SYLVIA'S Slant

By Sylvia Hall

Recently I watched a T.V. programme called "Shirley". It was a re-run and was about single women who had, or were about to have babies.

These women were not the "accidents", abandoned unwed mothers or widows. These were women, who because of circumstances had not met Mr. Right. They were women who could afford to raise a child, and who felt a need to be (in their words) complete women and mothers. I didn't see all of the show. When someone with something important to say is cut off with "I'm sorry but we'll come back to you, I have to take a break:", just for the sake of a commercial that we have all seen a thousand times - then that's when I click out. But it got me to thinking about the risk these women were taking. Also I thought their motives were selfish.

One can understand and commisserate with women whose biological clock is running down. When the very last loud BONG is upon them they will only be known as "Auntie". But what about the children? What do you tell a child who asks "Who is my daddy? What does he look like, where are his pictures? Why doesn't he come to see me? Why can't he come to school, Boy Scouts, Brownies, Girl Guides (or whatever youth group), parent or father's night or special event?

We live in the day of AIDS awareness and risk. We have been told by many medical specialists that it takes up to 5 years for the disease to show up. How will those women deal with a child or themselves, if 5 or more years down the line they discover they are infected. The donor father isn't going to say "Yes I have it". He may not even know. People have tested negative, only to learn years later that they are infected.

What about the medical history of the father and his family? Genetic diseases, allergies, etc.? Suppose he discovers his fatherhood and wants to be a part of the child's life, or even have custody? In this age of grandparents' rights there could be even more legal entanglements.

Are these women really thinking of the future psychological and emotional damage that will happen to that sweet little baby? Or are they only concerned with their own self-fulfillment? Suppose the mother loses her job and/or financial sercurity, how will she support herself and the child?

If these women are really interested in helping children, they why don't they adopt an orphan? There are millions of orphanages all over the world. Look at those in Romania. Real help and caring is needed right here in the Big Brothers and Big Sisters. Many youth groups, day care centres, and hospitals are crying out for help from sincere and loving people.

I don't know how the "Shirley" show ended. I'm sure the panelists were all very worthy, good and sincere people. However, I still question the motives of women who deliberately choose to be single mothers, when there are so many orphans and in-care children needing good homes.

It is very easy to become a mother. It is very difficult to be a parent, especially a single parent. Cute little babies grow up to be children and teenagers with all the attendant complications and responsibilities. It's tough enough in a family with two parents. For a single parent the problems are multiplied, and it's the child's future that is in jeopardy. I know the joys of motherhood and being a parent, but I give thanks that I didn't have to do it alone - for my childrens' sakes.

Business Tips

SDG BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CENTER

Business Structure Corporations

Over the years the act of incorporating a business - particularly a small one - has become more commonplace.

Once the sole domain of large businesses and wily entrepreneurs, the concept of the incorporated company has gradually shed some of its mystique.

One of the common myths that developed over the years regarding the advantages of incorporating a company is that is would somehow turn an unsuccessful business into a successful one. Of course, that is now increasingly being recognized as simply a fallacy.

Essentially, the act of incoporating a company may accomplish some of the points below.

First and foremost, it limits the liability of its shareholders, in the event of losses, to the capital they have invested in the company.

However, it should be remembered that even this provision can be nullified to some extent in the event the shareholder becomes a director of the company or agrees to provide a personal guarantee for a loan to the company.

The second key consideration is that incorporation gives a business more flexibility in handling its financial affairs.

Again, this is of particular importance to those who have a financial stake in the company - particularly if they have a controlling interest.

Among the ways this can be accomplished are through the payment of dividends as well as salary or through the provision of certain perks such as automobiles and trips - providing, of course, that a reasonable element of business is related to the expenditures.

Corporations also provide greater flexibility in handling retained income for a corporation - whereas in a partnership of sole proprietorship all income normally must be taxed in the year it is earned.

Greater flexibility is also provided in handling expenses and employee remuneration.

On the down side, there are aditional costs incurred in incorporating a firm and there are ongoing costs in maintaining the necessary documentation required of a corporate structure.

As well, many governments are now beginning to look harder at tax rates applicable to corporations.

Still, the question to ask when considering incorporation is will the bottom line (your profit) justify the time and cost necessary to incorporate.

Ministry for Eastern Ontario Not Ruled Out Yet

When Ontario Premier Bob Rae announced his cabinet last week, many area residents noted there was no new ministry created for Eastern Ontario.

During the election campaign, Rae said such a ministry was a good concept and worth looking into. Cornwall NDP candidate Leo Courville went one step further stating he favoured such a ministry.

I spoke to Courville following the cabinet announcement to see what was up for our area. Indeed, a separate ministry is still being examined, he said. Some critics of the NDP are suggesting Rae has backed off on his promise, but Courville is quick to point out that Rae never made a specific commitment to create a separate ministry, although he did promise to look at new ways of fostering economic development.

Courville says he is still personally committed to fighting for an Eastern Ontario Ministry, but says that in itself would not be enough. A development strategy is needed.

One of the reasons for closely examining the question of a separate ministry is that such a structure has not been particularly helpful in improving the lot of Northern Ontarians.

In fact, Courville said the NDP is looking at the Northern Ontario experience as an example of what not to do. Despite its own ministry, "Northern Ontario is a real mess," he said.

Personally, I think our area still needs its own ministry. I also agree with Courville that a ministry isn't the whole answer. We need a voice in cabinet. But we need more than lip service. We need a genuine commitment to a development strategy. That means the government has to devote financial and physical resources to the task.

During the Liberal regime, while plants were closing down left, right and centre in our area, Queen's Park responded by cutting back on tourism funding and closing our parks. In other words, the Liberals just hammered more nails into our economic coffin.

Courville says the NDP riding association is thinking of keeping its riding office open to serve as a link between the people of Cornwall and the new government. That would be a sound idea. It is doubtful Liberal John Cleary will be able to get much done now that his party is no longer in office.

We are guaranteed four or so years of NDP government. This is the party's opportunity to show Eastern Ontario it has a better strategy for our area.

NDP riding associations within Eastern Ontario should work closely with Ottawa Centre MPP and Health Minister Evelyn Gigantes to build up a strong Eastern Ontario voice within the party. Rumour has it that Gigantes is already looking for extra money from the government to enable her to service Eastern Ontario. The party would be wise to heed her advice. If the NDP is committed to Eastern Ontario, it has four years to prove it.

Most people are willing to give the new government some time and a fair chance to develop a strategy for Eastern Ontario. We can't expect change overnight. But we can expect people to get to work on the problem first thing in the morning.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Yvan Gravel's letter published in your Sept. 24th issue is a prime example of twisted facts.

Since its inception, Canada's Language Act has cost taxpayers an amount that exceeds the national debt. A conservative estimate would be about $50 billion. Ontario is not compounding the taxpayers burden with another version of language services.

French speaking Canadians have received more in language services alone than our native Indians have collected in 300 years.

Mr. Gravel seems to overlook the fact that the costs of military intervention in Oka were largely due to a Mayor's decree that golf takes priority over native land claims - also that the S.Q. inefficiency had to be rectified by the Canadian army.

It should be noted that Pierre Elliot Trudeau's demilitarization of our country received most of its support from Quebec. It may also be stated that the Quebec Department of Education frowns on Remembrance Day in order that students may remember that their Province, in two wars, voted against conscription.

Such should be sobering thoughts for a Province so eager to ask for and receive Federal military assistance.

John Lariviere
Berwick, Ont.

Letters To The Editor

(Reply to Yvan Gravel's letter in Seaway News of 24/9/90)

Dear Sir:

COST OF BILINGUALISM

In his letter Mr. Gravel compares the budget for First Natives to the budgets for official bilingualism.

I am not sure if Mr. Gravel thinks the aboriginals are not worth the money spent on them. However, they are the founding peoples of this country, not the French or the English, and I feel they must be given much consideration.

To get back to the cost of official bilingualism in Ontario and Canada. The published figure of the cost of bilingualism in Ontario is a million dollars a week, and in Canada, one million, seven hundred thousand dollars each day!

In Ontario there are approximately four hundred thousand persons who claim French descent. But, of these, there are only sixty thousand who cannot speak, read or write English. Surely those sixty thousand would be happier and fit better into this English speaking province if they were to be taught English instead of trying to teach French to about nine million English-speaking Ontarians.

In Ontario there are about one million, five hundred thousand persons of Italian descent. I wonder if Mr. Gravel and others would be prepared to spend their tax dollars to supply services in Italian throughout Ontario for sixty thousand persons who can only speak Italian!

As for Mr. Gravels statement that the cost of bilingualism is an excuse to hide hate and bigotry for French Canadians, I dismiss that as a statement from a person who, himself, may very well be caught up in those feelings about others!

J.A. MacDonald
Cornwall

Dear Sir:

When I read Sylvia's article in the 24 Setp. issue of Seaway News I found that, as usual, her words made a lot of sense. I feel very strongly that this province, and indeed the whole country, is getting very poor educational value for our tax dollars. I firmly believe that a large part of the reason for this lies in the waste resulting from having multiple school boards and their associated costs. Anyone who doubts this need only take a look at the fleets of school buses which criss-cross the country each school day. Yes, a complete overhaul of our educational system is sorely needed.

However, this is not a simple issue, and it is a mistake to assume that quality of education is a result of the amount of money spent. Likewise, to fault school boards or teachers for students who get through the system with inadequate skills is convenient but it is to a great extent misplacing the blame. As for the Minister of Education, don't hold your breath. The government is not going to touch this without a strong demand from an obvious majority of the public.

The problem, as Sylvia suggested, is that "you get what you vote for". We have such a variety of school boards because people wanted them. We end up with uneducated children leaving school because parents won't even assist teachers by ensuring that homework is done. Too often educators are restricted by foolish rules which resulted from the demands of parents. They are expected to baby-sit children but not allowed to discipline them. We have what was asked for, and many of us don't like it.

So what is to be done? As long as parents are more interested in having their own school board than in having their children get a good education at a reasonable price we probably won't see any change. It's interesting to note that 60 percent of all teachers in the USA send their children to private schools. I wonder if the same applies in Canada. Apparently there is also a move in several states to private schools which compete for students and funding through the quality of education that they offer. Maybe there is something to be learned from that.

S. Finlay

Dear Sir:

I'm visiting friends in your lovely city, and I happened to read an article in your paper by someone called Sylvia about friendship. It was so good and I wish she had gone on to advise young people how it is important to choose their friends wisely.

I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for - as she put it - those golden older friends. We have stood by each other through the thick and thin too. No questions asked. My friends keep her articles, so I read some of them. I really enjoyed them and they are going to send them to me in the future.

The one about humour was excellent because it was quite subtle and ironic. Very clever really. Who would expect an article like that in a throw-away paper. It's very unusual. In our area all we get are syndicated stale stuff.

Cornwall has a lot more going for it than a lot of big city outsiders realize, with a paper like yours. I read some of the Bob Roth one's too, but they seem very stuffy and parochial. No offense meant, but they didn't have the same kind of "bite" or originality of the Sylvia ones.

Recycling plastic car parts

AUTO FACTS

(NC)—In recent years, industry has found numerous ways to reuse a wide variety of materials, from soft drink cans and newspapers to steel and used engine oil. And now, General Motors engineers are working to add plastic composite auto parts to that list.

GM is the largest user of such composites in the automotive industry. One type, called sheet molding compound (SMC), is used to make large exterior panels in the Chevrolet Lumina APV, Pontiac Trans Sport, Oldsmobile Silhouette (not sold in Canada) and the Chevrolet Corvette.

To recycle SMC, GM's Advanced Engineering Staff is exploring the use of "pyrolysis", a process also being evaluated by the tire and rubber industry for reuse of scrap tires. In the GM process, materials are heated to 1400°F in the absence of oxygen. Rather than burn, they break down into materials that could be reused in new body panels, adhesives or products such as concrete or roofing shingles.

"The process may provide an attractive alternative for SMC waste management, compared with landfill and other disposal methods, such as incineration," according to a composites manager for the Advanced Engineering Staff.

He says the results of GM's pyrolysis tests are encouraging, but that more evaluation is needed before the technology can be considered for use. GM's goal is to solve the question of SMC waste management before it becomes a problem.

Fighting noise with noise

AUTO FACTS

(NC)—At Lotus Engineering in Britain, researchers are learning to "fight fire with fire." Or, more accurately, they're fighting automobile noise with noise—well, actually anti-noise.

Group Lotus, which is owned by General Motors, has come up with a way to quiet—if not silence—the interior noise in cars produced by amplified engine vibration.

The new technology uses microchips and microphones to monitor unwanted interior noise and reproduce an "acoustic mirror image" of the sound. This anti-noise signal is then sent out through the car's stereo sound system.

While this system effectively dampens unwanted noise, the signal itself is inaudible, and does not interfere with music being played on the stereo system.

The concept itself, however, is hardly new. It's been around since the mid-1930s. What is new is the applied use of specialized computer chips, called digital signal processors, that make it possible for Lotus to develop a lightweight noise-muffling gear that would only add several hundred dollars to a car's price.

Group Lotus officials in England say it will begin to produce the system commercially within the next several years, with selected GM passenger cars to receive the new anti-noise system.

U.S. Oil Stocks How High Can They Go?

As we have seen in the past there tends to be a correlation between the price of a commodity, the earnings outlook for a particular company and the valuation of the common stock involved.

On August 1, 1990 Iraq invaded Kuwait and since then, oil prices have risen sharply. Prior to the invasion, West Texas Intermediate Crude (which is a benchmark for North American oil and is a standard known grade) was trading around U.S. $17 per barrel; today it trades at over U.S. $37 per barrel. The obvious question is whether or not $37 is a sustainable price and if not, what is the proper supply/demand equilibrium price. The next maybe not so obvious question the investor will ask is which oil stocks are set to benefit the most from higher oil prices.

A quick look at any oil company chart since the beginning of the year shows that they had been good performers even before the invasion began. This performance is attributable to both a technical break out (going back some 4-5 years to find the last top) as well as improving fundamentals (i.e. earnings, cashflow, return on assets). To name a few Arco has risen 18%, Chevron and BP some 17%, Phillips at 15%, Shell and Texaco both over 10%.

While I do enjoy the technical side of this analysis (looking at pictures and charts) many are quick to point out that other fundamental factors favour this group. In particular:

1. Higher oil & gas production. The major oil companies have managed to significantly increase oil and gas production since the early 80's; this has been primarily achieved through making large acquisitions. Take for example Chevron who has increased its oil and gas production world wide by some 84% since 1981. Mobile has generated some 41% increase despite average exploratory success.

2. Fewer Employees. Between 1981 and 1989 the industry has been consolidating; Mobil's head count has been chopped 67%; Arco's 51% and Exxon's 42%. The result has been major improvement in the bottom lines.

3. Fewer Shares Outstanding. Virtually all the oil majors have bought back and continue to buy back shares. This is a process whereby any company gains approval to buy their own shares in the market. The result is price support and increase in earnings per share outstanding. Phillips has 47% fewer shares today, Unocal 32% fewer, Arco 28% and Exxon 27% than in 1981.

As a final comment on these fundamentals one should keep in mind that these numbers are not small. In fact these numbers are large by comparison, very large.

Strong both technically and fundamentally, this group has shown it can outperform the market. So with oil prices going up or having gone up you might have expected oil stocks to have appreciated further.

Not so:

A closer look shows that many have declined anywhere from -1% to -10% since the August 1st invasion. I guess they don't believe that oil prices will remain high and few stocks have escaped the tremendous weight the bearish sentiment has exerted.

Nonetheless, if oil does fall back to say $25 per barrel (and many think this is the greater possibility), one should pay close attention to this group and view this as a major buying opportunity.

MEET THE CORNWALL ROYALS

Jason Cirone, Captain

Jason was appointed captain of the Royals when he returned to the lineup last December after training camp shoulder surgery and will wear the "C" again this season. He averaged exactly two points per game, 21 goals and 43 assists, in the 32 contests he appeared in and also skated with the victorious OHL squad in the All-Star Challenge against Quebec.

Jason attended an August tryout camp and hopes to represent his country this Christmas as a member of the Canadian national junior team at the world championships in Saskatoon. A third round NHL draft pick of Winnipeg in 1989 he signed a pro contract with the Jets during the summer.

This Time In History

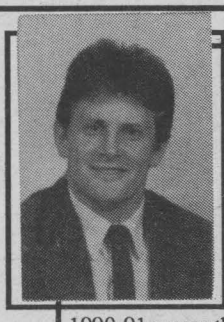
The adoption of the "overage" rule in junior hockey returned Cornwall native Dave Ezard to the Royals lineup for a 5th season. Coach Doug Carpenter used the slick veteran extensively and he would go on to lead the club in scoring with 40 goals and 105 points and be named the Most Valuable Player at the 1980 Memorial Cup tournament.



COACH'S CORNER

by Marc Crawford

We embark on our first road trip of the 1990-91 season this coming weekend with stops in Hamilton, Niagara Falls and Kingston. Trips such as this present an opportunity for a group of players to come together as a team.

For the younger players it is a new experience with hotel rooms, team meals, bed checks and roommates. For the veterans it's a time to pull practical jokes on naive rookies. And for the coach it can be a very trying experience but all is forgiven naturally if the trip is a success where it counts the most; on the ice.

Some pre-vacation car tips

Getting ready for a motoring holiday? In that case you'll want to prepare your car so it won't break down and spoil your vacation.

Before taking it to your technician for pre-vacation servicing, give your car the once over yourself. Start with the tires, checking for excessive or uneven tread wear and under-inflation, which you can test with an inexpensive pressure gauge. Follow the proper tire inflation instructions printed in raised letters on each tire wall.

Giving the once over

Make certain all interior and exterior lights and lenses are in good condition and replace any that are cracked or burned out.

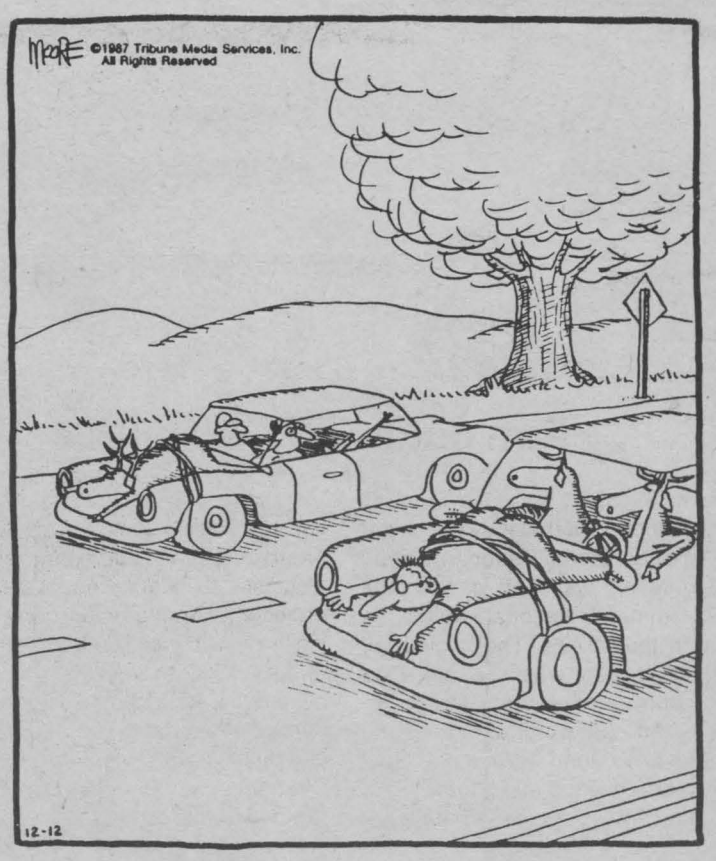
Since it's bound to rain some time during your vacation, replace cracked or worn wiper blades.

While some of the many fluids in your car should be checked by your technician, there's no harm in personally checking the levels of such fluids as your oil, windshield washer and, only when the engine is cold, your radiator. If they're low, top them up.

While you're under the hood, have a close look at all belts and hoses. If they're cracked, frayed or brittle, have them replaced. The same goes for loose or corroded metal clamps.

Noisy or spongy brakes, loose steering and warm shocks each contribute to poor handling, not to mention reduced safety. Bring any of these conditions to your technician's attention.

Pre-vacation car service should always be performed at least a week before you plan to leave. That's so your technician can make any post-service adjustments that might be necessary.



To ready your car for the long trip, he'll replace dirty air, oil and fuel filters; check the battery, spark plugs and wheel alignment. He'll also check and replenish those fluids you don't, like the brake and transmission fluids.

It may be necessary for him to adjust your carburetor and valves; to tighten drive belts and to reset ignition timing.

Since, as I've said before, no tune up is complete without a thorough emission control system check, he'll likely give that the once over, too.

Take some spares

It's a good idea to stow a few replacement parts and emergency equipment in your trunk before you take to the road. Things like electrical or duct tape, spare fan belt, some flares and, of course, a flashlight with fresh batteries, can come in handy.

Now your car's in shape, how about you? Fatigue is the leading cause of traffic accidents, so make sure you don't spend too many hours behind the wheel, and that you get plenty of sleep.

And, oh yes, happy holiday!

Petrocan On The Block

The Conservative Government has announced that they will privatize PetroCanada. Petrocan, as you may recall, was part of the then Government's National Energy Policy in the 1970's. The nucleus of PetroCanada was the old Fina company, and a great to-do surrounded the purchase because almost everyone agreed the Government paid too much for it.

Why should the government get out of the oil business?

First of all because it serves no legitimate national purpose to be in it. What crucial national goals are being met by a government owned presence in this industry?? I suggest none! Indeed Petrocan appears to be an oil company, just like the others.

Secondly, because the company hasn't been very profitable when run by quasi-civil servants. Petrocan has had to go to the gov't too often with its hand out for large sums of capital to finance major capital projects. The government considering its own financial problems can ill afford to do this. Under private ownership, Petrocan can go to the money market and sell bonds like any other major corporation.

Finally, the government should get out of the oil business for the same reasons it shouldn't be in other businesses where there is competition and where the private market can provide the goods and services. Governments tend to be inefficient. Interestingly over the past year or so Petrocan executives, who have expected this privatization to come, have been readying Petrocan for the marketplace. Specifically they have cut over 1300 jobs from their payroll. This and other actions to make Petrocan a more disirable investment in the marketplace.

My question is "if they can get along with 1300 fewer employees, now what were these people doing a year ago?" Actually, these 1300 people are simply the classic example of why governments should not be involved in competitive enterprises.

HOROSCOPES

Oct 7th-Oct 13th

ARIES - March 21/April 20
You'll have extra cash in hand by the end of the week, as you will be reaping bonuses for past labors. Accept invitations; many loved ones have missed out on your company lately. Don't neglect problems which have been concerning you for some time. Now is the time to resolve them; you are strong and have patience.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
During the weeks ahead, conditions at home and at work will become a bit unsettled and this may spoil any plans you have in mind. At present, you have more to gain than lose from fitting in with other people's plans. Socially, what's being lined up on Thursday will be fun.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
You'll be seeing more of colleagues after work hours. Plans involving partnerships are well aspected. Although you may be uncertain about the status of present relationships, you should have faith in your instinct; it is more accurate than you think. Family life is also much brighter this week.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Improvements have taken place in other areas of your life and now, finally, the romantic side is getting a boost. For mothers, it means that children will be rewarding company and you'll be taking a keen interest in the new activities they're taking on.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Between now and late November, the domestic side of life will be of much greater interest to you and your family. You'll be giving more of your time to enterprising plans in that area. You will be coming to the fore in your local community as well.

VIRGO - August 24/Sept 22
You have so much going for you now; it seems as if everything is going well. But you are tending to be unassertive. Be bold and carry out any plans you have in mind. The end of the week will prove to be very rewarding.

LIBRA - September 23/Oct 23
You will be forceful and positive, but be sure to use common sense. Money will be much easier to come by in the next few weeks, so grab the opportunity to add to earnings. Aim at cashing in on hobbies, for they can be especially lucrative.

SCORPIO - October 24/Nov 22
You'll be getting much more fun out of life between now and the end of the year. The wheel of fortune is revolving strongly in your favor! Partners can be counted on to provide support for every dream and scheme.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Because your lifestyle is original, you often run into obstacles where ambition is concerned. Nevertheless, the weekend gets things off to a good start. Keep the trusting side of your nature within bounds, as someone could be taking unfair advantage of it and making you false promises.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Life may not be wildly exciting, but at least it's under control. Investigate the mysteries in your life that keep you from attaining happiness. You're at peace with your working environment and savings are mounting up. Make the most of opportunities to enjoy changes of scene.

AQUARIUS - January 21/Feb 18
Best to avoid making unchangeable plans and remain open to what the week brings. It's well worthwhile putting in extra effort at work; for the next few weeks you'll be strengthening your ground there and prospects of promotion are promising. There's still a little tension in partnerships; try to keep them free of friction.

PISCES - February 19/March 20
Financial success tends to catalyze your deeply erotic nature; you collect gifts as proof of affection. If you're married, the financial outlook is bright, as your partner's prospects are improving. You'll be able to give more thought to pleasure.

Your birthday this week
THE NEXT 12 MONTHS

From now until just after Christmas, you must take care that you are not being too idealistic and unrealistic about emotional ties and attachments. The coming year opens on a bright note socially; you will be meeting a lot of new friends. Anything connected with advertising, publishing, television or the theater is well starred. Others have not always appreciated how kind and generous you can be, but now you'll be rewarded for past efforts.

KNOW YOUR ELECTRICITY
By Brian Bedard

How To Read Your Electric Meter

You may have wondered how your electric meter works. All you see is the disk spinning around, and you know the faster it spins the more money you spend! We will try to take the mystery out of meter reading.

An electric meter is a precision instrument which records the amount of electricity your home uses. Kilowatt hour is the standard measurement used in recording the total useage each month. To record those amounts the meter uses the 4 or 5 dials located inside the meter. Your local utility company reads the meter every two months, records and then bills you.

To keep a track of these readings we must have an understanding of how the meter operates. Energy is a product of power and time and both must be taken into account in energy measurements. Watt hour meters are small motors at which the speed of rotation at any time is proportional to the power at that time. The total number of revolutions made by the rotating disk at a given time is a measure of energy consumption during that time.

Not all meters have five dials, but if yours does, it records tens of thousands of kilowatt hours. This very small dial on your meter is only used by the utility staff. Meter dials are read from right to left. The first dial on the right records single kilowatt hours, the second dial from the right records tens of kilowatt hours, the third dial records hundreds of kilowatt hours and the last dial records thousands of kilowatt hours.

Let's say we have a reading on the first dial from the right which reads 3, the next dial from the right reads 4, the following dial reads 6 and the last dial reads 7. This would give us a reading of 7,643 kilowatt hours.

A few things to keep in mind before reading your meter. SOme pointers rotate clockwise, others rotate counter clockwise. If a dial pointer rests squarely on a number, the dial to the immediate right will determine which number you record. When a pointer is between two numbers, you would read the smaller of the two numbers.

(NC)—Hirschberg, West Germany-The newest sign of continuing change in Eastern Bloc countries is the first Lions club to come to East Germany. East Germany now joins Hungary, Poland, and the Soviet Union as Eastern Bloc countries with Lions clubs.

The new club, located in Halberstadt, East Germany, 100 miles southwest of Berlin, received its charter on May 20, after six years of work by its West German sponsor, the Hirschberg Mittlere Bergstrasse Lions Club.

Club member Dietmar Gabel said the Hirschberg Lions began working with the people of Halberstadt in 1984, bringing needed goods and humanitarian services to the East German community. The three-women, 18-man club will emphasize serving the elderly in its community. Gabel says he's looking forward to helping the East German club to ensure its success.

"We kept in contact, but we never thought it would be possible to start a club there because we needed the consent of the interior minister," Gabel said.

Lions Clubs International President William L. Woolard said last year they chartered the first Eastern Bloc service club since World War II in Budapest, Hungary.

"The rapid expansion of Lions Clubs in the region clearly reflects the need for non-governmental support groups," said Woolard. Twenty more clubs are being organized in the Eastern Bloc, including seven in East Germany.

Lions Clubs International is the world's largest service organization with nearly 1.4-million members in 39,000 clubs in 167 countries. Canada has more than 54,000 members serving in 1914 clubs. Lions raise hundreds of millions each year to aid the blind and visually impaired, to sponsor the world's largest drug abuse prevention curriculum, and to support diabetes education and research.

Mom and dad settled down to watch some uninterrupted television when they heard a small cry from their daughter, "Daddy! Can I have a drink of water?"

"You've had a drink of water. Go to sleep!"

After a couple of minutes, the pleas came again, "Daddy! I'm thirsty, I need a drink of water."

"No!" said the father sternly, "If you ask one more time, I'll come in there and spank you."

A brief silence followed. Then the little girl's tiny voice wailed, "Daddy, when you come in here to spank me, would you bring me a drink of water please?"

Leo Courville, defeated NDP candidate in the Cornwall Riding, seems to be emerging as an official '(or unofficial) spokesman for the new Ontario government. He's been meeting with mayor Poirier and making public interpretations on whether the government will or will not proceed with provincial building. The idea of Courville as spokesman may not be as preposterous as it sounds - two recent photos of Premier Rae - there's Leo front and centre!!

City of Vanier in deep financial trouble. Seems that all through the 1980's ... the local politicians were keeping the tax rate increases down ... problem is they weren't keeping their expenditures down. Now the chickens are coming home to roost. Bernard Grandmaître, Liberal MPP and previous Ontario minister was mayor of Vanier till 1985.

We hear Ruth Y. has "gone to the dogs" ... she was recently seen eating Kibbles!

The Cornwall Winter Pool League kicked off its first season on Wed., Oct. 3rd at 7:30 p.m. The Central Tavern slipped by the Player's Pub 50-46. Each of these players were perfect, on the night, winning all 4 games they played. The public is invited to come & watch & cheer on their favourite team.

Is there really a Loch Ness Monster?

About 90 million years ago, huge animals called dinosaurs roamed the land. We know that dinosaurs have become extinct, but we do not know for certain what happened to huge sea beasts such as the 40 foot long mosasaurs.

Could they have managed to survive?

In Scotland, people have been reporting seeing a monster since as long ago as 565 A.D. Pictures supposedly taken on the lake usually show either a series of humps or a small, snake-like head with a long neck on a 30 foot body rising out of the water.

Some people insist that these are only pictures of floating logs or groups of playful otters.

But until there is a more definite answer, there may well be a Loch Ness Monster!

Christianity Alive

By Bob Burgess, Pastor
New Life Covenant Church
(A Spirit-Filled New Testament Church)

What is a Christian? Years ago we use to be able to "spot" a Christian man or woman by the way she lived. Some didn't smoke, others didn't dance, others did not go to the movies and the list goes on and on.

We used to look at these people and think thay they were "weird" and "miss-fits" and real "kill-joys". But were they really? I agree that some groups may have taken these rules to extreme and made life miserable for themselves and those around them. But the most part, these rules or I prefer to call them standards, were the very thing that separated them from the rest of the world. Today, in my opinion, Christianity has become far too liberal and the church has allowed many things to come into God's families that has robbed the church of its power and righteousness. I'm not advocating a return to "rules" of do's and don'ts, but I do believe the church needs to return to standards of righteousness and holiness if we in fact are going to be salt and light to the world. Let me say that God truly loves the world and He made it lovely, but sin has made a mess of God's creation, expecially "man" and the church needs to return to some standards of conduct and to keep itself pure and holy as God's people. Television is a great invention and I enjoy it, but some of the material and shows that are produced only encourage more violence, lust, rapes ....

The Christian Church needs to awaken to what is happening and begin to take up righteous standards in order to preserve its flavour and strength.

Why all this? Because the God of Christianity is a Holy God; because the Bible tell us to be Holy as He is Holy; because we are the ones, the Church, God has entrusted to bring salvation to those around us. The Bible says we are to be salt and light. Church, let us rise up in this hour and in the power of God's Spirit, live lives "worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called," (Ephesians 4:1)

THOUGHTS FOR THIS WEEK:

1. You cannot embrace the pleasures of the world and the promises of God at the same time.

2. God chooses what we go through; We choose how we go through it.

3. Forbidden fruit makes for a bad jam.

4. No disease is more deadly than sin; The cross is its only cure.

New resource book can help you choose nutritious foods

The effects of nutrition upon human health have never been so well understood as they are today. Nutrition research, however, is still a relatively young science, and different studies sometimes seem to point in contradictory directions. Most Americans today are concerned about nutrition and want to eat right, but are confused about how to go about improving their diets.

Many of us grew up believing that sugar was an enemy to health—and we had never heard of cholesterol. Today, sugar is thought of as relatively benign, while fat is the new dietary "bad guy." Meanwhile, the debate about cholesterol goes on—most of us know only enough about it to confuse us.

Trying to lose weight? Counting calories is "out." Now we are advised to figure out the percentage of our calories that come from fat—not an easy task while reading the menu in an unfamiliar restaurant, or even glancing at the contents of the refrigerator.

Faced with "facts" that seem to change daily, it's tempting to give up the struggle to eat right, and just eat whatever is easiest or tastiest. After all, there's no point in reading the label on a product if you don't even know what you're supposed to be looking for.

In short, Americans are suffering from "Nutritional Data Indigestion," writes Victor W. Sidel, M.D. in the foreword to The Catalogue of Healthy Food (Bantam), by John Tepper Marlin, PhD.

According to Marlin, one of the biggest problems with the American diet is that "unhealthy food is all around us," while healthy food is harder to find.

Among the many topics covered in The Catalogue of Healthy Food are: the relationship between diet and disease; the latest recommendations for a healthy diet; common food hazards, including pesticides and preservatives; organic farming; the food distribution system; explanations of nutritional terms, including "lite" and "all-natural"; and how to start your own food buying co-op.

In addition, the book includes hundreds of tables, listings, definitions and addresses. It lists hundreds of natural food stores, farm markets and restaurants throughout the United States and Canada, as well as mail-order sources (for those who don't have access to healthy food in their hometowns or are looking for specialized items).

The Catalogue of Healthy Food is a valuable resource for anyone who wants to know what to eat and where to find it. PA903481

BECAUSE
WE REACH 30,000 HOMES IN CORNWALL AND AREA EVERY WEEK.
THAT'S 12,000 MORE HOMES THAN ANY OTHER PAPER.

Dear Sir:

How nice to have a whole page of letters to the editor. Is this something new, or did you not get any before? I like to read what other people think and to know they read all of it like I do.

I'm glad that person got a good buy from the classifieds. I have had good buys and also sold things through your paper. More people must read yours, because I didn't have much luck with the Freeholder. Maybe it's because everybody gets your paper for nothing, but they don't all get the other one.

I am also am a Sylvia Slant fan and read her first because it's always different. Bob Roth is good too. I don't live in the city now, but I look forward to your paper to keep in touch and for the coming events.

I must say about the phones. I have an unlisted number and would take great exception to being on somebody's screen. I didn't know they were allowed to do that without my permission. Sylvia's Slant didn't say if this was done without our permission. If it is, then it's a disgrace.

It's bad enough that we have to pay NOT to have our name and number in the phone book.

I learn a lot of things from Sylvia's column and I'm glad she is a real person and not someone in an office, on a committee.
