, in short order, and Cooke was named owner of the year in minor league baseball. Much later, when he had become a big wheel on California's professional sports scene, he dictated that his Lakers win the world championship of basketball — which they did — and that his Kings win the Stanley Cup of hockey — which they didn't.

Then, he drifted eastward and decreed that his Washington Redskins should win big-time football's Super Bowl. No one has to be reminded how that turned out. So despite the failure of the Kings to become the Montreal Canadiens of California, Cooke's batting average would make even George Steinbrenner happy.

Lively One wasn't

The Kentucky Derby, though, could be Cooke's rose at the end of the rainbow. He doesn't need the pot of gold.

ARTHRITIS CAUSED 41 MILLION WORK DAYS LOST

Arthritis costs Canada dearly! According to The Arthritis Society, the impact of this disease on Canada's economy is staggering.

In Canada, almost four million people are affected by arthritis, including some 74,000 children aged 15 and under. That means one in seven Canadians has arthritis, or one in three families has been touched by it.

Then, there is the effect on the workforce. Nearly 1.5 million Canadians with arthritis are in the workforce. Review of Health and Welfare Canada data reveals that some 246,000 people took days off work in a six-month period because of arthritis. That represents more than 41 million work days lost per year because of this disease, or an average of 11 days per person per year. The costs has been estimated at more than $1.4 billion in lost wages.

Of Canadians with arthritis who work, 19.6 per cent are limited in their activities because of their disease. And, of homemakers who suffer arthritis, some 21.4 per cent are limited in their activities within the home.

To make a donation or for more information about arthritis, contact The Arthritis Society--Canada's only non-profit organization devoted solely to funding and promoting arthritis research, patient care and public education. For information contact: Peggy Hill at 933-7999.

He has that already. There are something like 45,000 thoroughbred foals dropped every year in North America. Just getting one that's good enough to answer the bugle on the first Saturday in May, is a tremendous achievement — quite aside from winning it.

Nelson Bunker Hunt may have owned more horses in his day than the Bengal Lancers. In 30 years of racing, he has won stakes such as the Epsom Derby, the Washington International, the Rothmans International at Woodbine and countless other major races in half a dozen countries but he never has been even close in the Kentucky Derby.

This year, he thought he had a slight chance with Lively One, only his second Derby starter — ever. Charlie Whittingham, the bald eagle of the Pacific coast, considered Lively One worthy of the trip to Louisville. Bill Shoemaker, the world's winningest jockey, came along to ride him. Lively One finished up the track. It may have been Bunker Hunt's last chance for a sniff of the roses, since he has been forced to cut back drastically in his racing interests.

Another big leaguer who has been rebuffed is Ogden Phipps, who had Seeking The Gold in this year's race. Seeking The Gold was only Phipps' second Derby starter in 23 years of racing. He didn't win. In 1966, when the future books said Phipps' Buckpasser couldn't lose, the colt developed a hoof injury and didn't run in the Derby. He got back to the track in time to be declared the 3-year-old champion.

Based in Kentucky

Alfred Vanderbilt was another giant of the turf who had the roses snatched out of his hands. He started the undefeated Native Dancer — everybody's favorite. Native Dancer got bumped at the clubhouse bend and suffered the only loss of his career, to Dark Star. Yes, Churchill Downs, on the first Saturday in May, has blasted a lot of dreams and broken a lot of hearts. But Cooke claims to welcome the challenge.

"We have an excellent band of broodmares," he reasons, "and we breed them to the best sires available. All of the 39 yearlings who will turn 2 on Jan. 1 are by sires such as Alleged, Alydar, Stop The Music, Storm Bird, Danzig, Secretariat, Northern Dancer, Highland Blade, His Majesty, Lyphard, Foolish Pleasure."

Although Cooke lives on his farm in Virginia, his thoroughbred operations are centred in Kentucky, where he has named his son, Ralph, executive vice-president of Elmendorf Farm, which he acquired from the Max Gluck estate.

Cooke believes his best 2-year-old will turn out to be a colt by Danzig. If that one does not become a Kentucky Derby prospect, he has 19 other colts as possible candidates, along with 19 fillies of impeccable family.

There was a time when owners and trainers preferred that fillies should remain in their stalls on Kentucky Derby day. Then along came ladies like Genuine Risk and Winning Colors to temper that kind of thinking. Still, the numbers are there to indicate a filly should go for the Oaks and let the colts run for the roses. Since 1875, only three fillies have made it to the winner's enclosure.

When Cooke acquired the Los Angeles Daily News, in December of 1985, the Washington Post ran what it called "The Book on Cooke." A less frivolous gazette surely would have called it "The Cooke Book." Anyway, the Post listed Cooke's most prominent holdings and the first three, in order, were the Redskins, the Chrysler and Kent buildings in New York and Elmendorf in Kentucky.

With racing that close to the top of his totem pole, Cooke can be considered serious when he says he is going after the Kentucky Derby. It's a tough league. But then, no one ever said the NFL was a piece of cheesecake.

Surround sound: Not only at the movies

The astounding realism that one hears at many movie theaters is the result of the Dolby* Surround system, which uses a specially encoded soundtrack and multi-speaker reproduction to achieve its sonic magic.

Many pre-recorded videos also make use of Dolby encoding for striking theater ambience, and that can be appreciated right in one's own home, this holiday season, with equipment possessing special decoding circuitry and the addition of rear speakers.

The necessary decoding circuitry is not only being made available in the audio/video surround processors on the market, but also in integrated amps and in stereo receivers as well.

"We're allowing consumers to jump into surround sound, no matter where they might be in their current stereo system," says Paul Foschino, assistant general manager/merchandising for Technics, which offers a broad range of surround sound products.

An audio/video surround processor, such as the Technics SH-AV40, is ideal for someone who already has audio and video equipment and is looking to add the Dolby Surround system, as well as an audio/video surround system that gives dynamic ambience effects with non-Dolby film soundtracks, music sources and even sporting events.

The SH-AV40 accepts three sets of video signals—ideal for handling a TV and two VCRs. A tape/source position simplifies handling of audio-only sources, such as a cassette deck. The unit also has a built-in amp specially designed to drive surround sound speakers, such as the Technics SB-S20s.

For someone already possessing an audio tuner, Technics makes available an audio/video integrated amp, the SU-AV55, with digital Dolby surround capabilities.

The four-channel amp in the SU-AV55 provides high output power and compact disc, tuner, TV and video inputs to complement the input/output facilities for a tape deck and two VCRs.

For someone starting an audio system from scratch, there's the Technics SA-R530 quartz-synthesized AM/FM remote control stereo receiver.

The piece contains a high-powered amp, a quartz digital tuner, a seven-band electronic equalizer, and an audio/video remote control with learning capability, as well as Dolby and AV surround processors.

Dolby is a registered trademark of Dolby Laboratories.

PUBLIC NOTICE

New Emergency, Out Patient and Admitting Department Opening Tuesday 8 a.m.

As part of its on-going renovation program, the Cornwall General Hospital will be opening its new Emergency, Outpatient and Admitting Department with entrances off Second Street, on Tuesday November 29, 1988 at 8 a.m. At this time the existing Emergency entrance off Old Orchard Ave. will be closed to public access to allow reconstruction of that area. The move of the Emergency Department will commence on Monday, November 28, 1988 and our Emergency Department will be open, but at reduced capacity. We apologize for any inconvenience that may be caused.

Below is a diagram pointing out the new entrances off Second St. and the parking area located adjacent the Clinic Building for Emergency use. Please note that the south entrance is for ambulance use only and that all Emergency, Outpatients and Admissions should use the north, or second entrance.

DOUGHNUTS

Serve plain, sugared or glazed

4 eggs - beaten
2/3 cup sugar
1/3 cup milk
1/3 cup melted shortening
3 1/2 cup sifted all purpose flour
3 tsp. baking powder
3/4 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. nutmeg

—Combine eggs and sugar beat until light. Add milk and cooled shortening
—Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon and nutmeg
—Add to egg mixture; mix until smooth
—Chill soft dough thoroughly in refrigerator.
—Roll dough out gentle 1/3" thick. Cut with floured doughnut cutter, let stand 10 to 15 minutes

Heat fat 3 to 4" deep in heavy kettle or deep fat fryer 375 degrees
—Transfer doughnuts to fat on broad spatula using care not to alter shape.
—Slip in hot fat
—Add only enough doughnuts at a time as can float on the flat or that can be turned easily
—Turn the doughnuts as they rise to the surface
—Fry 2 to 3 minutes or just until doughnuts are golden brown
—Lift doughnuts from fat, using care not to prick them
—Drain on paper towels

TO GLAZE
—Add 1/3 cup boiling water to 1 cup confectioner sugar
—Mix well. Dip warm doughnuts one at a time, into the warm glaze the number is getting larger and larger. Enlightened managers are coming to the inevitable conclusion that encouraging good health is a concept that works.

PHOTO CAPTION:

Keep up what you started at work and challenge your balance, coordination and cardiovascular system with this jazzy aerobic conditioner.

PHOTO 1: Hop on your left foot. Lift your right knee upward near hip level. Angle the knee outward and the lower leg and foot inward (known as an "attitude" in dance terminology). Touch your left arm/hand across to touch on or near the right knee. Swing your right arm comfortably behind you. Keep your torso lifted and tall throughout.

PHOTO 2: Cross step the right foot over the left and bend both knees (demi plie). Arms are along sides at low diagonals with hands flexed. Reverse both movements and then continue to alternate.

Suggested Music: "Moonbeam" by Men Without Hats.

Why Not Ring In The New Year, With A Big Hello For Those Special People

They've got your number! Everyone on your holiday gift list will be eager to use their new Conair phones. Special features like a speakerphone and larger-than-life keypads are sure to make these stand-out gifts.

You can choose one of two Big Button phones — each fits nicely on a desk or wall. Prima Big Button Slimline takes very little space on a bedside table, hides an easy-to-read dial in its receiver and fits into any decor in gray, slate blue or almond.

Or you might pick another Big Button phone, whose dial is highly visible on its wafer thin base. It remembers 15 numbers and has a convenient slide drawer memory index.

Hands-free talking is your third possible gift choice, with Conair's Prima Speakerphone that has a big 32 memories, plus hold and volume control functions. You'll feel especially confident about Conair's generous two and three year warranties on its phones.

be replaced. Last week it was that strange mechanism that lives in the toilet tank. You never see it until the bathroom is flooded. Then you wade in, remove the tank lid and there it is — a broken ball cock. Even the name is strange isn't it? Back to the article. It has wonderful suggestions for 'disposable income, and how far your money should go.' What income I have couldn't go as far as the front door without help and is usually disposed of before I get it.

What all the tax credits and mumbo jumbo actually means is that if you are in a high tax bracket you'll be better off and, a lot better off than those of us in the lower brackets.

Many of us won't be able to use all the tax credits because we don't have enough income. We sure don't have 'disposable incomes'. Anyway, I'm keeping the article just in case I buy a winning lottery ticket. It also makes me think of lots of ways I would like to 'dispose' of Mr. Wilson's Tax Reform - unprintable ones. Do you suppose he really does his own Income Tax Return?

Instead of me working out a budget so that I can live within my means, it's about time the Federal Government worked out a budget to do likewise. Then maybe I would still have enough in the miscellaneous left over to buy a new ball cock for the toilet.

CHAMPAGNE ADDS A TOUCH OF CLASS TO ANY OCCASION—This holiday season, serve Krug Grande Cuvee with the classic accompaniment, smoked salmon, and treat your guests to a new taste sensation, Tapenade, a vegetable spread from the French Provençal region.

French prestige champagne will turn any occasion into a holiday

Traditionally, champagne has been served as an aperitif, with smoked salmon, caviar and oysters, or as a toast on special occasions.

Today, however, the prestige champagnes from France, more complex and fuller-bodied than other champagnes, can be served with a wide variety of foods throughout the meal.

And now, coupled with the increased interest in different cuisines, prestige champagne such as Krug Grande Cuvee is being served with a vast array of exotic foods, making the entire dining experience more interesting, more of an adventure.

Holiday time is the perfect occasion to introduce your guests to some of the newer taste sensations, along with some of the classics.

Sliced, smoked salmon cut and served on toast points is a traditional accompaniment. The richness of the salmon is offset by the crisp dryness of the Krug Grande Cuvee.

One of the newer taste treats to be paired with champagne is Tapenade, a spread for fresh vegetables or a crusty French bread.

Krug Grande Cuvee, a full-bodied champagne, is the perfect complement to the salty, piquant flavor of this Provençal specialty made from olives and anchovies.

In France, food is considered one of the foremost pleasures of life. And premium champagne is the ultimate way to celebrate that pleasure. Whether served with one of the old standards or a new delicacy, champagne adds sparkle to any occasion.

For additional serving suggestions, send a self-addressed, stamped #10 envelope to: Krug Recipe Booklet, Suite 1102, 211 East 43rd Street, New York, NY 10017.

TAPENADE

½ cup pitted black olives
1 large clove garlic, peeled
6 anchovy fillets (2 oz. can)
1½ tablespoons capers, drained
Juice of ½ lemon
¼ cup olive oil
⅓ cup fresh parsley, minced
½ teaspoon dried thyme
Fresh ground black pepper
Additional parsley for garnish

Place olives, garlic, anchovies and capers in blender and puree coarsely.

Place mixture in a large bowl, and stir in lemon juice, olive oil, parsley, thyme and pepper.

Refrigerate for one or two hours to allow flavors to develop. Serve with sliced, raw vegetables or breads.

Makes about ¾ cup.

Know where to look: Ideas on finding the ideal gift

Giving a "perfect gift" to that special someone for Christmas, a birthday or any other occasion doesn't have to cost a lot of money, says author Tony Hyman.

"Find a gift that reflects the recipient's interests, something he or she couldn't find for him or herself," Hyman advises.

"It's easier than you think. If you know where to look, you can find all sorts of exciting gifts without leaving your easy chair!"

Hyman lists hundreds of small companies which sell hard-to-find items in Cash For Your Undiscovered Treasures, a directory of people who buy and sell "odd used things" through the mail.

For example, what baseball fan could resist a bat used by his or her favorite player? Kenrich Company's free catalog offers hundreds of genuine used major league bats, balls and other equipment, some more than 50 years old, for $5 to $60.

Do you know a little miss who'd love a handmade dollhouse? The Dollhouse Factory's 64-page catalog offers exquisite antique and modern houses for sale. They will also buy your old dollhouse to pass on to a new generation!

Thrill grandma by replacing missing pieces in her set of fine china, crystal or silver.

There is a network of dealers who buy and sell French, English or American table services from every period.

Some dealers keep 100,000 pieces of obsolete tableware on hand to help you find what you want.

A letter or photograph signed by a famous person looks impressive on anyone's office wall. One of the 22 autograph specialists described in Cash For Your Undiscovered Treasures recently offered the autographs of hundreds of famous folks in all walks of life for sale at less than $25 each.

Original newspapers from as far back as the 1600s with stories of the Revolution, slavery, the Old West, and much more, can be purchased for as little as $3 each from Boston's Phil Barber, whose catalog is a must for social studies teachers. Early advertising related to a friend's profession also makes a thoughtful yet inexpensive gift.

Hyman tells of one woman who gave her husband a 1950 Chevy owner's manual for their anniversary. "It was the first car we ever took to lover's lane," she explained, proving that great gifts are limited only by your imagination and memories.

To spark your imagination, Hyman's book puts you in touch with 1,500 people who buy and sell almost anything ever made. It's available exclusively by mail; to order, send $19.95 to Treasure Find, Box 699, Claremont, CA 91711. Credit card orders are $22.95; call 1-800-543-7500. When ordering, give the name of this newspaper to get a 30-day, money back guarantee.

Antique wedding gowns, flintlock rifles, neon signs, a favorite top 40 hit from your high school days (or the jukebox to play it on)...there is an honest, helpful expert only a letter or a phone call away.

"Dealing with these specialists is a pleasure," Hyman says. "When you phone, you don't get a computer. You talk directly to the owner, who can describe exactly what you're buying, guarantee it, and give custom service. What a great way to shop!"

And for the person has has everything? "Give them a copy of Cash For Your Undiscovered Treasures," Hyman says. "Someday, they may want to sell all that stuff."

Congratulations going out to Allen Kellogg who was the recipient of the "Sportsman of the Year" award which took place Nov. 12th in St. Catharines. He is the son of Florence Kellogg & the late Ernest Kellogg. Allen was born in Winchester & played senior hockey, in Cornwall, when 18. He now lives in the St. Catharines area. A very proud mother, Mrs. Kellogg, attended the presentation.

Ted at Pet Food Plus reports to us that Judy's finger is back in shape and she should be able to unload the truck again.

Bob, Ernie says that the "fish" in Brockville are "bigger" than in Cornwall!!

It's true, Puffy. There is no such thing as a "solar powered diesel Topaz" ... but now, the Marquis ...

Simon Villeneuve's ad in the election campaign featuring the printout of all the names was just an excellent idea.

It's "stocking stuffer" time ... plush chicken keychains still available at Chateau St. Jerome with total profits going to Sparky's Toy Drive. Why not support the "chicken" that's supporting its community!

The Mayor of Cumberland County (pop. 30,000 plus) in by acclamation for his fourth term. Salary is $60,000 plus a few other "perks" including a car. Some people might be surprised to learn that a Mayor of Cornwall "may suffer a cut in salary" ...

John Slaney, of the Cornwall Royals, recently doing the touristy "thing" with his mom & dad who were down from Newfoundland.

Congratulations to Carol on the birth of her baby boy. 6 lbs. 7 1/2 oz. born November 18, 1988.

Talk about "hard times". Seems Ray (Vera's Lunch) Dupuis was forced to "save all summer" to spring for a winter coat! Toque! Toque!

Watching the federal election results last week ... couldn't help noticing when David Peterson was interviewed how much he was sweating.

"Well Al," you're not the only one that saw that big "brown" moose last week. Theresa Boyer of Summerstown also reported it to city police. She too could not believe her eyes. "A moose on 10th St. E." and a female at that. The moose had no antlers and the way I understand it, a female has no "horns". Just males.

"Balloon's, kisses and hugs" and a big happy birthday going out to the world traveler (Ricky) Richard Reid of Long Sault. With love Mom and all the family.

George Gordon is no longer with the Royal Insurance Company. He is now the sole proprietor of Givogue Kitchens and has moved the business to RR 1, St. Andrews West where he will travel that country mile for you. Good Luck, George.

Cornwall will be bidding Rick (Touche Ross) Johnston a fond "adieu" as he heads for the greener pastures of Kitchener.

Belated Birthday wishes to Larry (Chateau St. Jerome) Pilon. How old is he ...? Ran out of fingers & toes ...

Thieves strike again...on Nov. 22/88 Tuesday, thieves were out roaming around the east end behind Freddy's on Montreal Rd. They broke into several cars, they stole a book-bag with several large articles. That book-bag belonged to a young teenager. It took this young lady a long time and hard work to save and buy that book-bag. She was very upset to see that all the things she had worked so hard for were gone. It's a shame that there are people out there that feel that they never have to work for things in life, just steal from others. Neighbourhood Watch must get stronger...

It's nice to have a citizen of Martintown so interested in Cornwall City politics that he would go out of his way to attend the Chamber debate and even write a letter to the editor of the Freeholder!!

"Scuttle" buffs couldn't help but notice the bare-bones-appearance of last week's issue ... due to brain-drain after casting all those ballots.

Speaking of brain-drain ... Aubry says "thanks" to the Swedish Chef. Apparently someone tried to "scramble" the windows of his house after Chamber "debate" ...

Cornwall earning itself title as "Tailgating Capital"! Only hope, when you come up mine, you've kept up your insurance payments ... I'm "looking for the good life" & YOU could be the answer!!

Mark at S.G. Wells has a pet cricket trained to sing Christmas songs. Keeps him humming all day ... mm!

"40" candles for a large cake. Happy Birthday going out to Rita De Montigny. Save me a piece of that birthday cake.

One Camera Satisfies Needs of Pro and Amateur Photographers

It used to be that when people wanted an easy-to-use, point-and-shoot camera, they bought a compact 35mm camera. Those who photographed creatively or as a hobby opted for the more professional SLR (single lens reflex) camera.

But now, there is one camera that combines the ease of use of the 35mm camera with the sophistication of an SLR - the Konica Z-up80, you can shoot portraits, sports, night scenes, and fast and slow motion under any circumstances, any conditions, telephoto or zoom—and the features are all built in!

Among these features are included the widest-range built-in 40mm wide angle/80mm telephoto power zoom lens; widest-range shutter speed from 1-1/500 second programmable; and most extensive ISO setting from 50 to 3200 speeds.

What's more, you can capture up to 39 multiple exposures on one frame, shoot sequentially on continuous exposure at 1.3 frames per second, and program the shutter to remain open up to 99 hours!

The Konica Z-up80 Compact 35mm Camera is one gift that will provide a lifetime of photographic fun and skills.

Traditional toys making a comeback this Christmas

As Christmas approaches, adults search for gifts that will stimulate children's imaginations and bring enjoyment throughout the coming year.

Parents are discovering toys that were part of their childhood are just as entertaining to today's children, so it is little wonder that traditional toys are as strong as ever in the marketplace.

Tinker Toys and Lincoln Logs, from Playskool, construction toys that have been American favorites for generations, are examples of playthings that help children develop hand/eye coordination while they build imaginative edifices from individual parts sturdy enough to last for years.

An updated construction toy for the '80s, Pipeworks enables children to build super-sized creations they can climb on, ride on and play with, indoors and out.

Its unique "click-lock" connecting system makes building quick and easy, and assures the safety of little hands and fingers.

Now-classic toy

Mr. Potato Head, another now-classic toy remembered as part of the baby boomer generation, has come a long way since his introduction in 1952.

Originally a set of eyes, ears, noses and mouths that gave ordinary vegetables, especially potatoes, their own personalities, Mr. Potato Head now has his own plastic body and has been joined by a wife and kids.

A longtime favorite for infants, The Busy Box is a big, colorful playcenter that's a delight to wake up to with its 10 activities and sounds.

A new "Busy" toy that infants will cherish this Christmas is the soft, huggable playtime pal, Busy Elephant, with many fun-filled activities and sounds. Baby is always amused while developing manual dexterity and discovering how to create sounds and movement.

DIET CENTER

MACRONUTRIENTS

WATER "Aren't All Liquids Created Equal?"

There is no other beverage that is a comparable substitute for water in the body. It contains no chemical additives that will disrupt the body's delicate balance, but does contain essential trace minerals. Water is inexpensive and calorie free, making it the perfect drink for dieting.

Although coffee and tea are made with water, they contain caffeine, tars and chemicals that may be harmful to the body in excessive amounts. Coffee acts as a diuretic, causing the kidneys to excrete more water than normal.

Alcohol also possesses this diuretic effect, and in large amounts, can cause the body to become dehydrated. For those weight-conscious individuals, alcohol's calorie content cannot be overlooked.

Soda has just the opposite effect on the body. If several cans are drunk every day, the sodium content may cause water retention.

A large number of sodas also contain caffeine. Caffeine may also be in some fruit juices, so it's prudent to read the label.

Practical design ideas for the little one's lavatory

There are children's clothes, children's toys, children's beds and furniture—all designed especially for little bodies. Yet, children are expected to use an adult-sized bathroom with a too-high sink, a too-high mirror and even a too-high toilet.

These days, bathroom designers are paying more attention to the special needs of children, and are designing bathrooms that are just right for them.

When a bathroom is planned for young children, safety and accessibility are the major concerns, according to Ellen Cheever, CKD, ASID, author of The Basics of Bathroom Design...and Beyond.

"Children have a fascination with anything new—medicine, faucets, electrical outlets," Cheever said. "They also face accessibility limitations because of their shorter height and less firm grasp."

With proper design and planning, these problems are overcome easily.

In the child's bathroom, safety should be addressed first. The small child's natural inclination to put things in his or her mouth, and the tendency to mistake pills and tablets for candy, make the storage of medicines and cleaning materials in the bathroom potentially hazardous.

Creating out-of-reach storage areas for these items reduces the chances of accidental poisoning.

Locks can be fun to play with—until the child is trapped in the bathroom. This situation can be addressed by installing locks that can be opened from the outside, and by avoiding the use of latches and hooks.

Adjusting water to the proper temperature is a difficult task for youngsters. Whenever possible, single handle water controls, which are easier for children to use, should be installed.

Specially designed shower valves which balance water pressure are available, as are valves which will turn on only cold water first.

For extra safety, the valve can have a thermostat control device which limits water temperature to a predetermined setting, according to Cheever. These items will help control sudden surges of hot or cold water.

After safety has been considered, attention should be directed to installing fixtures and other features that will adjust easily as the child grows.

Cheever recommends the use of standard sized fixtures.

"Children will outgrow their special needs," she said.

While they are still small, a pull-out or flip-down step can be installed under the wash basin. With this helpmate, the child will be able to reach faucets, soap, etc., without an adult's help. For safety, make sure the step has a non-skid surface.

Even with the step, a small child still will be too short to use a standard vanity mirror. Use mirror squares, secured with tape, on the wall. These can be moved up the wall until the vanity mirror becomes visible to the child.

MAKE HEALTHIER PLANTS MORE CONVENIENT with Décor America's new Watermatic™ Self-Watering Plant Pots.

Plants grow lush and beautiful in new self-watering plant pots

Most plants grow well indoors unless they get too much or too little water. Too much is as bad as too little.

It's difficult to determine exactly how much water to give each species of plant. An African Violet needs water more often than a Geranium.

Décor America has designed a line of Self-Watering Plant Pots to solve these plant problems. When you fill the pot's clear waterwell, capillary action allows each plant to take in only as much water as it needs. The pot is specially designed to aerate the root systems as well. Plants grow lush and beautiful—even hard-to-grow Ficus trees thrive.

The Royal Horticultural Society of Victoria (affiliated with the R.H.S. of U.K. and The State Garden Clubs of U.S.A.) recommend Décor's Watermatic™ Self-Watering Plant Pots.

Self-Watering Plant Pots are great for people who travel or like to keep plants in a second home. You can forget about watering a 6" pot for as long as four weeks. Available in a range of styles, colors and sizes, they're priced from $4.25 to $11.95.

*ABC carol competition an annual seasonal event in the Stormont, Dundas & Glengarry area, closing date November 28/88. First proposed in 1985, this will be the fourth such competition. Although organized by the local chapter of the Association for Bright Children, the competition is open to ALL school children in the three counties. Competitors are given the choice of setting new words to an existing tune or writing the words and music of a completely original Christmas carol or song. Within these two classes the entries are judged in three age groups — up to grade 3, grades 4, 5 & 6 and grades 7 and above — and, where appropriate, according to language (English or French). Group entries submitted as cooperative efforts by up to six children are encouraged, and many class teachers take advantage of this to use the competition as a "creative-writing" exercise for their classes. We now receive financial assistance from both public and separate school boards which enable us to present trophies to the prize-winning carols and medals to all those involved in creating the winning and "commended" entries. Every child who participates receives a certificate, which we try to distribute to their schools before Christmas. For more details please contact: Mrs. Sue Martin, 509 Kirkwood St. Cornwall, Ont., K6H 5Y9. Telephone 938-7384.

Saturday, December 3, the Martintown volunteer Fire Dept. will be having their annual Christmas dance at the Martintown Community Centre, 9-1. Entertaining will be Glengarry's own "McMartin Fiddle" featuring Gerry O'Neill. All proceeds will go to help purchase much needed equipment and help fund our Christmas kids party. Come spend a Celtic Christmas evening with us.

*St. Columban's C.W.L. are having their annual Christmas Tea and Sale to be held Wednesday, November 30th, from 1:30 to 4:00 p.m. at St. Columban's Parish Centre. Proceeds for charity.

*On Friday evening, December 2, 1988 at 7:30 p.m. a Christmas Concert featuring Canada's most famous choristers, the St. Michael's Choir School of Toronto will perform a two-hour program at St. Columban's Church. You will hear everythig from classical, folksongs to Broadway tunes sung by boys from grades 6 through 13. Tickets: Adults $5.00 and children under 12 — $3.00

*The Royal Canadian Air Force Association are having a Euchre every Wednesday evening at 8 p.m.

JOHN CLEARY M.P.P. REPORTS

MINISTRY ANNOUNCES HEALTHY LIFESTYLES CAMPAIGN

Health Minister Elinor Caplan recently announced the launch of a comprehensive, three-year Healthy Lifestyles Promotion Program aimed at encouraging people to stop smoking, moderate their drinking, and adopt a more nutritious diet.

The health ministry will spend $1.5 million annually to fund the program which will include a province-wide media campaign and practical support for community-based programs and projects.

The evidence exists to demonstrate that lifestyle habits such as smoking, excessive drinking and poor diet are major factors in heart disease, stroke, cancer, respiratory disease and accidents.

The Ministry wants to heighten awareness of healthy lifestyle choices and show healthy living can contribute to the prevention of disease and to individual well-being and support people in making these choices.

Mrs. Caplan stressed the importance of community participation. Local groups and agencies will be encouraged to start or improve services to support those who want to change their lifestyle.

In developing program goals, the ministry was advised by a committee of experts in the fields of alcohol, nutrition, heart and circulatory disease prevention, multicultural issues and women's health issues.

The program began with a mass media campaign on radio and television Monday, October 24, using the theme, "Health. It's a great feeling." The Ministry will develop pamphlets, brochures and sample programs for local groups who want to start projects in their own communities.

It will also work closely with public health units and district health councils to stimulate new community projects that will complement existing health promotion programs and services.

The Healthy Lifestyles Promotion Program will be evaluated over three years. The resulting information should be valuable for future community program planning.

ONTARIO AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE BOARD Launches Telephone Information Service

North York, Ontario - The Ontario Automobile Insurance Board has launched a province-wide telephone information service. Ontario residents can reach the Board's communications department for any information regarding the Board's activities, or any specific concerns about automobile insurance.

Consumers can dial the toll free number 1-800-668-0128 or 1-800-668-0129.

The Board offers information to Ontario residents in both English and French.

Last Friday, I was pleased to join Mayor Brian Lynch and other City officials in the official opening of the second phase of the Cornwall Bicycle Path.
