SYLVIA's slant

By Sylvia Hall

When I visit big cities I like to read their newspapers. On my recent trip I was fascinated by an article listing accidental deaths. Among the statistics it listed people who had choked while eating in restaurants (obviously more up-scale than the fast food places). People who had been hit by vehicles while threading their way through rush hour traffic, and people who had "running accidents".

I was intrigued. Running is supposed to be good exercise and keep you fit. No way! It leads to people running into things, especially if you are tall and are in an old house with low ceilings, low doorways, low-hanging plants and swag lights. Walking is better and safer, especially around the house during a power failure, on busy streets or the city's broken sidewalks. Also running leads to tripping over things, like the family dog who decides to get up just as you are stepping over him. This leads to falling down and bumping into things, like the sharp edge of the coffee table, or door knobs, to say nothing of stubbed toes and bruised shins.

Choking on food must be very embarassing in a fancy restaurant. Imagine paying all that money, having a good time, when suddenly a morsel of exotic food that you can't even pronounce goes down the wrong way. Just hope that Dr. Henry J. Heimlich is sitting nearby and will walk over (he's too smart to run) and performs his famous maneuver. Somehow, the thought of a complete stranger hugging me from behind while I'm lying gagging on the floor seems quite humiliating. How much better to do what your Mother always told you:

Don't talk with food in your mouth.

Don't take such big bites.

East slowly and chew your food well.

Look for all the little bones in the fish.

If all those smart people had only listened to their Mothers they wouldn't choke. There were no reports of people choking at home. That's because at home Mother is watching and saying "Don't talk with your mouth full."

One of the pedestrian victims was a neurosurgeon. A man who knew everything about brains walked out into traffic. With all his degrees he was dumb! Makes you think. A professor was the victim of a dog. Why would an intelligent man think it was alright to pat a strange little terrier on the head. The tiny terrier's owner said "He's never done that before." Well he probably never did. Maybe the dog was just waiting for the challenge of a very "smart guy" to test his talents at leaping high and hanging onto a throat. Makes you wonder which one is the dumb animal.

What we should all do is slow down and be careful. Most accidents can be prevented by using a little common sense. Unfortunately sense isn't all that common. How many of you have been reading this in a bad light. Hasn't your Mother told you a thousand times "You'll ruin your eyesight or go cross-eyed". Then you will really bump into things. Take care, it could save your life. You don't want one of those big city newspapers to write about you, do you? Of course you would be dead, but think, not just of the agony and grief, but the embarrasement to your dear Mother who kept telling you to be careful. Maybe I should just move the coffee table a little - just in case. Us old couch spuds could be in danger of rolling off, what with all the boring and self-serving politicians on TV.

Cornwall May Regret Pulling Out Of Waste Plan

The recent decision by the City of Cornwall to not participate in a counties-wide waste management study is clearly a bad error in judgement.

Waste disposal is becoming the issue of the decade. Garbage is mounting, disposal costs are rising and the problem promises to put a healthy increase onto the municipal tax levy in the years to come.

Two long-term studies are already underway. Grenville and Dundas Counties have started to work as have Stormont and Glengarry. Very wisely, the United Counties of SD & G have decided that it makes more sense to have a combined study involving all municipalities within SD & G. Mind you, it's too bad this wasn't done earlier before the other studies were underway. Nevertheless, it is important to plan now for the future and it is unfortunate that the city, which has a huge population base and will be generating tons of garbage, has decided not to get in on the study.

The primary reason for the city's refusal is that Cornwall's current landfill has an estimated 20 to 25 years of life. Consequently, Cornwall politicians did not want to kick in the estimated $117,000 city share of the $500,000 study. (This is the same bunch, mind you, who find a bottomless pit when it comes to funding an aquatic centre).

As Winchester Reeve Claude Cousineau so correctly commented, the city may be sorry in the long run.

The reeve noted that waste management studies can easily take 10 years to complete. That means the city could end up having to do its own study, alone, at a much higher cost.

"If they're getting out of the study to save a dollar today and spend two tomorrow, to me that's not very good planning," Cousineau is quoted as saying.

He's right.

Looking for future landfill sites is only one aspect of the garbage problem. There is the whole issue of reducing, recycling and re-using garbage materials. The long-term study would look into this.

It might be possible for example to set up a major recycling depot or even build a plant that separates and recycles waste material. The technology is improving almost daily and we may come up with some bright, new solutions.

However, such projects usually require an economy of scale - that is there was must enough people using the project to make it feasible. This is where Cornwall's short-sightedness is glaring.

A perfectly good recycling plan might not fly simply because the 45,000 people in Cornwall are not included.

Similarly, suppose the United Counties come up with a scheme scaled for their use, only to have the city come along 10 years later and ask to be included? Will it be too late? Will the scale be too small?

Indeed, there are many reasons for getting involved in waste planning now. Future costs, access to innovative ideas and the creation of a plan that can accommodate the future needs of the whole region. It just doesn't make sense to conduct a regional study that excludes half the population.

Waiting another 10 years to start our waste management planning is precisely the type of thinking that created the waste disposal mess in the first place.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Never in Cornwall's history have we had so many lobby groups opposing the Mayor and City Council's decisions. Thank God we have them or we would be a lot worse off. The Industrial Park Rate Payers Association are opposing council's decision of allowing hefty tax increases, without being sympathetic to a phase in. Tax increases have contributed to plant closures. Thank goodness for the Affordable Pool Committee, or we would be paying now for a 8.5 million dollar aquatic centre with some 2000 people out of work due to the recession, Free Trade and cross border shopping. Now another group has surfaced to protect us from the city allowing Domtar to put a second dumpsite within our city. We all should get behind (P.A.L.S.) People Against The Landfill Site and make sure a gross error like this does not take place. Hopefully, this November we will elect a new Mayor, and a council that will have a better sense of direction and put jobs and economic development as its main priority. In the meantime we should be thankful to the rate payers association, P.A.L.S. and C.A.P. for their sound decisions.

"Limo Kids" Help "Sick Kids"

The Derry's Limousine Service Atom "A" Royals, of the Lower St. Lawrence Hockey League, were honoured to be chosen as "Kids helping Kids" for sick children of the Ronald McDonald House in Ottawa. Together by playing hockey in the "Kanata Ronald McDonald Hockey Tournament," they helped raise a whopping $32,000 for other sick kids!

The "Limo kids" were geared in "full-throttle" all weekend and narrowly missed championship play-off by one controversial goal.

Cornwall opened the tournament with a 4-1 win over Kingston "A' with the "Hustler Award" going to Daniel Dupuis.

In their second game the Limos narrowly missed championship play-off opportunities by a controversial oppositional goal. The Muskrat "A" Cobden team barely finished the game with a 2-1 win over Cornwall. Jeff Legue won the "Hustler Award."

Then in the third game Cornwall cruised by Tillsonburg "A" with a 9-0 win and Brock Miron winning the "Hustler Award."

In the first game against Kingston, Yves Ruest and Daniel Dupuis scored with Brock Miron assisting on both goals. Third goal was scored by Kurt MacDonald with Dupuis and Ruest assisting. To close out the game, Jay Jodoen scored with Jamie Laframboise assisting. Kingston's lone goal was by Paul Rupen. Shawn Martelock and Patrick Ruest shared the nets.

Second game against Cobden saw Cornwall's Kurt MacDonald scoring first, thanks to nice passing from Travis Young and Jeff Legue. First goal scored by Cobden was by Shane Pegeon. In the 3rd period with 3:51 remaining, Joel Patterson put his team ahead 2-1 to stay. Shawn Martelock played a strong game in nets for the Limos.

The tournament "All Star" game saw 2 prominent Cornwall players chosen. They were Daniel Dupuis and Shawn Martelock. Dupuis was a shining star with 1 goal and 3 assists to lead his all star team to a 5-3 win. Martelock was later honoured as the tourney's most valuable goalie and presented a trophy for his superb goal-tending.

Business Tips

SDG BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CENTER

Time Log

If you were to ask most independent owner/operators if they have ever considered keeping a time log for work accomplished in their business, they would probably answer with one of the three following responses:

1) They have too many employees to make such an undertaking practical.

2) They don't have sufficient time to do it and they don't have an employee in a supervisory position to undertake it:

3) They do have a system already in effect that measures what their employees are doing on a day-to-day basis.

All three responses, of course, are wrong. Certainly it's important to know what your employees are accomplishing but, more significantly, it's more important to know what the key person in your business is achieving.

For, unless you have a turnkey operation, the degree to which your business will succeed or fail is largely dependent upon what the owner/operator achieves daily.

This, of course, is predicated upon certain assumptions:

A) that you have a viable business with a market for your product;

B) that you have sufficient cashflow or credit to operate.

Time logs can take various forms but the one most often suggested contains six elements.

They include an area for what should be accomplished each day; a column to record how much time is spent on each activity and a column to show what time you actually started the activity; a column to describe the activity; a column to rate the activity in terms of low, medium or high priority and a final column to evaluate how well the time was spent.

The key, particularly in terms of the final column, is to record all aspects of the log honestly.

In order to obtain an effective measurement of what you're accomplishing, it is recommended that a test period of at least one week be undertaken. In some cases, the nature of the business requires a long measurement period - you know your business best so govern yourself accordingly.

In our next column, we'll discuss how to analyze the results.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF STRONG FOREIGN CURRENCIES.

At AGF we feel that all prudent investors should have at least 10% of their investments in foreign assets. In these times of justified credit worries and uncertainties there is no better place to invest than in government bonds of countries with well developed capital markets, a history of credit worthiness and political stability.

AGF Global Government Bond Fund is the perfect vehicle for international currency and bond diversification without any of the hassles of custodianship or settlement procedures. The Fund invests in those countries with high real rates of interest, sound fiscal policies and economic policies conducive to strong currencies.

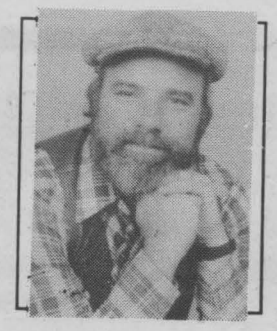
Basic Black with Arthur Black



If my father was alive, the second or third things I'd say to him is "Guess what, Pop - cigarettes are selling for more than five dollars a pack."

And he'd look at me and tap his ash and snort "still the comedian, eh?"

He'd never believe it, but it's true. Michael Wilson's latest fiscal thumbscrew has boosted the cost of 25 coffin nails well over the five-dollar mark. In most provinces, nicotine addicts are now (pardon the pun) coughing up $40.93 for a carton of smokes - from which our governments, federal and provincial, cream off a tidy $31.53.

Like any other drug pusher, they won't interfere with our right to kill ourselves, as long as they get their cut.

My old man would never believe it. Back when he was smoking he only had to shell out 32 cents for a pack of Sportsmans. Some Christmases I'd splurge and buy him a "flat fifty" - a nifty tin box of gaspers that cost me half my weekly allowance - all of half a buck.

Of course there are a lot of things about smoking in the '90's that my Dad would find incredible. I can just see him looking up at an Air Canada stewardess and saying "Whaddya mean I can't smoke? This is an airplane isn't it. Well, where's the smoking section? Whaddya mean there's no smoking section?"

Back in his day, folks smoked wherever they felt like it - restaurants, buses, other peoples living rooms, barber shops ...

I was in the barber's chair the other day when a customer in the waiting room lit up a cigarette. The barber left off trimming my ear hairs, went over and murmured apologetically to the guy. The guy stubbed it out. I said, "What's the matter, Tony? You don't like smoke?" "No" said Tony, "I don't like fines. Police dropped by the other day and told me I could be fined $5,000 if I let people smoke in here."

It turns out that Tony has two options: he can pay twenty or thirty grand to add a smoking room with separate ventilation to the outside, or he can become an unpaid member of the volunteer Tobacco Police and make sure nobody - including Tony himself - smokes on his premises.

The Stamp Out Smoking movement is not just a Canadian phenomenon. Thanks to a very tough and militantly anti-nicotine Surgeon-General, most American states have similar restrictions. A 220 pound pal of mine with a penchant for smoking big smelly cigars was recently accosted in the middle of New York city by a 90-pound suburban housewife who screeched that he was "polluting her air space".

He says he might have been a lot more sympathetic if they hadn't been standing at a traffic light in Times Square surrounded by belching buses and wheezing taxis.

The Defense de Fumer signs are going up overseas as well. You know the old stereotype of the Parisian boulvardier, sitting at a cafe with a glass of wine in his hand and a smouldering Gauloise hanging off his lips? Well, you can scratch the Gauloise. Earlier this year the French parliament passed a law prohibiting smoking in all public places, including schools and public transport, except for designated areas. It also banned all tobacco advertising in the country.

Smokers aren't happy about the frontal assault on their cherished addiction, but their protests don't amount to much more that a few feeble emphysematic gasps. After all, you'd have to have the I.Q. of a cigarette holder to argue that smoking is a good thing. Lung cancer, liver cancer, heart disease, fetal damage ... the facts are in, folks. If somebody invented smoking tomorrow, we'd throw him in jail with Manual Noriega and all the other drug dealers.

That's why smokers don't say much.

But boy, if my old man was around he'd have plenty to say. He smoked two packs a day for as long as I can remember.

Right up until the heart attack.

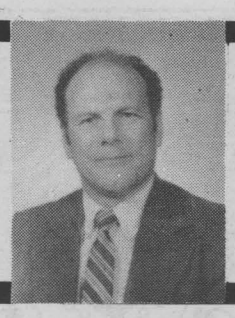
"YOU NEVER REGRET A DEAL AT CORNETT"



CHRISTIANITY ALIVE

By Bob Burgess, Pastor
New Life Covenant Church
(A Spirit-Filled New Testament Church)

Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.

Take my yoke upon you and learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

For my yoke is easy and my burden is light.

The above verses are taken from Matthew 11, verses 28, 29 & 30 and represent the Gospel of Jesus Christ in a nutshell.

The verses start out with an invitation to anyone and everyone in which Jesus simply says to "come unto Him". The simple Gospel truth is that God loves you, He sent His son to die and redeem you and by this simple and yet very profound statement, Jesus is openly telling the world and everyone it contains that they can come to Him. Notice that Jesus did not say to come to this Church or to this doctrine or to this set of rules, but to Him alone. But some might ask, "Can little old me dare to come to God myself?" "Don't I need someone to be my intercessor or my go-between to get to God?" The answer is NO, you don't need anyone, anything or any church to act for you in anyway, because of Christ's sacrifice on the cross, you, yourself can come to God. That's the reason Jesus came and died to make a way, bridge the gap between God and man and we can freely come to God to receive what we need.

The rest of the verses talk about being burdened and heavy laden. We are living in a day of great stress in every circle of life and many are burdened, but Jesus' invitation is still the same to "come unto me." Why don't you this day open your heart to Jesus and "come unto Him" and allow Him to carry your burdens and He promises to give you rest.

The last verse talks about "God's yoke being easy," what are the Scriptures saying? Simply this, that the Gospel of God's love for you is easy and if you will open your life today to God, He will take away your burden and give you His peace which is an easy burden indeed. Come unto Jesus and let Him lift your burden and become your saviour.

As always, remember God loves you, He really, really does.

Thoughts to Grow On

1) Witnessing is not just something a Christian says, but what he is.

2) God gives His very best to those who leave the choice with Him.

3) A bad habit is like a comfortable bed: easy to get into but difficult to get out of.

chocolate

Few people dislike chocolate. In fact, for many, chocolate is a passion. Sometimes this passion runs so deep that people actually become obsessed with chocolate. They are referred to as chocoholics.

Chocoholics are easy to spot: They are on a first-name basis with the local chocolatier; there are chocolate bar wrappers strewn about their car's interior; late at night you can see them staring into bakery windows and they always have some type of chocolate in their pockets.

Chocoholics have a favorite time of celebration, and it's not Christmas or Thanksgiving, it's American Chocolate Week. Every March (this year, March 3-12) chocoholics take pride in their obsession. They stop eating chocolate in secret, and declare, "I'm proud to be a chocoholic!"

The recipes below can be followed by chocoholics in need of a fix or merely in honor of American Chocolate Week. They are reproduced from A Piece of Cake by Susan G. Purdy (Macmillan).

CRAZY MIXED-UP CHOCOLATE CAKE

- Advance preparation: Cake can be baked ahead, wrapped airtight, and frozen.
- Special equipment: one sheet pan 13 x 9 x 1½ inches, mixing spoon, sifter.
- Baking time: 30 to 35 minutes at 350° F (175°C).
- Quantity: 5 cups batter, one sheet cake 13 x 9 inches (serves 20).
- Pan preparation: Note: Although the pan is not greased the cake pieces are easily removed when the cake is cut and served from the pan.

3 cups unsifted all-purpose flour (15 ounces; 425 g)
½ cup unsweetened cocoa, Hershey's or Baker's, preferably
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups granulated sugar (14 ounces; 400 g)
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 tablespoons white or cider vinegar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
⅔ cup vegetable oil
2 cups lukewarm water

1. Position rack in center of oven. Preheat oven to 350°F (175°C).

2. Set the sifter in the baking pan. Into the sifter put the flour, cocoa, salt, sugar, and baking soda. Sift everything into the ungreased baking pan. (If you are really rushed, forget the sifter, just combine the ingredients and stir them together.)

Make 3 depressions in the dry mixture. Into one put the vinegar, in another the vanilla, and in the third, the oil. Pour the water over all then stir gently with a spoon. Be sure to cover the entire pan bottom and go into the corners so no pockets of dry ingredients remain unmixed. Stir until batter looks creamy and smooth. Wipe off the edges of the pan.

3. Place the pan in the preheated oven and bake for 30 to 35 minutes, until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean and the cake feels lightly springy to the touch. Cool completely in the pan set on a wire rack. Cut into squares and serve from the pan. If you wish, you can ice the top or dust it lightly with a sifting of confectioners' sugar or cocoa.

H. GORDON GREEN

When a judge in northern New York thought he had a streaker before him recently the accused man explained that he belonged to the Polar Bear Club, and that to keep his membership in good standing he would frequently cut a hole through the ice of the lake in front of his place before dunking himself. And having survived that he would then run up the beach to the warmth of his cottage as briskly as possible.

"But why wouldn't you wear a bathing suit?" his Honour wanted to know.

"Because it was awful cold that morning," the man said. "And I figured that having a bathing suit froze stiff to your hide might be even worse than diving through a hole in the ice."

Case dismissed. Proving that streaking can still make the news, but only when it is sufficiently different.

A few years ago when streaking was still a popular sport, I angered a few of the pious people by telling them that streaking was not a modern sin. I reminded them that Lady Godiva did her famous streak nearly a thousand years ago, and it was over 2000 years ago when Archimedes, the Greek mathematician who had long been trying to discover the secret of why and how much a body loses weight when immersed in water, jumped out of his bathtub one day and ran down the streets of Syracuse yelling "I found it! I found it!"

But more recently one of my readers down in Windsor, Nova Scotia tells me that the honour of producing the first streaker probably has to go to the Jews, and in particular to a young man named Joseph.

Now if you went to Sunday School and learned your Bible stories as you should have, you will remember that after Joseph was tossed down the well by his jealous brethren he was rescued by a caravan and sold as a slave to an Egyptian named Potiphar. Just who Potiphar was in the bureaucracy isn't quite clear but it seems likely that he was spending so much time in the affairs of state that he was neglecting his wife somewhat, and said wife decided one day to seduce Joseph. "Come, lie with me!" she begged. (By the way, how did our dear little Sunday School teacher ever explain the full meaning of that invitation in those awesomely sexless days?)

Anyhow, Joe was only 17 at the time, and he was very handsome and the Old Testament tells us that when he first resisted the advances of Potiphar's neglected wife, she laid hold on his garment and it came off him and he went streaking out of the room still as undefiled as he was unclothed. Whereupon the spurned woman called to the guards that Joseph had tried to rape her, and here was his garment as proof. Which, according to the Bible, was quite enough proof to convince her husband who promptly threw Joe into jail.

My friend in Nova Scotia seems to doubt however that the Bible story is 100 percent correct and he advises me that I will find a much fuller account of the incident in the Koran.

And sure enough, in the Mohammedan account of this incident, the garment is reported to have ripped when it came off Joseph, and when Potiphar saw that the rip was in the tail end of the garment, he told his wife that she hadn't fooled him one bit and that instead of hollering rape, she ought to be ashamed of herself. Not one word of reproof to Joseph.

Apparently not nearly enough reproof to his wife either, because she continued to tempt the poor defenseless lad, and one of the footnotes with is included in Sale's translation of the Koran says that Joe did melt at least enough to sit on his mistress's knee, and that on one occasion he was even on the point of undressing when the ghost of his father Jacob suddenly appeared saying "Now! Now! Tut! Tut!" or something like that, and nibbled at Joseph's fingers. And the visitation so startled Joseph that according to the Koran "his lubricity passed out at the end of his fingers."

Whatever that means.

Well there now, you clergymen who are wondering what in the world you can do about all those empty pews which you face every Sunday! Why not try reading from the Koran once in a while? There's lots more where that came from.

M.P.P. Reports

NDP Government Faces Period of Decision

The 35th Ontario Legislature is back in session for its second sitting and the government has some serious choices to make. In this stressful economic period in Cornwall and in the province, the NDP government's first priority should be to help the people who are being hurt by the current recession.

The question is, can the NDP handle its responsibilities. Looking at the government's performance in the last House sitting may give us some idea.

Since the NDP formed the government last fall, the number of unemployed people in Ontario has increased by 183,000 according to Statistics Canada. In addition, more than 116,000 manufacturing jobs have been lost since. The NDP has been telling us that the lost jobs are primarily due to the effects of free trade or other federal economic policies. They should not be let off so easily.

In the last 6 months, the provincial government has done little to help stimulate investment, trade opportunities or job creation in the province or Cornwall riding. In fact, it has committed only $34 million to an anti-recession package, instead of the $41 million it had promised this winter. This represents less than one per cent of the total provincial budget.

On top of that, the government cancelled a major transportation initiative, allowed Varity Corp. to take its employees to Buffalo, subjected Consumer's Gas to a foreign take-over and eliminated hundreds of jobs in the construction industry because of foolish, retroactive rent control legislation that will eventually wind up costing us all a lot more, unless changes are made to it.

In addition to dealing with the recession in this House sitting, the government is also faced with following up on its many long-standing commitments such as introducing an auto-insurance plan and a strategy to deal with the garbage crisis facing almost every community in Ontario, and Bob Rae must take a stand on Canada's future and make his position clear to everyone. The future of this country has to be one of the biggest issues facing us all today.

The NDP must begin the important task of setting its house in order, and it must take strides to tow Ontario out of its economic rut. This session is a chance for the government to show the Ontario electorate whether it's fit to govern.

A PUBLIC AWARENESS NOTICE

As owner-operators of professional Auto Collision Repair businesses in Cornwall, we wish to inform the public of the following information.

You have the right, should your vehicle be involved in an accident, to have the vehicle in question towed and repaired at the business of your choice.

Unfortunately during accidents, most people's emotions run high. They are looking for assistance and guidance during this confusing time.

Don't be misled into thinking that you do not have an option as to the repair facility. If you are aware of where you wish to have your vehicle repaired, tell the police officer and tow truck operator at the time. It is your right!

If you are not aware, upon contacting your insurance company, make your decision as to the place of repair regardless of where your vehicle was towed. It is your right!

We hope you are never involved in an accident, however, we all know that accidents do occur and we wish you to know your rights.

As the sun rises higher each day warming the remnants of winter, hundreds of Glengarians trickle home ... from Mexico ... from Jamaica ... from Florida ... from Myrtle Beach ... Too numerous to mention but easily recognizable ... mostly tanned, some burned - but all happy to have enjoyed a brief respite from winter.

Bon Voyage to Gillian Secord. By press time Gillian's parents, Barbara and Jim Secord and sister Katie have travelled to Toronto to see Gillian off to Belgium. As part of a student exchange program Gillian will join Julie Moreau at her home in Rochefort near the border of France. Plans for skiing in the south of France her first weekend sounds delightful.

Lancaster's Ecole St. Joseph and Knights of Columbus are pleased to announce that students Robert Pilon, Shannon McLeod and Eric Lacombe all received medals at the regional level of the Basketball Freethrow. Congratulations!

I know that many parents in the Lancaster area are extremely happy that there will be a good recreation program available this summer for children of ages 4 to 11 years. With Kim McRae at the helm - providing Creative Arts - sports activities - Lip syncs - drama, etc. - the children can look forward to exciting times during those lazy, hazy days of summer! Parents interested in information about Summer Day Camp in Lancaster or for early registration for the summer/91 program call Kim McRae at 374-2698 after 6 pm.

'Til the loveliest season - spring. Enjoy yourself this week, and do call with your news.

To Go or Not To Go

Lisa Cox

Call it what you want - materialistic, unpatriotic or just plain thrifty. The subject of cross-border shopping is not only a common one but a controversial one as well. In our border city of Cornwall, opinions differ greatly on whether this type of shopping is appropriate or whether it is aiding in the economic downfall of our country. In spite of this, no one can dispute the fact that there are hundreds of Canadians rushing over the border every day to spend their hard earned dollars.

Every time a Canadian travels to the States, potential business is lost for area merchants. Sales are reduced, income is reduced and ultimately, the number of employees is reduced as well. Is this an indication that our self-serving government has created a self-serving society? Apparently so, although some would call it survival.

By ignoring the plight of area merchants, we are merely following in the footsteps of our government who ignores the plight of the Canadian consumer. But has anyone given us a choice? The advent of the G.S.T. resulted in an increase in cross-border shopping, as did the presence of higher Canadian prices for identical American products. Gasoline in our area remains 10 cents higher than in other parts of Ontario. The logical option is to go stateside.

So next time you think about going across the border to shop, think about the G.S.T., the price of gas and the plight of area merchants. More importantly though, think about getting a full tank of gas to survive the hour long wait on the bridge while you wonder about what the inquiring minds want to know.

Inspection checklist for maintenance and repair

Some handy hints for homeowners and homebuyers on giving a house a quick checkup.

(NC)—Diagnosing House Problems. A house is the most expensive investment most Canadians will make. To keep it from becoming even more expensive means giving it a regular checkup. It's a lot easier to spend 50 cents now on a new washer to fix that leaky shower head—before water soaks into the framework and turns into a torrent of repair bills.

This little guide will help you discover the symptoms and causes of common house problems. Although you may need a professional to help you uncover some of the hidden problems, anyone can make a thorough and quick examination. So roll up you sleeves, grab a flashlight and head for the basement.

Start in the basement. You can usually learn more about the condition of a house from the basement. A lot of problems start here and ripple their way up.

Foundation Walls

•Cracks in the wall are serious only if they are large and leak water. Small cracks are okay; they appear because concrete shrinks as it cures.

•Water stains are one of the telltale signs that water is seeping through the foundation. Damp spots, crumbling mortar, and white powdery deposits also betray the presence of water.

Structural Framework

•Twisted or sagging beams along the basement ceiling change the house's structure—and that means cracks in the walls, warped floors and even windows that stick. The most important part of your framework is the beam that runs down the centre of the basement ceiling. Use a builder's level to see if it is straight and level.

•Mold, fungus or rotted timbers weaken the house's foundation. If you suspect problems, poke the wood with a knife or screwdriver to see if there are any soft spots. Rotting wood is usually the result of leaking water or poor ventilation.

Electrical Wiring

•Exposed or bare wire in the basement will give you an idea of how good the wiring is in the rest of the house. If the insulation around the wiring is crumbling, the wires are exposed or bare, or wires have been connected by simply twisting them together, it's time to call an electrician.

•Blown fuses or circuit breaker shut-off require an electrician. The house is using too much electricity for the wiring to handle. If a fuse blows as soon as you replace it, there's a short somewhere. Unplug all the appliances and put in a new fuse. If the fuse blows, call an electrician. If it doesn't, try plugging in one appliance at a time to see which causes the problem.

Plumbing

•Leaks require immediate repair. Water can rot cupboards and floor boards.

•Rust stains around pipe joints or low water pressure probably mean that a plumber should have a look.

Floors

•Sagging or warped floors are usually signs that the supports under the floor aren't good enough. In some houses, a load bearing wall may have been removed from the floor below. In newer, houses, it may simply be that the house is settling.

•Squeaking floors aren't a structural or safety problem. They're just annoying. The squeaks are usually the result of poor nailing.

Walls

•Cracks on the interior side of outside walls can lead to serious damage. Rotted wood siding, stained metal or vinyl surfaces and crumbling mortar may be caused by moisture from the inside of the house creeping through cracks in the wall or around windows.

Ceilings

•Bulging, warped or sloped ceilings may mean that the floors above are bulging, warped or sloped.

•Stains usually mean that water is seeping onto the ceiling. Leaking pipes and poor sealing around sinks and bathtubs are the common causes.

Kitchen and bathroom

•Damaged ceilings, floors or walls are the typical problems because these rooms generate so much moisture. The damage can be severe if moisture penetrates the framework.

•Frosted windows or sweating toilets mean that you don't have enough ventilation. Opening a window or using a dehumidifier will help for the short term, but you'll have to install an exhaust fan.

Attic

•Water stains tell you that the roof leaks. Water soaks the insulation, making it less effective, and can stain ceilings below.

Other Things to Check

•Condensation is becoming a common problem. Because of heating costs, many people mistakenly believe that houses should be sealed tightly—so fresh air can't get in to dry up moisture. Misty windows and damp spots on walls and ceilings mean too much moisture and can lead to serious and expensive structural damage.

•Insects and rodents are a nuisance and a potential health hazard, but they can also damage a house. Sawdust around structural beams may indicate termites. If you think wood is infested, poke around with a knife or screwdriver. Infested wood is spongy or almost hollow. If you discover infestation, call an exterminator. Holes, frayed insulation on electrical wire and leaking pipes may also mean that you are sharing your home with rats, mice or squirrels.

CONCERNED ABOUT BACTERIA LEVELS IN YOUR HOME OR OFFICE? YOU SHOULD BE!

Studies now indicate that indoor pollution levels can far exceed that of outdoor pollution. The greatest concentration of indoor contaminates are found in carpets, upholstered furniture, drapes, mattresses, as well as high levels in air duct systems.

These contaminates which thrive better in humid climates, come in the forms of fungi, moulds, bacteria and mites.

HOW CAN STEAMATIC HELP?

Thanks to Steamatic's continued research in the field of indoor air quality, a microbiologist's tests now confirm that the Steamatic patented cleaning process can remove an average of:

92% of contaminates from carpets,
96% from upholstered furniture,
and 85% of airborne contaminates after air duct cleaning (studies available upon request).

This is a level of quality in cleaning that can be achieved only by the Steamatic process. So now Steamatic offers you a choice: you can call us and use a proven standard of excellence which has not been equalled, or you can hunt for the 3 or 4 room special. But please ask yourself... who is the most qualified to provide you with a cleaner, healthier indoor environment?
